Mr. Burt: There are currently 15 staff employed exclusively to advise on the application of equal opportunities at an annual cost of approximately £341,000. In addition, there are a number of staff who provide such advice as part of their wider duties, for example line mangers, personnel officers, local equal opportunity officers and harassment advisers. Information on the number of such people is not held centrally.

Benefits Agency

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State of Social Security what is the breakdown by age of callers to Benefits Agency offices. [14580]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Housing Benefit (Domestic Violence)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the contents of the further representations he has received from Welsh Women's Aid in relation to the guidelines to local authorities with respect to housing benefit entitlement for women leaving home because of the threat of domestic violence; and if he will make a statement. [13844]

Mr. Roger Evans: No further representations have been received from Welsh Women's Aid since its letter of 24 October 1996 to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. However, departmental officials have exchanged correspondence with Welsh Women's Aid. I am advised that the proposed revised guidance accurately reflects current regulations.

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants have been refused housing benefit and council tax benefit following the introduction of the habitual residence test for the 1995–96 financial year. [15218]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available. However, the figures are currently being processed and will be published in the "Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit Summary Statistics—Update Number 2" in March 1997.

A copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the costs to local authorities of administering the habitual residence test in respect of housing benefit and council tax benefit claims. [15219]

Mr. Evans: The estimated cost to local authorities of administering the habitual residence test in respect of housing benefit and council tax benefit claims for 1995–96 is £0.7 million.

Disabled People (Income Support)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many disabled people were receiving income support in May 1992; and what change there has been in the number in each subsequent year. [14077]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested as there is no specific information available on the number of people with disabilities who receive income support.

However, information on the number of people who receive the disability or higher pensioner premium, other than those who qualify because they are aged 80 or over, as part of their income support, is in the table.

Date	Income support claimants in receipt of the disability premium	Income support claimants aged 60–79 in receipt of the higher pensioner premium	Total
May 1992	425,000	190,000	614,000
May 1993	527,000	249,000	776,000
May 1994	618,000	296,000	914,000
May 1995	739,000	342,000	1,081,000
February 1996	769,000	374,000	1,143,000

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand and totals may not sum.
2. Sample size is 5 per cent.
3. The disability premium is awarded to those people aged under 60 who receive disability living allowance, attendance allowance, severe disablement allowance, or long-term incapacity benefit. The premium is also paid to people who have been incapable of work for at least 364 days.
4. The higher pensioner premium is awarded to those people aged between 60 and 79 who receive disability living allowance, attendance allowance, severe disablement allowance, or long-term incapacity benefit. The premium is also paid to people who were in receipt of the disability premium within eight weeks of their 60th birthday, and have been in receipt of income support continuously since then.

All Work Test

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the all work test for incapacity benefit; what communication he has had with doctors about complaints from disabled people concerning the test; what plans he has for changes to the test; and if he will make a statement. [14078]

Mr. Burt: A number of representations from hon. Members and the public about matters relating to the all work test for incapacity benefit have been received. In addition departmental officials maintain regular contact with professional bodies representing general practitioners.

The number of complaints from people claiming incapacity benefit who are required to undergo a medical examination represents less than 1 per cent. of claimants examined. The Benefits Agency medical services have well-publicised procedures in place to investigate complaints speedily and to give the complainant a full response.

We are continuing to monitor the operation of the test to ensure that it is meeting its objective of targeting the benefit on those medically incapable of work. We have recently introduced some minor amendments to the regulations which will improve its application and assist consistency in decision making.

Benefits in Kind

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each of the last seven years, the extensions of the application of employers' national insurance contributions to benefits in kind designed to eliminate the avoidance of national insurance contributions on bonuses and other one-off benefits in kind; if he will give his estimate of the savings accruing from each measure; and if he will make a statement. [13332]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The measures introduced in December 1996 to prevent national insurance contribution—NIC—avoidance by paying employees in their own company's shares and share options were announced in my written answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 715–16, to my hon. Friend the Member for Chingford (Mr. Duncan Smith).

The following measures to combat NIC avoidance were introduced prior to December 1996.

In 1991 payments by way of a wide range of financial instruments such as shares, other than own company shares, gilts and insurance policies became subject to NICs.

In 1993 payments by way of commodities capable of being sold on a recognised investment exchange or the London bullion market such as precious metals and gold bullion and vouchers for these commodities became subject to NICs.

In 1994 payments by way of alcoholic liquors on which no UK duty had been paid, gemstones and any vouchers for these assets became subject to NICs.

In 1995 payment by way of assets for which trading arrangements exist, vouchers for those assets and vouchers which are themselves the subject of trading arrangements became subject to NICs.

Employers are not required to identify bonuses or other one-off payments. The behavioural effects of measures against NICs avoidance, particularly those aimed at a wide range of asset-based avoidance, make precise long-term estimates of savings unreliable.

The Inland Revenue estimates, in respect of the changes made in December 1996 specifically related to own-company shares, that the annual savings would amount to about £30 million.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14552]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 6 February 1997]: There have been no instances of the Department's computer systems being illegally accessed by computer hackers.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14553]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The information is in the table. There have been no recorded cases of computer hacking into the Department's systems.

Calendar year	Fraud	Theft	Thefts involving chips
1995	34	247	65
1994	32	143	1

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the targets used by the Benefits Agency medical services in respect of (a) medical advice, (b) scrutiny, (c) assessment, (d) examination and (e) complaints for each of the disability benefits. [14404]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 10 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the targets used by the Benefits Agency Medical Service in respect of (a) medical advice, (b) scrutiny, (c) assessment, (d) examination and (e) complaints for each of the disability benefits.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is shown in the enclosed tables. All targets are expressed in working days.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance/Attendance Allowance Targets

Each Medical Services Centre has a Service Level Agreement with the local Disability Benefit Centre. Targets are negotiated and agreed to take account of local circumstances.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list the main elements in the running costs of the Benefits Agency medical services in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [14405]

(2) if he will list the component parts of the Benefits Agency medical services and medical evidence budgets and the proportions of the local social security budget they represent; [14406]

(3) what has been the level of spending in the current year to date on the (a) Benefits Agency medical services and (b) medical evidence budgets relative to the planned provision. [14407]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 10 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the main elements in the running costs of the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS) in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97; if he will list the component parts of the BAMS and Medical Evidence budgets and the proportions of the local social security budget they represent; and what has been the level of spending in the current year to date on the (a) BAMS and (b) Medical Evidence budgets relative to the planned provision.

The main elements in the running costs of the BAMS for each year are staffing and medical evidence.

The BAMS budget consists of Salaries and Non-staff Costs. The Medical Evidence Budget consists of Doctors Fees and expenses, Medical Report Fees, Customer Expenses, and Medical Examination Incidentals.

For 1996–97, the BAMS budget is 4.8% of the budget allocated to the Area Directorates, and the Medical evidence budget is 4.0%.

	Actual expenditure £	Planned expenditure £
Medical evidence	39,064,275	35,594,035

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefit Payment Security Cards

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what representations he received from (a) Post Office Counters and (b) trades unions representing Post Office and Benefits Agency staff concerning the introduction of the benefit payment security cards; and if he will place copies of such representations in the Library; [14795]

(2) for what reasons he introduced the payment security card for certain categories of benefit claimants; in what parts of the United Kingdom the cards were issued; what was the cost of introducing the cards; what assessment he has made of the extent to which the cards assisted in reducing benefit fraud; for what reasons payment security cards are no longer acceptable as valid proof of identity when cashing benefit cheques; and if he will make a statement. [14794]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mrs. Ann Clwyd, dated 11 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the Payment Security Card.

In response to Question 14794, the Payment Security Card was introduced by the Employment Service for unemployed clients who lived in areas which experienced significant girocheque losses. It was introduced as a security precaution to reduce the amount of girocheque fraud and the number of girocheques reported as not received. The card was originally piloted in the West Midlands region in September 1993 and a decision was made to extend its use in July 1995. The cards were issued in 272 Jobcentres located throughout the country. Please see Annex 1 for a list of those Jobcentres. The cost of introducing the card was £225,000 including the manufacture and distribution of the cards to Jobcentres and associated publicity material for Jobcentres and Post Offices.

The card was initially successful. An evaluation showed that the number of girocheques reported as not received fell by around 45% and the extent of girocheque fraud fell by 70%. However, the effects of the card diminished over time and some clients experienced difficulties when they lost their cards. The card was in any event intended as a short term measure prior to the planned introduction of the Benefits Agency's Payment Card.

Responsibility for benefit payments to unemployed people transferred to the Benefits Agency in October 1996 with the introduction of Jobseeker's Allowance. For a number of operational and technical reasons, the Payment Security Card could not be included in the Jobseeker's Allowance process. The Benefits Agency's new Payment Card is currently being rolled out to benefit recipients and will eventually include clients receiving Jobseeker's Allowance. This will become the secure means of payment which replaces girocheques altogether. Therefore, no new clients have been issued with a Payment Security Card since the introduction of Jobseeker's Allowance in October 1996. Clients who still held a Payment Security Card were notified in writing during January 1997 that the card would not be accepted by the Post Office from 3 February 1997.

The notification also gave details of the other types of identity which are acceptable to the Post Office when cashing girocheques. Posters have also been displayed in Jobcentres and Post Offices.

In response to Question 14795 representations were received from Trade Unions representing Employment Service staff in November 1993. They asked for details of the terms of reference and timings of the pilot of the Payment Security Card in the West Midlands region. The Trade Union Side were kept informed when it was decided to extend the use of the card in July 1995. The introduction of the Payment Security Card was negotiated with Post Office Counters Ltd. via the Employment Service's contractual partner, Girobank plc. There were no representations to Employment Service from Trade Unions representing Post Office staff. I have made arrangements for copies of the representations made by the Trade Unions representing Employment Service staff to be made available in the House of Commons library

I hope this is helpful.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT

Railcards (Disabled People)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what consultations he has had with the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee concerning acceptance of railcards held by disabled people by automatic ticket machines; [15190]

(2) if he will make it his policy to seek to ensure that automatic ticket machines have facilities for accepting railcards held by disabled people. [15191]

Mr. Bowis: The Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee has discussed this issue in its rail working group. Representatives of the Department and the Office of the Rail Regulator were present at those discussions.

The Department will be pursuing this with the Office of the Rail Regulator in the context of the Rail Regulator's code of practice on meeting the needs of disabled passengers.

Parking

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review the law relating to parking near bus stops. [15351]

Mr. Watts: I have no plans to do so. The Government regard efficient enforcement of the existing law as more likely to improve compliance with waiting restrictions at bus stops than changes to the law.

British Railways Board

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his current estimate of the out-turn of the British Railways Board for 1996–97. [15398]

Mr. Watts: I hope to announce shortly the British Railways Board external finance limit consistent with my latest estimate of its out-turn.

Environmental Impact Directive

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what environmental impact assessment study has been prepared for the Newbury bypass under the provisions of the EC environmental impact directive; what information he has received in respect of the petition made to the European Parliament Petitions Committee concerning the environmental implications of this road project; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's monitoring of environmentally based petitions presented to the European Parliament on matters arising in the United Kingdom. [15434]

Mr. Watts: The Government have taken the view consistently that directive 85/337/EEC on environmental impact assessment does not apply to projects such as the Newbury bypass, for which the formal development consent procedure was initiated before the directive came into force on 3 July 1988. In an announcement on 20 October 1995, the European Commission made it clear that it agreed with that view. The bypass scheme was, however, assessed carefully for its environmental effects in accordance with the Department of Transport's manual of environmental appraisal, which was the relevant guidance at the time.

The Government have been informed by the President of the European Parliament about the petition made to the Parliament's Petitions Committee about the bypass.

The Government are not informed routinely by the European Parliament of the content of petitions that it has received. It is for the European Parliament itself to decide how to handle such petitions.

Vehicle Document Fraud

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the subject of reforming the current vehicle licensing and registration system to (a) prevent fraud and (b) enable (i) stolen vehicles and (ii) owners and drivers to be traced. [15421]

Mr. Bowis: My Department maintains close contacts with representatives of the motor, finance, leasing, insurance and salvage industries and with the police with a view to developing ways in which the vehicle registration system can be better adapted to deter and detect vehicle fraud and other related crime.

Following wide consultation we shall shortly be introducing new arrangements for recording the transfer of vehicles and for the annual notification of unlicensed off-road vehicles. These measures will help to improve the accuracy of the vehicle record and facilitate the tracing of drivers and vehicles for enforcement purposes.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated of foreign initiatives on vehicle title and document fraud; and with what result. [15420]

Mr. Bowis: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency maintains a register of vehicle keepers as opposed to owners because it is the registered keeper with whom the agency and police are normally concerned for law enforcement, revenue collection and road safety purposes.

Accordingly, while the agency maintains close links with a number of foreign registration authorities, it has not commissioned specific research into initiatives on vehicle title and document fraud.

Rail Companies (Profits)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his current estimate of profits by companies previously owned by British Rail to be paid into public funds in 1996–97. [15403]

Mr. Watts: Up to 11 February 1997, dividends paid into public funds in 1996–97 in respect of the Secretary of State's residual holding of Railtrack shares amounted to £865,335.96.

Railways (Bus Services)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many scheduled railway services were substituted by bus services during the week ended 18 January; for what reasons; and what penalty payments have been made by operators under their agreements with the franchising director. [15350]

Mr. Watts: The information is not available in the form requested. The Office of Passenger Rail Franchising monitors cancellations for franchised services. If an operator cancels more than a set threshold, that is a breach of the franchise agreement and enforcement action may follow. Some operators are also subject to a performance regime with Opraf and are penalised for each cancellation. Bus substitutions as a result of planned engineering work are not usually subject to penalty payments.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of heavy goods vehicles on roads without an operator's licence vehicle disc but operating under the margin arrangement. [15380]

Mr. Bowis: It is impossible to make any accurate estimate of the number of vehicles operated under the margin arrangements. Vehicles used by any licensed operator within their total authorisation limit for up to one calendar month do not need to be specified and thus do not need to carry a disc.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many heavy goods vehicles have been found to be operating without proper authorisation under the Goods Vehicle Operator Licensing Regulations during roadside checks in 1995 and 1996. [15381]

Mr. Bowis: We have no separate figures for heavy goods vehicles found to be operating without a valid operator's licence.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many goods vehicle operators were successfully prosecuted in 1995 and 1996 for operating vehicles without authorisation under the Goods Vehicle Operator Licensing Regulations. [15382]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Andrew Smith, dated 12 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many goods vehicle operators have been successfully prosecuted in 1995 and 1996 for operating vehicles without authorisation under the Goods Vehicle Operator Licensing Regulations.

Information about successful prosecutions against vehicle operators for the specific offence of unauthorised use is not currently available. The extent of illegal operations was quantified in a report published in April 1996, of the roadside survey of illegal operators carried out by the Vehicle Inspectorate on behalf of the Department of Transport in October 1995. This indicated that illegal operators accounted for less than 2% of all miles travelled by goods vehicles.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to ensure that the operator licensing details of heavy goods vehicles are ascertained at roadside enforcement checks. [15383]

Mr. Bowis: It is one of a number of checks carried out by traffic examiners at each roadside vehicle check, and is followed up as part of routine enforcement action where necessary.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has completed his consideration of proposals to impound illegally operated and dangerous heavy goods vehicles as indicated in his response to the Transport Committee's Fifth report in November 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15384]

Mr. Bowis: We are still working on plans for a possible scheme for the impounding of illegally operated and dangerous heavy goods vehicles.

DEFENCE

Land Mines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each of the supplier companies to his Department for (a) anti-personnel mines and (b) anti-tank/armoured vehicle mines since 1979; and if he will list the countries to which these companies have exported mines since 1979. [13527]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Available records indicate that the following companies/organisations have, since 1979, met orders from my Department for:

(a) anti-personnel mines: Thorn-EMI, Royal Ordnance, the United States Department of Defence and Alliant Techsystems of the United States;

(b) anti-tank/armoured vehicle mines: Royal Ordnance, Hunting Engineering Ltd. Alliant Techsystems, the MLRS European Production Group, and GIAT Industries and SOFMA of France.

I understand that export licence records before 1991 are not readily available to the Department of Trade and Industry and could be researched only at disproportionate cost. An initial search by DTI of export licence records since 1991 has shown that anti-tank/armoured vehicle mine records are not immediately identifiable and I am advised that the research required to examine the records further could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost. It is clear from earlier research, however, that no mines considered to be anti-personnel mines at the time of export have been exported for over a decade. Records available in my own Department, which may not be definitive, indicate that mines considered at the time of export to fall into one or other of the two categories identified have been exported as follows:

(a) Anti-personnel mines: by Thorn-EMI to Nigeria in 1981;

(b) Anti-tank/armoured vehicle mines: by UK companies to two other countries in 1982 and 1991.

Detailed information on these cannot be provided, since its release would cause harm in terms of one or more of the defence, security, international relations and commercial confidence exemptions in the code of practice on access to Government information. These were the exemptions in the code referred to in my answer to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Spring) on 23 July 1996, Official Report, column 212.

I am not in a position to provide information regarding exports by non-UK companies.

Copex Internal Security Exhibition

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which company booked the Farnborough site for the Copex—contingency and operational procurement exhibition—internal security exhibition, between 30 September and 2 October; and if he will make a statement. [12562]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I understand that SBAC has entered into a contractual arrangement with British-American Promotions Ltd., and that the Copex exhibition will take place in September 1997.

Public Records (Disclosure)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made in reviewing the files with Public Record Office class marks ES1/653 and ES1/654 with a view to opening them. [14387]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The review has been completed and the files are to be released to the Public Record Office.

Army Ranges (Dartmoor)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the advertised usage of Willsworthy range in the Dartmoor national park for live firing in the year ended December 1996, expressed by number of days; and how many days' firing took place. [15354]

Mr. Soames: The advertised usage of Willsworthy range in the Dartmoor national park for live firing in the year ending December 1996 expressed by number of days was 194. The number of days when firing actually took place was 109.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the advertised usage of Merrivale range in the Dartmoor national park for live firing in the year ended 1996, expressed by number of days; and how many days' firing took place. [15352]

Mr. Soames: The advertised usage of Merrivale range in the Dartmoor national park for live firing in the year ending December 1996 expressed by number of days was 121. The number of days when firing actually took place was 61.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the advertised usage of Okehampton range in the Dartmoor national park for live firing in the year ended 1996, expressed by number of days; and how many days' firing took place. [15353]

Mr. Soames: The advertised usage of Okehampton range in the Dartmoor national park for live firing in the year ending December 1996 expressed by number of days was 72. The number of days when firing actually took place was 36.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what method it is proposed to ensure that the contract for the replacement royal yacht is placed with a ship building yard within the United Kingdom: [15248]

Mr. Arbuthnot: On security grounds, the future royal yacht can only be designed and built in a British shipyard. An invitation to tender for construction of the vessel will be advertised in the MOD contracts bulletin in the usual way.

Rugby League

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what to steps are being taken to facilitate the playing of rugby league football in the Royal Navy. [14253]

Mr. Soames: Those personnel who wish to play are offered encouragement and advice, and facilities are made available to them. Should enough people show an interest, consideration will be given to making rugby league an approved sport.

HEALTH

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to evaluate the possible causes of the cluster of CJD and suspected CJD cases in Kent; and if he will make a statement. [15259]

Mr. Horam: The national Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease surveillance unit monitors the incidence of CJD throughout the United Kingdom, including the possibility of significant clusters of cases. Its analysis of the distribution of cases of CJD has never found any convincing evidence of clustering.

Elderly People (Winter Assistance)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he has taken to help the elderly during the winter months in each of the last three years; and at what cost. [15388]

Mr. Burns: The Department is the major contributor to "Keep Warm Keep Well" campaigns. A breakdown of costs for the past three years is shown in the table. In previous years, the Department of Social Security—lately the Benefits Agency—has made contributions; the total expenditure column is inclusive of its contribution.

	Total expenditure	DSS contribution
1995–96	578	125
1994–95	568	45
1993–94	510	60

PRIME MINISTER

EU Works Council Directive

Ms Quin: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the employment impact of the implementation by British companies of the EU works council directive agreed under the EU social chapter. [15020]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the speech I gave at the European Policy Forum in Brussels on the 4 February, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Refugees

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has taken to assess the additional costs to local government of concentrations of refugees seeking or having been granted asylum. [14963]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State for Health has established special grants to help local authorities meet the additional costs they face in respect of asylum-seeking families with children, and in respect of unaccompanied asylum-seeking children. He laid before Parliament yesterday a special grant report to establish a new special grant for adult asylum seekers who are not accompanied by children. Local authority social services departments must provide detailed information on costs when submitting claims for any of these grants.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his statement of 3 February, Official Report, columns 681 and 689, concerning special grants to localities most in need of assistance due to concentrations of refugees, what discussions he has had, or intends to have, with representatives of the areas concerned. [14956]

Sir Paul Beresford: Ministers from my Department and the Department of Health as well as officials from the Department of Health have met local authority representatives on a number of occasions in recent months to discuss funding for local authorities who are supporting asylum seekers.

Green Belt

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the size of the green belt in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987, (d) 1992 and (e) at the current date. [14691]

Sir Paul Beresford: We do not keep records of the size of the green belt on an annual basis. Figures are available for England for 1979, 1989 and 1993. In 1979, there were 7,125 sq km of green belt land. This more than doubled in 1989 to 15,485 sq km and reached 15,557 sq km in 1993.

Council Housing and Tax

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the levels of (a) uncollected rents from council properties, (b) uncollected council tax, (c) uncollected community charge, and (d) empty council homes in each London borough. [14693]

Sir Paul Beresford: The latest available information is as follows:

Itinerants and Trespassers

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 in cases involving itinerants and (a) Wealden district council, (b) Lincolnshire county council and (c) Wolverhampton borough; and what measures he proposes to make provisions in respect of itinerants and trespassers more effective. [15096]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Sections 77 to 79 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order 1994 give local authorities powers to evict unauthorised campers. The High Court quashed an eviction order by Wealden district council in 1995 because the local authority had failed first to make inquiries about the campers' housing and social needs. The court allowed Lincolnshire county council's eviction order to stand because the authority had made sufficient inquiries. In the Wolverhampton borough council case, the judge said that the 1994 Act powers were intended to offer a "robust and speedy" means of eviction, although local authorities should give careful consideration before exercising them. I believe that local authorities which use the powers responsibly; and in accordance with advice in my Department's circular 18/94, "Gipsy Sites Policy and Unauthorised Camping", should be able to evict successfully when it is in the public interest to do so. The Government have no plans to amend the legislation, but have commissioned research to establish good practice.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state his reasons and the precedents for top-slicing the costs of specific local government reorganisation from the general grant available to local authorities. [15011]

Sir Paul Beresford: The reorganisation transitional damping grant scheme for 1997–98 will damp those council tax increases directly attributable to reorganisation that come above a threshold of £52 at band D. Such increases are not the result of the reorganised authorities' spending decisions. They occur where the pattern of spend in the past has not followed the standard spending assessment. The scheme is transitional and will protect council tax payers from increases above the threshold while the reorganised authorities adapt to their new circumstances.

A similar scheme operated in 1996–97 and was also funded through a top-slice of revenue support grant. Since 1994–95, we have also paid SSA reduction grant to authorities whose SSA has been reduced by more than a certain threshold as a result of changes in the SSA methodology. The funds for this have been top-sliced from RSG each year.

We consulted on the 1997–98 reorganisation transitional damping scheme as part of the consultation on the 1997–98 provisional local government finance settlement. We took all representations into account before taking our final decisions.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations underpinned his policy as set out at paragraph 14 of the Government's response, to the House of Lords Select Committee report on freedom of access to information on the environment of 5 February, that the Government do not accept that information in a draft document should be withheld only if harm would result from its exposure. [15458]

Mr. Gummer: It is reasonable that access to information, in a draft document or another form, should wait completion of work so that analysis and interpretation can proceed unhindered. This is provided for in paragraph 4(d) of the Environmental Information Regulations 1992, and elaborated in paragraph 53 of the guidance.

Elderly People (Winter Assistance)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he has taken to help the elderly during the winter months in each of the last three years; and at what cost. [15389]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Our home energy efficiency scheme helps householders who are aged 60 or over, or who receive income-related benefits or certain disability allowances, to keep their homes more comfortable and energy efficient by providing grants for basic home insulation and energy advice. The following amounts in grant have been paid to householders claiming on grounds of age in each of the last three years:

1996–97 (to date): £27,074,000

In addition, we are providing funding for various energy saving trust programmes which may benefit elderly people. These include their pilot pensioners' energy plan to demonstrate how local authorities and private finance providers in partnership can help pensioners to make energy efficient improvements to their homes; the cavity wall insulation programme and the heating controls cash-back scheme. We are providing around £7 million for these programmes.

Waterways

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received preliminary reports from British Waterways and the Environment Agency examining individual waterways in response to the Government's conclusions to the review of British Waterways and agency navigation functions; and if he will make a statement. [15832]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: British Waterways and the Environment Agency have submitted a joint report following a series of regional reviews of the river navigations under their control. I have placed a copy of their report in the Library.

In the light of the regional reviews, BW and EA recommended further detailed studies. I have accordingly accepted the suggestion that BW and the agency undertake a detailed review of the division of responsibilities on the River Weaver. I have also invited BW to carry out a three-month study, in consultation with the agency, of the Great Ouse and the Nene to examine what it could do if it managed the navigation aspects of these two rivers. This study should cover, among other things, costs and benefits, environmental impacts and the views of all interested parties on such an arrangement.

The report concludes that relationships between the two organisations are good and that BW and the agency are already working well together in many areas. The reviews have identified a number of steps that can be taken to improve this collaboration further. I endorse the organisations' efforts to identify efficiency gains, ways of working more effectively and means of providing service improvements.

At the third annual inland navigation seminar on 4 December 1996, BW and the agency, together with the Broads Authority, created the Association of Inland Navigation Authorities. I support this initiative and look forward to it making a positive contribution across the range of navigation policy issues. I hope that BW and the EA will progress jointly their ideas to develop a national navigation strategy in consultation with the new association and the Inland Waterways Amenity Advisory Council.

Fire Services

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total element of standard spending assessments related to fire services in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what was the annual spending of fire authorities within the same period. [15250]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The information requested is in the table:

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Licence Fee Regulations

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement about the television licence fee regulations. [15562]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have today laid new consolidated television licence fee regulations before both Houses. These will:

(i) bring into effect the licence fees for the year commencing 1 April 1997, as announced on 18 December last year columns 591–92—the colour fee will be £91.50 and the black and white one will be £30.50;

(ii) extend coverage of a television licence to permit the installation and use of television in any mobile home, static or tourjng caravan, or other vehicle or vessel used by members of the household, subject to certain provisos; and

(iii) fulfil the Government's undertaking to stop sheltered housing schemes from being disqualified from the concessionary television licence arrangements simply because a small number of units within them have been purchased under the right-to-buy provisions of the Housing Act 1985.

The basic principle of the TV licensing system has always been that a TV licence is required for any place, vehicle or vessel in which TV is installed or used. The changes summarised in the following paragraph are designed to sustain the integrity and enforceability of the licensing system, to protect the BBC's income and to be fair and reasonable in applying the basic principle to the increasing use of television outside a household's main place of residence.

Hitherto, the regulations have permitted a household's TV licence to cover all the TV sets at one place, vehicle or vessel, but no sets elsewhere, except in the comparatively rare case where such sets are powered by their own internal batteries. The regulations I have laid today extend the coverage of a TV licence in a number of ways:

(a) A household with a licence for its main residence may also, under that licence, receive TV in a vehicle, touring caravan or vessel. None of these is commonly used as a residence for any substantial period of time. Households which do use them as their main residence will continue to need a TV licence.

(b) Similarly, any TV set in a mobile home or static caravan which is not in use as a main residence will not require a separate licence, provided that there is no simultaneous use there and at the household's main residence. This qualification reflects the fact that mobile homes and static caravans are more likely to be used for lengthy periods as a household's main place of residence. Use of television in other, fixed, second homes will continue to require a separate TV licence.

(c) Commercially operated caravan sites where caravans with TV are provided will continue to benefit from the concessionary hotel licence offered to establishments which provide units of overnight accommodation on a single site. The regulations extend this concession to units of entertainment, such as boxes at sports grounds or suites at conference centres.

The Government undertaking concerning the impact of the right-to-buy legislation on the concessionary television licence scheme—under which qualifying households pay only £5 for a TV licence—was made during the Commons Committee stage of the Broadcasting Act 1996, on 18 June 1996, Official Report,

749–51. The new regulations will enable residents of sheltered housing schemes which meet all the other qualifying criteria to benefit from the TV licence concession, provided that not more than 25 per cent. of the dwellings in the scheme have been purchased under the right-to-buy provisions.

The consolidated regulations will also incorporate other changes made last year, by separate amending regulations. These relate to deregulation of the previous requirements for TV dealers to register with the licensing authority and to hold a separate TV dealer demonstration licence and the introduction last August of a new cash instalment payment scheme aimed at making it easier for those on low incomes to pay the licence fee.

Tourism Strategy

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what response she has received to her Department's new strategy for tourism, "Success through Partnership". [15829]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: "Success through Partnership: A Strategy for Tourism" builds on the successful programme we have completed over the last two years, which has developed a closer working relationship than ever before between Government and industry. The recent report of the National Heritage Select Committee has helped to inform the development of this tourism strategy. The Government's strategy document has been warmly welcomed as a joint initiative with the industry.

The strategy provides a clear statement of our objectives for the tourism industry and an agenda for future action. It represents a true partnership and involves key players from central and local government, tourist boards, the industry, trade and professional bodies and consumer groups. All have been fully involved in preparing and taking forward the strategy and are committed to developing tourism as a high quality, profitable and sustainable activity to realise the growth potential of the industry and the associated social and cultural benefits for the nation.

The strategy covers six main areas:

- creating the right framework for success—raising the public profile and prestige of tourism;
- improving the quality of the tourism product;
- developing a world-class human resource;
- making marketing more effective—co-ordinating effort and pooling resources to optimise impact;
- improving information provision; and
- managing tourism demand and impacts—sustainable tourism that spreads the benefits and protects the environment that attracts tourists in the first place.

Copies of the document are available in the Libraries of the House.

Tourism (Suffolk and Norfolk)

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the impact of Government tourism policy on (a) Suffolk and (b) Norfolk since 1987. [12722]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Norfolk and Suffolk have benefited from significant growth in tourism in the UK in recent years. The number of employees in the British tourism industry grew by approximately 24 per cent. between March 1986 and March 1996. In 1995, earnings from tourism were £38 billion—a record in real terms—and signs are that 1996 will be even better. The UK is now fifth in the world in terms of tourism earnings. The UK's domestic tourism earnings were £22.7 billion in 1995. Figures for tourism spend in individual counties are not available. However, domestic tourism spend in the east of England region increased from £490 million in 1987 to £960 million in 1995 and overseas visitor income increased from £183 million in 1987 to £566 million in 1995. International passenger survey figures show that the number of visits by overseas visitors to Norfolk increased from 164,000 in 1994 to 176,000 in 1995, and those to Suffolk from 129,000 in 1994 to 142,000 in 1995. Government support for the industry is channelled through the British Tourist Authority and the English Tourist Board.

I am pleased to note that over £10.5 million of lottery funding has been awarded to Suffolk and Norfolk to date for projects to promote culture, heritage and the arts. Other Government programmes include a seven-year regeneration initiative launched last April in Lowestoft, which aims to improve and develop the local area, and also, to develop the tourism potential.

London is one of this country's main draws for overseas visitors, and one of the main aims of the Focus London campaign, which has received £7 million of public funding over three years, has been to promote London as a gateway to the rest of the country. The Government are committed to encouraging overseas visitors to travel to all parts of the country. In 1995, the British Tourist Authority's British travel centre in London gave help and advice on travelling outside the capital to almost half a million overseas visitors. These initiatives will boost tourism in the regions and greatly benefit the employment prospects and wealth of those living locally.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Judges (Directorships)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what steps are taken (a) at the time of their appointment and (b) subsequently, to ensure that his Department is informed of company directorships held by judges. [14379]

(2) how many full-time judges at each level within the judiciary hold company directorships; and what guidance his Department issues to judges about the circumstances in which a conflict of interest arising from such a position might arise. [14369]

Mr. Streeter: Full-time judges are advised before appointment that they should not hold commercial directorships during their service on the Bench, although some forms of non-commercial directorships may be acceptable. Subject to these general principles, each case is dealt with on its individual circumstances.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Kenya

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each of the last five years for which figures are available
(a) projects in Kenya which received aid and (b) the total amount of aid to Kenya; and if he will make a statement. [15226]

Dr. Liam Fox: The gross public expenditure to Kenya over the last five years has amounted to £166,493,000 broken down as follows:

1991–92	38,351
1992–93	37,514
1993–94	31,231
1994–95	30,214
1995–96	29,183

Major sectors of involvement have been, and continue to be, health and population, education, renewable natural resources, roads and small enterprise development.

Over the last two years, there has been major expenditure—over £1 million—on each of the following projects:

Primary education in-service project: £2.3 million

Moi university library: £2 million

Supplies project for HIV-AIDS prevention: £1.6 million

Essential drugs provision: £1.5 million

Emergency supply of essential drugs: £1.5 million

Molo-Litein roads upgrading: £1.5 million

K-Rep's Juhudi credit small scale:

Enterprise project: £1.5 million

Protected areas wildlife project: £1.4 million

Family planning services: £1.4 million

Contraceptive supply: £1.2 million

Tick-borne diseases research project: £1 million.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department is giving to Kenya to combat the effects of the water hyacinth in Lake Victoria; and if he will make a statement. [15228]

Dr. Fox: We are giving no direct assistance to Kenya to combat the effects of the water hyacinth in Lake Victoria. Assistance is, however, being provided by other donors, including the World bank and the European Union.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Tea Room (No Smoking Areas)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee (1) if he will consult hon. Members about the location of designated no smoking areas in the Members' Tea Room; and if he will make a statement; [15174]

(2) what consultation took place with hon. Members concerning the designation of no smoking areas in the Members' Tea Room; and if he will make a statement. [15175]

Sir Colin Shepherd: The Catering Committee keeps under constant review the policy regarding smoking in all Refreshment Department outlets, including, of course, in the Tea Room. In each of the last three years, hon. Members have had the opportunity to respond to the Refreshment Department's customer questionnaire, which welcomes comments on smoking policy. The results of the last survey were considered by the Committee at its meeting on 22 January. The Committee was encouraged by the fact that, based on the responses to the specific questions on smoking, the existing arrangements appear to have the support of a majority of respondents. Hon. Members may also make their views known throughout the year by using the comments books available in all outlets, which I read frequently.

TREASURY

Illegal Drug Use (Questions)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy as to when questions on statistics on illegal drug use are to be answered by (a) his Department, (b) the Department of Health, (c) the Home Office, (d) the Leader of the House and (e) other Departments. [14653]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 6 February 1997]: Ministerial responsibility varies according to the information sought and the availability of data, as follows:

(a) The Office for National Statistics collects and publishes information on all deaths registered in England and Wales and codes cause of death.

(b) The Department of Health deals with medical and health aspects of drug misuse, and compiles information on drug addicts in index form. Data are available on the age and sex of the addict, drug used, injecting behaviour and agency type, at regional health authority level, and at district health authority level. They are published on an annual basis.

The Department of Health also compiles a variety of aggregated data on problem drug misuse. The data cover England and are published twice a year.

(c) The Home Office collects and publishes information on persons notified as being addicted to opiates and cocaine and all drug-related deaths, as well as data on drug offences and drug seizures made by the police and by HM Customs and Excise. The Home Office also compiles data on drugs and criminal justice. They include details of offenders by age, sex, offence, drug involved, police force area, disposal and sentence, and are available by United Kingdom police force area. Data on drugs offenders have been collected centrally since 1967. Statistics on seizures are based on returns received directly from Customs and Excise and the police.

(d) HM Customs and Excise also collates information on types and weights of drugs seized at frontiers. The Department for Education and Employment's principal role is to disseminate advice and guidance on drug education and prevention to schools, youth workers, and teachers in further and higher education. It also supports many local groups and funds the training of teachers and community workers who are engaged in tackling the problems of drug abuse and has published several documents accordingly.

(e) Co-ordination of the Government's drug strategy is the responsibility of the Lord President.

Parliamentary Questions (Cost)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidelines exist for determining whether providing the answer to a parliamentary question would involve disproportionate cost; what steps are taken to ensure that officials do not avoid undertaking work on researching information for Ministers by wrongly claiming that the research would involve disproportionate cost; and what sanctions (a) have been and (b) could be imposed on officials in such circumstances. [15431]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Treasury Ministers aim to answer written parliamentary questions as fully as possible and in accordance with guidance on disproportionate cost. Ministers may decline to answer, in whole or in part, a written parliamentary question where the marginal cost of preparing the answer is likely to exceed the current advisory limit of £450. The decision to use this cost threshold rests with Ministers, who may decide that questions should be answered irrespective of cost.

I am not aware of any instances where officials have sought to make improper use of the threshold. If officials were to do so, this would be an internal matter for the Department concerned.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of people aged under 25 years are (a) in full-time employment, (b) in part-time employment, (c) in full-time education and (d) on Government-supported training schemes in (i) Yorkshire and Humberside and (ii) England, as at spring 1996. [14305]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dr. M. P. G. Pepper to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 12 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked the Director of the Office for National Statistics to reply to your recent Question on the proportion of people aged under 25 in employment, education and training in Yorkshire and Humberside and in England. The Director has asked me to reply in his absence.

In answering your Question, I have incorporated two improvements when compared with the Answer on 24 July 1996 in the Official Report column 547, and for this reason I am providing comparable data for 1991 through to 1996.

First: the information on numbers in employment, education and training relate to persons aged 16–24 and are expressed as a proportion of the corresponding age group rather than all persons aged under 25.

Secondly: the number in employment include some persons who are in full-time education. Separate details are given for those in full-time education with and without jobs.

The Answer in the attached tables is derived from the Labour Force Survey. However, participation in Government supported training schemes is known to be under-recorded in the Labour Force Survey compared with administrative sources. The employee figures in the tables therefore include a number who should otherwise be shown as on such schemes.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his letter of 3 April 1996 to the director general of the House Builders Federation constitutes Government policy on exemptions to the landfill tax; to what extent the policies in that statement were implemented in the Landfill Tax (Contaminated Land) Order 1996; and if he will make a statement. [13595]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 30 January 1997]: I assume that the letter to which my hon. Friend refers is the one written by my right hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) when he was Paymaster General. In paragraph 3 of the letter, my right hon. Friend said

> "We now intend to provide the exemption for waste from the clearance of historically contaminated land where clearance of all or part of the contamination is necessary to allow the land to be used for the intended purpose when the development or work on the land is complete. The exemption will apply to waste arising from the reclamation of the land, but current polluters will not be able to benefit from it."

He went on to say in paragraph 5

> "You suggest that the exemption should be widened to cover clay and other material that has to be removed from high density urban infill sites. I should first of all say that if a site is historically contaminated it is intended that all of the waste removed and disposed of to landfill will be exempt under our proposed exemption, not just that which is contaminated."

This letter sets our Government policy that, to qualify for the exemption, such wastes would need to arise from a reclamation which facilitates development of the land and removes the potential for the pollutants to cause harm. The removal of the pollutants must be necessary for the development to proceed and any activity that gave rise to the pollutants must have ceased. Where these criteria are met, then all wastes, whether polluted or not, arising from the reclamation would qualify for the exemption. This policy is reflected in the Landfill Tax (Contaminated Land) Order 1996. Copies of the letter have been placed in the Library.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14539]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The amount spent by my departments on external advice, including legal advice, in relation to giving evidence to the Scott inquiry and the preparation of the Government's response to it, is £83,740. Of this figure, the cost of legal advice amounted to £74,080, which was the cost to Customs and Excise of external legal advice obtained from two firms of solicitors, Lewis Silkin and Clifford Chance, including the cost of legal advice to counsel required to provide evidence to the inquiry in relation to the Customs prosecutions being examined. The balance of the figure was incurred by the Treasury for general consultancy services of a non-legal nature.

Pension Contributions (Tax Relief)

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals would be affected if relief for pension contributions were to be limited for income tax purposes to the standard rate; and what would be the total extra tax raised. [14869]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 10 February 1997]: The estimated full year yield of restricting income tax relief for pension contributions to the basic rate at 1997–98 income levels would be about £880 million. Some 2 million taxpayers would be affected. This is based on a projection of the 1994 survey of personal incomes and other survey data in line with the assumptions in the Budget forecast. It does not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from such a change.

National Savings

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, column 565, what was the date on which the decision was made to audit and certify all National Savings accounts. [15254]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The decision to audit and certify all national savings product accounts was taken on 20 May 1994.

German Unemployment Level

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the January rise in German unemployment on (a) progress towards European convergence and (b) United Kingdom growth prospects. [15364]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 11 February 1997]: German claimant unemployment rose 510,000 to 4,658,000 in January 1997. On a seasonally adjusted basis, it rose 160,000 to 4,317,000. The Government take the view that it is unlikely, although not impossible, that there will be sufficient convergence for economic and monetary union to proceed safely on 1 January 1999. The UK recovery is broadly based and growth is forecast to continue to be faster than in our major European competitors.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bread (Labelling)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what requirements are placed upon food manufacturers regarding the labelling of iron content of bread; and if he will make a statement. [14995]

Mrs. Browning: If the flour used in bread making contains no added ingredients other than the statutorily required nutrients such as iron, then the addition of these nutrients need not be declared in the ingredients list of pre-packed bread. If any other ingredient is added to the flour then all the ingredients added to the flour, including the nutrients such as iron, must be declared in the ingredients list of pre-packed bread.

These labelling rules do not apply to non pre-packed bread.

Habitat Depletion and Contamination

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he has taken to reduce the contamination of the habitats of birds and wild mammals from herbicides and pesticides; what studies have been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department into the effects on habitats of pesticides and herbicides; and what assessment he has made of the impact of habitat depletion and contamination on wild birds in the United Kingdom. [15064]

Mrs. Browning: The direct impact of each pesticide product on birds and wild mammals is assessed before an approval for that product is granted. Advice on the protection of wildlife and their habitats is provided particularly through the Code of Practice on the Safe Use of Pesticides on Farms and Holdings.

Details of current Government research were provided in my reply today and by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 17 December 1996, Official Report, column 544, to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell). The results of this research will be evaluated when available.

Song Birds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the consequences for the numbers and varieties of song birds of the range of arable incentive schemes proposed by his Department. [14674]

Mr. Boswell: The Ministry's agri-environment schemes encourage agricultural practices which are sympathetic to the requirements of song birds. We have also recently introduced new payments for retaining winter stubbles and undersowing arable crops with grass in two environmentally sensitive areas; and we have announced proposals for a pilot scheme as part of countryside stewardship to test the most effective arable farming methods to protect wildlife species such as farmland birds. On the basis of advice from English Nature and environmental bodies and of published research, these measures should bring significant benefits for song birds in England.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the summer use of (a) organophosphates and (b) pyrethroids on the numbers and range of songbirds. [14675]

Mrs. Browning: The Department of the Environment and English Nature, on behalf of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, are funding a review of the available information on the indirect effects of pesticides on farmland birds. I understand that the results will be published later this year.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is also funding relevant research which was listed in the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment on 17 December Official Report, column 544.

The results of these projects will be made available to the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and the Pesticides Forum.

Fisheries Agreements

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list those countries which benefit from the EU fisheries agreements with third countries, including their respective share of such agreements by weight of catch and value; [14828]

(2) what share of EU fisheries agreements with third countries has been appointed to the United Kingdom in each year since 1986; [14829]

(3) if he will list those third party countries which have fisheries agreements with the European Union. [14832]

Mr. Baldry: Much of this information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the answers that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) on 28 October and 7 November 1996, Official Report, columns 52 and 660 respectively, which provided details of current fisheries agreements between the European Community and third countries.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the United Kingdom contribution in (a) sterling and (b) percentage terms to the cost of EU fisheries agreements with third countries for each year since 1986; [14830]

(2) what was the cost in sterling of the EU fisheries agreements with third countries in each year since 1986. [14831]

Mr. Baldry: Details of the cost to the EU budget of fisheries agreements with third countries are given in the table.

Cost of EU fisheries agreements with third countries

	ECU (million)	£ (million)
1986	55.6	36.0
1987	81.9	58.9
1988	139.5	94.6
1989	161.5	105.7
1990	173.0	122.8
1991	171.4	119.9
1992	195.6	138.4
1993	188.9	148.5
1994	140.6	107.7
1995	158.1	127.7

Exchange rates used

1986: 1 ecu = £0.64785

1987: 1 ecu = £0.71932

1988: 1 ecu = £0.67834

1989: 1 ecu = £0.65474

1990: 1 ecu = £0.70995

1991: 1 ecu = £0.69973

1992: 1 ecu = £0.70765

1993: 1 ecu = £0.78627

1994: 1 ecu = £0.76626

1996: 1 ecu = £0.83991

The United Kingdom contributes to the EU budget as a whole and it is not therefore possible to identify separately the UK contribution to EU fisheries agreements with third countries. Details of UK contributions can be found in the annual White Paper statements on the EU budget. In 1996, the UK's gross contribution to the budget was about 15 per cent. of the total.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will support the recommendations of the House of Lords Select Committee on the European Communities in its Third report of Session 1996–97 on third country fisheries agreements, HL 28, that the recipients of EU fisheries agreements with third countries should pay a greater share of the cost of such agreements. [14833]

Mr. Baldry: The Government welcome this timely and balanced report and will provide a full and considered response in due course. I made it clear in my oral evidence to the sub-committee that I consider it reasonable that those fishermen and member states benefitting from fisheries agreements with third countries should contribute a greater share of the costs.

Water Pollution (Thruxted)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information he has received concerning the possible contamination of drinking water by waste discharged from Canterbury Mills, Thruxted, Kent; and if he will make a statement; [15260]

(2) what reports he has received from the Environment Agency concerning their investigation of wastewater arrangements at Canterbury Mills, Thruxted, Kent; and if he will make a statement. [15261]

Mr. Baldry: Drinking water quality is the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment and of the drinking water inspectorate. The local water company, Mid Kent Water, confirms that its tests show that water supplies taken from the area are of the highest chemical and microbiological standard. The tests are subject to stringent analytical quality control and independent scrutiny by the drinking water inspectorate.

This Department has received a copy of the draft report of the risk assessment carried out into waste water disposal options at Canterbury Mills and the possible effect on the quality of drinking water. The Environment Agency has commissioned studies into the possible effects of waste water disposal arrangements at Canterbury Mills and has made these available to the planning inspector for use during the public inquiry now underway to determine a planning application by Canterbury Mills.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what evidence he plans to submit to the forthcoming public inquiry relating to planning proposals for a new underground water drainage system adjacent to Canterbury Mills, Thruxted, Kent; and if he will make a statement. [15262]

Mr. Baldry: This Department prepared a statement regarding the operation of Canterbury Mills rendering plant in the context of animal health legislation, to the planning inspector on 10 January 1997 for use at the public inquiry. A copy is being placed in the Library of the House.

Salmonella Gold Coast Contamination

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department first received evidence of the possibility that cows from Wyke Farms of Somerset were source of Salmonella gold coast infection; and if he will make a statement. [11793]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 January 1997]: Epidemiological evidence first linked an outbreak of Salmonella gold coast to the consumption of cheese produced at Wyke Farms on 14 December 1996.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the methods used to monitor the efficiency of each Government Department in answering parliamentary questions, with particular reference to the expected lengths of time to answer questions and the action taken in the case of excessive delays. [14902]

Mr. Freeman: Each departmental Minister is responsible for answering the parliamentary questions put to them in a timely manner.

For questions for written answer on a named day, Standing Order 18(4) requires that an answer should be given on the day named by the Member. Wherever possible, this will be a substantive reply but, where this is not possible, Ministers will give a holding reply and provide a substantive reply as soon as possible thereafter.

Within my Department, instructions have been given that Ministers will wish, wherever possible, to be in a position to provide a substantive reply on the day named; and, in the case of ordinary written questions, within five working days of the question being tabled.

Information Systems (Millennium Compliance)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures his Department has taken to ensure that each Government Department's information systems will be millennium compliant; and if he will make a statement. [15132]

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 9 December 1996, Official Report, column 4 and to the reply given to Lord Stallard on 27 January by the Under-Secretary of State for Defence, column 963.

The integrity and continuity of government information systems are essentially the responsibility of individual departments. However, the Deputy Prime Minister and Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster have personally ensured that all ministerial heads of Department and permanent secretaries are aware of the problem and are implementing plans of action in relation to their computer systems and that all Departments plan to complete the work in time—Official Report, 27 January 1997, column 963.

"Government Direct"

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the costs of the proposals set out in the Green Paper, "Government Direct"; and if he will make a statement. [15072]

Mr. Freeman: The scale of investment required has not yet been fully determined. However, the proposals will not involve capital investment of public funds. The Government's private finance initiative will allow the private sector to provide services of the type outlined in the Green Paper. Money to pay the contractors would come from part of the savings in the cost of government administration.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers (Bravery Medal)

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with the initiative to introduce a medal for prison officers recognising exceptional bravery in the course of their work. [14670]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Spencer Batiste, dated 12 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about introducing a Prison Service medal.

Consideration is currently being given to the establishment of a Queen's Prison Service medal. I strongly support this proposal and hope that it will be possible to create it.

Armed Police Officers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the presence of an officer with a sub-machine gun in Mansell street, Whitechapel, at midnight on 3 February; [14834]

(2) if he will make a statement on the arming of police officers with sub-machine guns in London. [14835]

Mr. Maclean: I understand that an officer armed with a carbine was carrying out counter-terrorist duties in the Mansell street area. The officer was part of a patrol exercising powers under section 13A of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 to stop and search vehicles and their occupants for articles which could be used for terrorist purposes. The weapon was not a sub-machine gun, but a carbine specially adapted to fire only one shot at a time. Such carbines are one of a number of weapons available for general issue to members of the City of London police tactical firearms group.

The City of London police have no automatic carbines. The Metropolitan police have a small number of automatic carbines. These are to be issued only under the most stringent conditions and in the most exceptional circumstances. It would not be in the interests of security for me to discuss any further details about the circumstances or conditions under which these weapons might be deployed.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum applications are currently awaiting an initial decision by his Department's asylum directorate; and how many of these applications were made in (a) 1991 or earlier, (b) 1992, (c) 1993, (d) 1994, (e) 1995 and (f) 1996; [13264]

(2) how many asylum applications are outstanding from nationals of (a) Afghanistan, (b) Iran, (c) Iraq, (d) Somalia and (e) the former Yugoslavia; and how many of these applications were made in (i) 1992 or earlier, (ii) 1993, (iii) 1994, (iv) 1995 and (v) 1996. [13267]

Miss Widdecombe: The number of asylum applications awaiting an initial decision as at 31 December 1996 was 55,695, a reduction on the equivalent figure for the end of 1995—69,650. Of those applications currently awaiting an initial decision, the number which had been made following the implementation of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals

Act 1993 has now been revised to 43,025. This follows an extensive count of cases which has shown that the method of estimation previously used underestimated the number of pre-1993 Act cases that have been decided. An estimated breakdown of the years in which those asylum applications awaiting an initial decision were made, in total and for the nationalities requested, is given in the table.

Asylum applications from requested nationalities awaiting an initial decision as at 31 December 1996, by year of application

Crime and Detection

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for (a) West Yorkshire, (b) West Midlands, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) Greater Manchester, (e) South Yorkshire and (f) Merseyside in 1994–95 and 1995–96 (i) the crime figures and (ii) the detection rate by category of crime. [14809]

Mr. Maclean : The available information is contained in the following table:

Young Offender Institutions

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to withhold access to card-operated telephones from young offenders held at (a) Her Majesty's young offenders institution, Colchester and (b) other young offender institutions; [15155]

(2) what plans he has to censor mail sent to young offenders held at (a) HM YOI Colchester and (b) other young offender institutions. [15154]

Miss Widdecombe: For the first two stages of the regime at Colchester young offender institution, young offenders will be allowed a supervised weekly call to their family on an official telephone. In the third and final stage, access to card-operated telephones will be as it is in other young offender institutions. In addition, young offenders will be allowed welfare calls at the discretion of staff. Staff will read all mail sent to young offenders at Colchester, with the exception of legal correspondence.

There are no plans to change the access to card-operated telephones or the arrangements for reading inmates' correspondence in other young offender institutions.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of persons who come to the United Kingdom as visitors but stay on as illegal immigrants in each of the last three years; and if he will take measures to provide the maximum flexibility in permitting visitor entry, with the maximum checks on overstaying. [15095]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information available relates to all overstayers who were issued with a notice of intention to deport. There were 4,850 such persons in 1994, 4,660 in 1995 and 5,600—provisional figure—in 1996. All persons seeking entry as visitors are given leave to enter providing they satisfy the immigration rules, and enforcement action is taken against those who breach their conditions of leave to enter by, for example, overstaying.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the crime clear-up rate and annual percentage change in each year since 1979 in each region; and if he will make a statement; [15013]

(2) what was the clear-up rate for all crimes in (a) England and (b) Wales in (i) 1979, (ii) 1983, (iii) 1987 and (iv) in each year since 1992 for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [15016]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in the tables.

Car Crime

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many private motor vehicles have been stolen and not recovered in the past five years in the United Kingdom. [15181]

Mr. Maclean: The available information relates to recorded offences of theft or unauthorised taking of a motor vehicle and is given in the table. The information given relates to England and Wales. Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for the respective Secretaries of State.

Notifiable offences of theft of motor vehicles recorded by the police

England and Wales

Year	Recorded offences[1]	Vehicles recovered	Vehicles not recovered[2]
1991	581,901	372,412	209,489
1992[3]	586,362	363,956	222,406
1993[3]	596,128	350,862	245,266
1994[3]	540,639	315,111	225,258
1995[4]	448,143	283,903	164,240

(1) Includes attempts. Please note that it is not possible to exclude attempts for all forces.

(2) The number of vehicles recovered subtracted from the number of recorded offences.

(3) Excluding Dyfed-Powys.

(4) Excluding Metropolitan Police and Dyfed-Powys.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding delays in obtaining hearings of claims by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and what is his estimate of the number of unresolved claims which were more than three years old in (a) 1990 and (b) at the latest date for which such figures are available. [15422]

Mr. Maclean: Since 1 January 1996, we have received 15 letters about delays in appeals directly from claimants and 15 through hon. Members. In addition, two hon. Members tabled questions on the subject.

The board advises that data about numbers of outstanding appeals in 1990 are no longer available, but of 26,000 cases currently awaiting oral hearing, 2,067 have been waiting for more than three years.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I increased membership of the board from 43 to 50 in 1996 to help clear the hearings backlog more speedily. Under the new tariff scheme introduced in April 1996, which has a new review procedure and a new independent appeals panel, we expect appeals to be dealt with considerably more quickly than under the superseded scheme.

European Year Against Racism, Xenophobia and Anti-semitism

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken in relation to the European Commission's decision to make 1997 the European Year Against Racism, Xenophobia and Anti-semitism; and if he will make a statement. [15263]

Mr. Kirkhope: The decision to make 1997 the European Year Against Racism, Xenophobia and Anti-semitism was taken by member states of the European Union in July 1996 and is fully supported by the United Kingdom.

I am chairing the national co-ordinating committee for the year in the United Kingdom. The committee met for the first time on 2 December and meets again on 26 February.

The year was launched at European level on 30 and 31 January at a conference in The Hague at which I led the United Kingdom delegation. I shall also be hosting the launch of the year in this country which will take place at Lancaster house on 19 February.

The Government are working closely with the Commission for Racial Equality in the running of the year. The Home Office is providing specific funding to the Commission for Racial Equality to run a helpline and information service. A newsletter has been issued and details of funding available from the European Commission are now being disseminated. We are also in the process of pulling together a calendar of events: this will be sent out shortly and updated periodically throughout the year.

Whitemoor Prison

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons the six category A exceptional risk prisoners who escaped from Whitemoor prison in 1994 did not have category A books showing their period at Whitemoor in the special secure unit; and if other prisoners in that unit had such books. [14883]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 11 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 12 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Category A books for prisoners in the special secure unit (SSU) at Whitemoor prison.

Category A exceptional risk prisoners held in the SSU in 1994 did not have movement recorded in Category A books because it was judged that, within the discrete area of the SSU, this was unnecessary as it was a small location in which no significant movement was possible.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the nature of the deteriorating health condition of each of the accused in the Whitemoor prison escape trial; what psychiatric and other medical examinations the accused have had since the trial was discontinued; and if he will make a statement. [14884]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 11 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 12 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the nature of the deteriorating health condition of each of the accused in the Whitemoor prison escape trial.

For reasons of medical confidentiality, it is not possible to give detailed information on the health of individual prisoners.

All prisoners in special secure units are subject to medical review by the prison medical officer at three monthly intervals. As the prisoners who were charged with escaping from Whitemoor prison are held in special secure units they are subject to these regular medical reviews.

There is no medical evidence that the health of prisoners held in special secure units is being significantly affected by their imprisonment in these units.

Interception of Communications

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) under what statutory basis the police are able to trace the movement of people by reference to their mobile phone records; [14364]

(2) what discussions he has had with (a) the Association of Chief Police Officers and (b) mobile phone operating companies, concerning police access to mobile phone records to trace the movement of people; [14365]

(3) what guidelines he has issued concerning police access to mobile phone records; and if he will make it his policy to review the current practice in respect of access to mobile phone records; [14366]

(4) if he will list by police authority the number of applications made by the police for permission to access the United Kingdom Cellnet system; and how many applications have been (a) granted and (b) refused; [14629]

(5) which foreign organisations are permitted to receive data obtained from the United Kingdom Cellnet system under existing interception of communication agreements; [14633]

(6) under what circumstances (a) the police including special branch, (b) the security services and (c) the Benefits Agency are allowed access to the national Cellnet system; what are the mechanisms for making and processing such applications; what factors apply in their assessment; who grants access; and what safeguards exist to ensure that information obtained is not misused; [14631]

(7) if he will list by police authority the number of applications made by special branch for permission to access the Cellnet system; and how many applications have been (a) granted and (b) refused; [14630]

(8) how many cases have been recorded by his Department where information obtained by accessing the Cellnet system has been used (a) in proceedings before the civil and criminal courts and (b) in proceedings before statutory and non-statutory tribunals. [14632]

Mr. Howard: The circumstances under which the four mobile telephone operators may disclose personal information which they hold on computer for their own purposes—including for billing, fraud prevention and statistical analysis—are regulated by the Data Protection Act 1984, by the Telecommunications Act 1984, and by the terms of their Telecommunication Act licences which require them to take all reasonable steps to ensure the confidentiality of customer information. It is an offence, under section 45 of the Telecommunications Act, for an operator to disclose any information concerning subscribers' use of the system except where the disclosure is made for specified purposes including the prevention or detection of crime; for the purposes of any criminal proceedings; in the interests of national security or in pursuance of a court order. All operators are also required to observe a code of practice on the confidentiality of customer information, and they are subject to the normal civil law obligations towards their subscribers.

The police and other agencies concerned with law enforcement and national security may request the operators to provide them with data which they require for one or more of the purposes described above. Additionally, the law enforcement agencies may apply for a court order under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. Information concerning the number of such applications which have been made to the operators, and the number of cases in which such information has been used in proceedings before courts and tribunals, is not held centrally.

I see no need to intervene in these arrangements which are properly a matter for the relevant authorities and the operators, within the framework of the safeguards which I have described. Interception of communications—as distinct from the provision of subscriber data—is governed by the Interception of Communications Act 1985 which provides that interception may be carried out only under a warrant issued by the Secretary of State, and that material may be disclosed only in accordance with arrangements made under section 6 of the Act.

Police Escorts

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is responsible for the costs incurred in respect of police escorts of United Kingdom road transportation of nuclear waste cargos; and if he will make a statement. [14370]

Mr. Page: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 22 January 1997, Official Report, column 642 in which I explained

"there is no requirement for police escorts to accompany the road transport of radioactive waste."

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Supervisory Bodies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many individuals and firms have been licensed by each of the recognised supervisory bodies created under the Companies Act 1989. [14791]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The table sets out the number of firms currently registered as auditors with each of the recognised supervisory bodies—the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales, the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland, the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland, the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants, and the Association of Authorised Public Accountants—and the number of responsible individuals within those firms:

Scientific Research and Development

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of gross domestic product in the United Kingdom has been invested in scientific research and development in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [15091]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The figures requested are as follows:

Gross expenditure on scientific Research and Development in the UK

	Percentage of GDP
1991	2.16
1992	2.18
1993	2.20

Mr. Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to increase his Department's budget for science and research development. [15081]

Mr. Taylor: The science budget for 1997–98 announced by the President of the Board of Trade on 28 November will be £18 million above the equivalent allocation for the current year. Information about the Department's other science and technology expenditure will be provided in the expenditure plans report to be published in March.

Cable Entertainment

Mr. Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to lift the prohibition on BT operating in the cable entertainment market; and if he will make a statement. [15090]

Mr. Ian Taylor: BT is not prevented from operating in the cable entertainment market. It is able to do so on the same basis as all other companies, by competing for franchises. BT can even use its existing network within the franchises it holds. It can also deliver on its existing network broadcast television nationally to businesses, and it is free to offer interactive, on-demand services nationally to both businesses and homes. This freedom includes such services as video on demand, with an appropriate licence from the ITC. The only prohibition is on BT using its network nationally to convey or provide broadcast television to homes, as this would give it an overwhelming advantage over cable and other operators that are still building their networks. The Government will review these limited restrictions in 1998 and 2001 for conveyance and provision, respectively, if the Director General of Telecommunications advises that competition continues to become sufficiently established to warrant it. Stability in this regard remains an important factor in underpinning the investment in alternative infrastructure of more than £12 billion which cable and other operators have scheduled for this decade.

Sellafield (Safety)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he was notified of the radiation contamination accidents that took place at Sellafield on (a) 2 and (b) 4 February; what was the nature of each accident; and if he will make a statement on safety at Sellafield. [15063]

Mr. Page: The incidents were reported to this and other interested Departments and relevant regulatory bodies on 3 and 4 February, respectively.

The incident on 2 February occurred during the dismantling of redundant equipment in the Magnox reprocessing plant at Sellafield. Six workers received slight contamination to their person following the removal of their protective clothing. They were subsequently decontaminated by normal washing/showering and were monitored as clear of contamination before going home. There was no release of radioactivity beyond the Magnox reprocessing plant building where the incident occurred.

The incident on the night of 3/4 February occurred during the transfer of medium active concentrate along a pipeline between storage tanks when some of the liquor spilled onto a tank roof. Heavy overnight rain washed some of this liquor along the installed drainage system and into a large concrete lined pond for the collection of storm water. The pumps which discharge the contaminated water to the sea were stopped automatically as a result of low levels of radioactivity being detected by the installed monitoring equipment. No one received contamination to his or her person or any significant radiation exposure.

The incidents are being fully investigated by British Nuclear Fuels to establish their causes and to make recommendations to prevent a recurrence. Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive's installations inspectorate and the Environment Agency are on site obtaining further information. The NII would not allow any nuclear site to operate if it were not satisfied as to its safety.

In accordance with normal procedures, details of both incidents were contained in last week's Sellafield site newsletter, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Cosmetic Products

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those organisations consulted by his Department on the draft Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996, indicating the date when each meeting took place. [15129]

Mr. John M. Taylor: One hundred and fifty-five organisations and individuals were sent one or both of the consultation documents on the draft cosmetics regulations. A list of these organisations and individuals has been placed in the Library of the House. Representations received, including meetings, are regarded as confidential unless otherwise agreed with the parties concerned.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will amend section 8(3) of the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996 (No. 2925) in 1997 to bring the wording into line with article 7A.1(e) of the Council directive 76/768/EEC as inserted by Council directive 93/35/EEC of 14 June 1993. [15124]

Mr. Taylor: I am advised that regulation 8(3) of the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996 transposes correctly article 7A.1(e) of the cosmetics directive. However, in light of the concerns raised about the interpretation of article 7A.1(e), my officials will be meeting the Commission in order to seek a way in which we can resolve concerns expressed by industry without placing the UK in breach of its Community obligations.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the text of section 8(3) of the draft Cosmetic Product (Safety) Regulations 1996, was based on the text of article 7A.1(e) of the Council directive 76/768/EEC as inserted by Council directive 93/35/EEC of 14 June 1996. [15122]

Mr. Taylor: Draft regulation 8(3), issued for consultation in July 1996, was intended to reflect the meaning of Article 7A.1(e) of the cosmetics directive, but following further consideration, it was decided that correct transposition of the directive required revised wording.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the role of the Royal Society of Chemistry as defined in the annexe to directive 89/48 EEC. [15126]

Mr. Taylor: The Royal Society of Chemistry is listed in the annexe to directive 89/48/EEC. However, article 7A.1(e) of the cosmetics directive 76/768/EEC, as amended, requires that the person responsible for the safety assessment

"must hold a diploma as defined in Article 1 of Directive 89/48/EEC in the field of pharmacy, toxicology, dermatology, medicine or a similar discipline."

My officials will be seeking clarification from the Commission as to what constitutes a similar discipline.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the representations he had received on section 8(3) of the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996 (No. 2925). [15123]

Mr. Taylor: My Department has received representations from five organisations. Representations to the Department from individuals or organisations, on any topic, are treated as confidential unless it is agreed that they can be made public.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to amend the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996 (No. 2925). [15127]

Mr. Taylor: The Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996 implement in the UK the cosmetics directive 76/768/EEC and all subsequent amendments made to it. On average, the cosmetics directive is amended once a year. The Commission has recently amended the directive for the 20th time and we will need to amend the regulations to implement the requirements of that directive by 30 June 1997. The Commission has proposed further amendments to the directive. If, and when, these are agreed, we will amend our regulations accordingly.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations he has received about section 8(3) of the draft Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996. [15125]

Mr. Taylor: Of 51 written responses to the consultation documents issued in October 1995 and July 1996, five commented on regulation 8(3).

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors led his Department to amend section 8(3) of the draft Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996, following the completion of the consultation process initiated on 30 July 1996. [15121]

Mr. Taylor: On close and detailed examination of the text of article 7A.1(e) of the cosmetics directive 76/768/EEC, as amended, it became clear that draft regulation 8(3) failed to implement the directive correctly.

Mr. Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department sent the Royal Society of Chemistry its consultative note on the proposed new regulations on cosmetic products. [15128]

Mr. Taylor: The Royal Society of Chemistry was not on the mailing list for the draft regulations issued for consultation in July 1996.

Business Links

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list each business link by region, indicating the amount of DTI funding to each for the period 1995–96. [15098]

Mr. Page: Table 1 shows, by region, the pump priming grant for each business link area.

A list of business link services expenditure by business link area could only be provided at disproportionate cost since the information on services grant for each business link is not held centrally and the total services grant for each business link would have to be calculated from local, generally paper-based records of expenditure from each of the services budgets. However, data on expenditure by region are held electronically and table 2 shows expenditure on business support services funded by DTI through training and enterprise councils and business links. These data include expenditure of non-business link services in those areas where the business link had not yet opened in 1995–96.

Ford Factory, Halewood

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will state the conditions attached to each Government grant to the Ford factory at Halewood since 1974 indicating whether they were conditional on job creation or job protection and when those conditions were met. [15256]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 11 February 1997]: Grant payments given under the regional development grants scheme between 1974 and 1987 required the relevant assets to remain in place for a minimum of four years. Payments were not linked to job creation or safeguarding. The scheme provided for recovery of a proportion of the grant where the conditions were not met in full.

Grant payments given under the RDG scheme between 1991 and 1992 were based on set targets for capital expenditure and job creation. The assets were required to remain in place for a minimum of three years and the jobs for 18 months following the completion of the project. The scheme provided for withholding and recovery of grant where these conditions were not met. One project remains within these conditions until 31 December 1997.

Grants given under the RSA scheme were phased over a number of years against targets for capital spend and the creation and safeguarding of jobs. Final payments were made on the satisfactory completion of the projects and were based on the actual capital spend and jobs achieved. From November 1984, assets were required to remain in place for a minimum of three years and the jobs for 18 months following the completion of the project. None of these grants remains within the conditions of the scheme.

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list Government assistance to the Ford factory at Halewood prior to 1974 (a) at current prices and (b) at constant prices. [15257]

Mr. Knight [holding answer 11 February 1997]: Information about all Government assistance awarded prior to 1974 is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) the dates on which Government grants to the Ford factory at Halewood authorised after 1974 were paid and (b) the amounts in constant prices using the gross domestic product deflator for 1995–96. [15255]

Mr. Knight [holding answer 11 February 1997]: Payments made by the Department under the regional development grants and regional selective assistance schemes were as follows:

£000 (1995–96 prices)

	RDGI	RDGII	RSA	Total
1974	188			188

Post Office (Privatisation)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department has spent over the last five years on preparation for, and feasibility studies of, Post Office privatisation, indicating the amounts spent on (a) contracts with consultants and (b) the employment of full-time and part-time staff. [15371]

Mr. Page [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The amount spent on consultancy advice between July 1992 and the Government's decision in November 1994 not to proceed with legislation on the Post Office in the current Parliament was £1,613,002.28. The amount spent on full-time and part-time staff working on matters relating to preparation for, or feasibility studies of, Post Office privatisation during this period could be established only at disproportionate cost.

Publicity

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was his Department's expenditure on contractors to provide publicity and news services from centrally managed budgets in each year since 1979–80. [15365]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 11 February 1997]: For the publicity and news services expenditure for 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Barking (Ms Hodge) on 11 November 1996, Official Report, column 15.

The expenditure for 1990–91, 1991–92, and 1992–93 is as follows:

1990–91	15,820
1991–92	10,203
1992–93	10,117

The figures for previous years are not available.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was his Department's expenditure on staff employed full time or part time to provide (a) publicity and (b) work on press and media in each year since 1979–80. [15366]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 11 February 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Barking (Ms Hodge) on 11 November 1996, Official Report, column 15.

Figures for previous years are not available on a comparable basis.

Biomass Projects

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to (a) encourage development work in biomass projects and (b) increase the level of their support from the non-fossil fuel obligation. [15374]

Mr. Page [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The Government consider that biomass is one of the most promising renewables and has the prospect to contribute to UK energy supplies. In order to secure the electricity generating capacity required by the fourth non-fossil fuel obligation order, NFFO4, announced on 6 February 1997, seven biomass projects with an aggregate capacity of 67.4 MW are expected to be contracted. The value of these contracts is almost twice that of the three biomass projects with an aggregate capacity of 19.1 MW contracted under the third NFFO order, NFFO3, which was made in 1994. The Department of Trade and Industry spent about £2 million in 1995–96 on development work in biomass with matching funding from industry, and the programme is set to continue.

Exports (Yorkshire and Humberside)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the value of exports form the Yorkshire and Humberside region for each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [15484]

Mr. Page: This information is not officially collated on a regional basis and is therefore unavailable.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what use her Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed.[14803]

Mr. Robin Squire: Postcodes are used in the collection and analysis of some DfEE statistics. Grants and awards are distributed mainly at local education authority or local authority level, or to specified organisations. In view of the wide-ranging nature of the DfEE's activities, it would not be possible to provide a full analysis of the use of postcodes without incurring disproportionate costs.

Modern Apprenticeship Scheme

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her latest estimate for (a) the annual apprenticeship scheme, (b) the number of young people on the scheme and (c) the number of employers in the scheme; and if he will list the outcome figures for those who have completed an apprenticeship. [15088]

Mr. Paice: In December 1996, there were around 60,000 young people participating in modern apprenticeships in England. The cost of modern apprenticeships is included within the overall budget for youth programmes in 1996–97 of £763.5 million. The number of participating employers is not available; neither is information on the outcomes of those completing a modern apprenticeship, as the number who have so far completed their training is small.

Education Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list, in real terms, the change of total education standard spending assessments in England for each financial year since 1997–88, indicating also significant structural changes affecting totals. [15093]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the real-terms change of total education standard spending assessments in England for each financial year since SSAs were introduced in 1990–91. The notes set out the principal changes in local education authorities' financial responsibilities. When allowance is made for these changes, SSAs have increased over this period by 15.6 per cent. in real terms.

Real terms change in education SSAs 1990–91 to 1997–98

	SSA in cash terms £ million	SSA in real terms £ million (1997–98 prices)	Change in real terms £ million	Changes in function
1990–91	14,752.5	18,362.9
1991–92	17,137.0	20,046.9	1,684.0
1992–93	18,352.7	20,601.0	554.1
1993–94	16,530.7	18,034.1	–2,566.9	1
1994–95	16,826.0	18,037.1	3.0	2
1995–96	17,024.1	17,798.7	–238.4
1996–97	17,764.2	18,119.5	320.8	3
1997–98	17,840.2	17,840.2	–279.3	3

1. Transfer of further education responsibilities from April 1993.
2. Transfer of responsibility for careers guidance and inspection from April 1994.
3. SSAs reduced to reflect phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme in 1996–97 and phase 2 in 1997–98.

Schools (Essex)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupils in Essex attend (i) grant-maintained schools, (ii) voluntary-aided schools and (iii) local authority schools. [15418]

Mr. Robin Squire: The latest available information is shown in the following table:

Percentage of pupils[1] in grant-maintained, LEA[2] maintained, and voluntary-aided schools in the Essex local education authority area in January 1996

	Grant-maintained	Voluntary aided	Other LEA maintained
Primary	16.7	10.9	72.4
Secondary	70.8	2.4	26.8

[1] Includes part-time pupils in primary schools.
[2] Schools operating as grant-maintained on the schools' census day January 1996.

Internet

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of (a) primary and (b) secondary schools which have access to the Internet in each local education authority area; and if she will make a statement. [15274]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to provide Internet access to all primary and secondary schools; and if she will make a statement. [15273]

Mr. Squire: Government support for the purchase of IT systems, software and networking—including Internet connections—by schools is provided through the school effectiveness grant under the DfEE's programme of grants for education support and training.

The Government are also supporting the evaluation of the educational potential of emerging technologies and models of implementation through their piloting programme, the Education Department's superhighways initiative. Several of these projects pilot the use of the Internet, including Internet services designed specifically for schools. The results of the pilot projects will be made available later this year along with guidance for schools on purchasing and good practice in the use of new technologies.

Education (Finance)

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) to what percentage of the education standard spending assessment the labour area cost adjustment is applied; and on what basis this percentage is calculated; [15336]

(2) what factors she took into account in her decision to include all salaries in the determination of area cost adjustment for education standard spending assessment. [15338]

Mr. Robin Squire: In calculating the area cost adjustment for education, all the employment groups relevant to the local authority labour market for education are taken into account—not just teachers—since the area cost adjustment seeks to reflect non-teaching as well as teaching costs.

As far as teaching costs are concerned, there is evidence that teachers' salaries, including London weighting payments, do not on their own represent the full additional costs of providing a standard level of service in London and the south-east, since they do not reflect lower levels of experience, higher vacancy and turnover rates, or non-salary payments.

In order to take account of these factors, the area cost adjustment is based on income levels in the general labour market of occupational groups relevant to the local authority labour force. The area cost adjustment for education redistributes some 3 per cent. of the total of education standard spending assessments to authorities in London and the south-east.

Nursery Education

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to ensure that the extension of nursery education to all four-year-olds does not lead to a reduction in places currently available to three-year-olds. [15271]

Mr. Robin Squire: The funding for the nursery education voucher scheme is specifically designed to leave untouched the funding for three-year-olds. Local authorities can continue to spend on such places as they judge appropriate.

Medical Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many medical students have begun courses since 1990 in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) England and (c) the west midlands. [15176]

Mr. Forth: The available information, which covers full-time entrants to first degree courses only, is as follows:

Number of full-time home domiciled entrants[1] to first degree Medicine/Dentistry

1990–91	4,679	3,526	n/a

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for education and Employment how many medical students have graduated since 1990 in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) England and (c) the west midlands. [15177]

Mr. Forth: The available information is as follows:

First degree graduates in medicine/dentistry

Year of graduation	United Kingdom[1]	England[1]	West Midlands[1]
1990	4,388	3,298	210
1991	4,395	3,207	217

Project Work

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants on the project work pilots in Hull and Medway had benefit reductions of (i) two weeks or less and (ii) two to four weeks for failure to attend or complete work placement; and, of these, how many applied (a) successfully and (b) unsuccessfully for hardship payments. [13591]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 30 January 1997]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 12 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about the number of people involved in the Project Work pilots in Hull and Medway who have had their benefit cut and about how many of those have applied for hardship payments. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to Leigh Lewis as Chief Executive of the Agency. I am replying in his absence.

The latest information, up to 31 January 1997, shows that 108 Project Work clients had been sanctioned for a period of 2 weeks and 16 for a period of 4 weeks in the Hull pilot area. Over the same period, in the Medway and Maidstone pilot area, 92 clients were sanctioned for a two week period and 11 for a 4 week period.

These sanctions were given following decisions by adjudication officers that the clients had, without good cause, failed to attend a Project Work place, refused a place, left a place early or lost a place through misconduct.

Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency has agreed to write to you separately on issue on the number of clients who made a claim for a hardship payment.

I hope this is helpful.

School Performance Tables

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to publish the school performance tables of key stage 2 results for 1996 and the estimated cost of their publication. [14300]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 5 February 1997]: The tables will be published in March, at an estimated cost for data collection and printing of less than 50p per booklet.

Education Bodies (Administration)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the names, salary and other emoluments for each year since 1987–88 for which figures are available of (i) the chief executive and (ii) the chairmen of the (a) National Council for Vocational Qualifications, (b) National Council for Educational Technology, (c) Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research, (d) Education Assets Board, (e) School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, (f) Further Education Funding Council, (g) Higher Education Funding Council for England, (h) Funding Agency for Schools and (i) Teacher Training Agency. [14514]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The information requested is listed in the following table. Salaries and emoluments for the chairmen of the bodies mentioned have always been publicly available. Chief executives' salaries are negotiated individually on the basis of their responsibilities and for most of the period were confidential. Since 1995–96, following publication of the White Paper on Open Government, this information has been in the public domain.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ministerial Advisers

21. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what subjects he is advised by Mr. John Kennedy and Mr. Perry Miller. [13974]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: None.

Arms Sales (Indonesia)

22. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the United States Government to discuss the sale of arms to Indonesia; and if he will make a statement. [13975]

Mr. Hanley: There has been no recent ministerial discussion of this subject. However, British and US officials keep in regular touch about relations with Indonesia, as with other countries, and issues of defence procurement co-operation sometimes arise.

Artists' Resale Rights

23. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the issues of artists' resale rights and the misuse of article 100(a) of the treaty of Rome by the Commission at the forthcoming intergovernmental conference. [13976]

Mr. David Davis: We have put forward proposals in the intergovernmental conference which are designed to provide safeguards against the misuse of legal bases for Community legislation.

Gibraltar

24. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of Gibraltar. [13977]

Mr. David Davis: Her Majesty's Government stands by its commitment to the people of Gibraltar, enshrined in the 1969 constitution. The Government will not enter into arrangements under which the people of Gibraltar would pass under the sovereignty of another state against their freely and democratically expressed wishes. That commitment remains steadfast.

Malta

25. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of Malta's application to join the European Union. [13978]

Mr. David Davis: Malta has suspended its application to join the European Union. But the new Maltese Government have made clear that they want to continue to develop close links with the EU and they are discussing with the European Commission how to take this forward. We welcome this.

Anglo-Russian Relations

26. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet the President of the Russian republic to discuss Anglo-Russian relations; and if he will make a statement. [13979]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has no present plans to meet President Yeltsin. He will meet the Russian Foreign Minister when Mr. Primakov visits London from 27 February to 1 March.

Kashmir

27. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the opportunities for political reconciliation in Kashmir following the recent state elections. [13980]

Dr. Liam Fox: We hope that dialogue between the new Government in Jammu and Kashmir and the Indian Government in New Delhi will lead to an improvement in the situation in Kashmir. I hope to discuss Kashmir during a visit to India and Pakistan later this month.

Bahrain

28. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his counterpart in Bahrain about the workings of the state security law there; and if he will make a statement. [13981]

Mr. Hanley: We have friendly relations with Bahrain and our frequent discussions cover a wide range of issues. The Government of Bahrain are aware of our view that legal proceedings, including under the security law, should be in accordance with international standards.

National Parliaments

29. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress there has been in the intergovernmental conference as regards the role of national parliaments. [13982]

Mr. David Davis: The draft revision of the treaties submitted by the Irish presidency includes a useful section on national parliaments. Among its proposals are a binding minimum scrutiny period, as proposed by the United Kingdom, as well as an advisory role for the Conference of European Affairs Committees—COSAC.

India and Pakistan

30. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet non-governmental organisations to discuss the political situation in India and Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [13983]

Dr. Liam Fox: I have occasional meetings with non-governmental organisations and other interested groups and individuals on the political situation in India and Pakistan. I hope to visit both countries again later in the month.

Hong Kong

31. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit China to discuss Hong Kong. [13984]

40. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet Chinese Government Ministers to discuss Hong Kong. [13993]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Members to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) earlier today.

European Union Institutions

32. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what powers he is seeking to have returned to the United Kingdom from European Union institutions during the current intergovernmental conference negotiations. [13985]

Mr. David Davis: The Government have tabled proposals to disapply the working time directive in the UK, and reduce the risk of misuse of existing treaty articles by introducing unanimous voting to article 118a, and parts of article 54 and 57. In addition through their proposals on subsidiarity the Government are seeking to ensure that action is taken at European level only where necessary.

34. Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in achieving the Government's objectives in respect of the European institutions in the intergovernmental conference. [13987]

Mr. Davis: Although there have been several discussions of institutional issues in the IGC, the final position of many member states will only be decided in the negotiating endgame. The UK has considerable support for its position on many of these issues.

Zaire

33. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has recently received regarding the situation in Zaire; and if he will make a statement. [13986]

Dr. Liam Fox: We remain gravely concerned by the situation in eastern Zaire, and remain in close contact with partners in the Security Council, the EU and in the region. We urge all parties to the conflict to call an immediate ceasefire and to enter into negotiations on a peaceful resolution. We welcome the appointment of Mohamed Sahnoun as UNSG's special representative for the Great Lakes. We will give full support to efforts by him and regional leaders, who most recently met in Pretoria on 28 and 29 January, to broker a settlement.

Caribbean Countries

35. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the political stability of Caribbean countries. [13988]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We continuously assess the political stability of all Caribbean countries. We see drugs and drugs-related crime as the main regional threat to stability in the Caribbean and are playing a major role in helping them fight drugs. My right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister and President Chirac launched the EU Caribbean drugs initiative in 1995.

Anglo-Korean Relations

36. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between the United Kingdom and Korea. [13989]

Mr. Hanley: We have an important political and economic partnership with the Republic of Korea. They work closely with us on the UN Security Council. We have recently welcomed them as a new member of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, and we are delighted that the UK has attracted over 50 per cent. of Korean investment in Europe.

Western European Union-EU Relations

37. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed the relationship between the European Union and the Western European Union with the French and German Foreign Ministers. [13990]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary last discussed these issues with the French Foreign Minister on 8 November 1996 and with the German Foreign Minister on 20 November 1996.

Argentina

38. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with Argentina. [13991]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The United Kingdom enjoys excellent relations with Argentina.

World Service

39. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received about the future of the BBC World Service. [13992]

Mr. Hanley: None since the beginning of the year.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions the United Kingdom has (a) won and (b) lost cases before the European Court of Justice in the past 10 years. [13967]

Mr. David Davis: Consolidated figures for the last 10 years are not held in the form requested. However, a recent internal survey of the 125 cases in which the UK was directly involved or intervened between 1993 and 1995 showed that the court accepted the principle UK submissions in 82 cases or 66 per cent. and wholly rejected them in 24 cases or 19 per cent. The UK has a very creditable record before the ECJ.

United Nations Agencies

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has recently received regarding British funding of United Nations agencies; and if he will make a statement. [13973]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have received no such representations.

Estonia

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on bilateral relations with the Republic of Estonia. [15225]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Our bilateral relations with Estonia are close and friendly, extending across a wide range of areas including political and economic co-operation, trade and investment and defence co-operation. Our close partnership was noted by Estonian Foreign Minister Ilves when he visited the United Kingdom earlier this month and paid tribute to the UK's consistent support for Estonia's sovereignty and independence.

Burma

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Burmese Government's treatment of (a) the democracy movement and (b) Aung San Suu Kyi. [15392]

Mr. Hanley: We remain deeply concerned by the harassment and detention of many supporters of the democracy movement in Burma and the continuation of road-blocks outside the home of Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. The EU has adopted a common position in Burma, which urges the ruling State Law and Order Restoration Council—SLORC—to allow the National League for Democracy and other legitimate political parties to pursue freely their normal activities.

Antarctica (Rift)

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will call for a report from the commissioner of the British Antarctic Territory on the rift that has appeared in the Larsen B ice shelf; what assessment he has made of the extent to which it indicates changing global temperatures and the possibility of rising sea levels; and if he will make a statement. [15236]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Additional rifts on the Larsen ice shelf have been identified in the past two years. However, the most recent scientific expedition to the area, in November 1996, found nothing extraordinary about these rifts.

The British Antarctic Survey interpretation is that the retreat of ice shelves around the Antarctic peninsula is due to local atmospheric warming. This is not necessarily correlated with temperature trends elsewhere in Antarctica or globally. If local warming continues, it is almost certain that another part of the Larsen ice shelf will disappear.

Since the ice shelf is already floating, and therefore displacing the equivalent of its own mass in water, there would be no rise in sea level even if it were to disintegrate and melt.

Ministerial Visit (France)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to pay an official visit to his counterpart in France to discuss Franco-British developments in the European Union; and if he will make a statement on the expected agenda at this meeting. [14158]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary plans to visit Paris on 3 March when he expects to meet M. Charette, the French Foreign Minister, and to discuss with him European issues as well as other topical matters. He will also deliver a speech on the British vision for the future of the EU.

SCOTLAND

Basking Shark

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received anent the proposal for the designation of the basking shark as an endangered species; and if he will make a statement. [14623]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Joint Nature Conservation Committee has recommended protection of the basking shark by adding it to schedule 5 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. The recommendation, part of a third quinquennial review of schedules 5 and 8 of the 1981 Act, has been presented to the Secretary of State for the Environment on the basis that the species is likely to become endangered unless such protection is implemented. The Scottish Office is participating in the Government's consideration of the recommendations.

The JNCC recommendations are presently the subject of a wide-ranging consultation exercise being carried out by the Department of the Environment. Any representations received will be given full consideration before any decision is taken.

Highlands and Islands Enterprise

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 373, when he expects the chairman of Highlands and Islands Enterprise will reply to the hon. Member for North Tayside. [15188]

Mr. Kynoch: I understand that the hon Member's question was answered on 6 February 1997.

Nursery Schools

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) three-year-olds and (b) four-year-olds had nursery schools places in each year since 1992. [15007]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is set out in the table.

Number of pupils attending nursery schools/classes

As at September	Education authority schools		Independent schools
	Age 3	Age 4	Age 3	Age 4
1992	12,357	33,787	529	996

The 1996 figures are provisional. The 1996 data are not currently available for independent schools because of a computer malfunction.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many qualified nursery school teachers were employed by each local authority in each year since 1992. [15008]

Mr. Robertson: The numbers of teachers working in education authority nursery schools and classes in the years 1992–96 are set out in the table.

The 1996 figure is provisional and cannot, at this stage, be disaggregated between authorities.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is currently the average class size for nursery schools for each local authority. [15009]

Mr. Robertson: Information on class sizes in education authority nursery schools is not collected because most nursery provision is not delivered in the context of a class structure.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost to the Scottish Office of the meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee in Selkirk on 3 February; what was the cost of the catering arrangements; and who were the contractors for the catering arrangements. [14678]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The cost of hiring venues, catering, security and so on is borne by the House authorities. Scottish Office officials supporting Ministers in connection with Committee meetings do so as part of their normal duties and no additional staff costs are incurred apart from travelling expenses.

I understand that the cost of the catering arrangements for the Scottish Grand Committee in Selkirk on Monday 3 February is of the order of £750. The caterers used by Scottish Borders council for the meeting were Graylee Jimson Catering.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make arrangements for the food hygiene inspector to be present at the next meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee on 17 February. [14679]

Mr. Forsyth: I see no need for an environmental health officer to be present.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will require that future meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee take place in towns to which there is access by rail. [14680]

Mr. Forsyth: No.

Crime (Clear-up Rates)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the crime clear-up rate and annual percentage change in each year since 1979 in each region; and if he will make a statement; [15014]

(2) what was the clear-up rate for all crimes in Scotland in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987 and (d) in each year since 1992 for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [15015]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table. During the period in question, the overall Scottish crime clear-up rate has increased significantly—from 30 per cent. in 1979 to 39 per cent. in 1995. It is expected that further measures such as the provision of additional officers, funding for closed circuit television schemes and enhanced technological support to help the police in solving crime will contribute positively to the continuing fight against crime in Scotland.

Song Birds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the consequences for the numbers and varieties of song birds of the range of arable incentive schemes proposed by his Department. [14676]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The rules of the arable area payments scheme have always encouraged arable farmers to maximise environmental benefits on their set-aside land and further changes announced last year will be of additional benefit. Furthermore, the environmentally sensitive area scheme, and forthcoming countryside premium scheme, contain prescriptions and measures directly aimed at conserving, improving or providing particular habitats which will increase the areas of cover, feeding and nesting sites for a wide range of bird species including song birds.

Crime Prevention Budget (Prisons)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the current crime prevention budget has been allocated to projects in prisons; and if he will make a statement. [15109]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No part of the Scottish Office's current crime prevention budget is used for projects in prisons since the costs of programmes which address the offending behaviour of prisoners are met from the prison service budget. A significant part of the crime prevention budget has, however, been allocated to two projects designed to prevent re-offending by persistent young offenders.

Electro-convulsive Therapy

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to modify the rules, regulations and guidelines concerning the use of electro-convulsive therapy in the treatment of patients suffering from mental illness; and if he will make a statement. [15110]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend proposes to consult very soon on the Scottish Law Commission's report on incapable adults, which includes recommendations relating to the use of electro-convulsive therapy. A copy of the consultation paper will be placed in the Library when published.

AIDS (Prisoners)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) male prisoners and (b) female prisoners (i) are HIV positive and (ii) have AIDS; and if he will make a statement. [15111]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked the chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 12 February 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question about the number of prisoners in Scotland who are HIV positive or have AIDS.

Prisoners are encouraged to undergo testing for transmissible diseases on a voluntary basis. The results are confidential to prison medical staff and individual prisoners and are not collated centrally. Independent research surveys have been commissioned, however, to estimate the prevalence of HIV among prisoners. Eleven surveys were carried out in 8 establishments between 1991 and 1996, conducted by Drs Graham Bird and Sheila Gore. Prisoners gave a saliva sample and completed a questionnaire, on a voluntary and anonymous basis. Although HIV is not found in saliva, the tests can identify antibodies which the body makes against the virus. The results are given in the following table. Cornton Vale holds female prisoners.

	HMP Aberdeen	157	2 (2 per cent.)

Farms (Negative Equity)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many full-time farm businesses were in a negative equity position in each year since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [12755]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 28 January 1997]: The table presents the percentage of farms in the farm accounts survey in Scotland that had liabilities exceeding business assets. The information is available only from 1986–87 onwards.

Year	Percentage of farms surveyed in FAS with negative equity
1996–97	0.2
1995–96	0.4
1994–95	0.7

Local Enterprise Companies (Training)

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what ways the eligibility, financial and operating rules which apply to the delivery of training programmes by LECs in 1997–98 will differ from the rules outlined in the new contracting documents which replace the training and enterprise councils annual funding agreement in England. [13593]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The rules in England are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. The rules for Government training programmes in Scotland are contained in the management statements and manual of project and programme rules of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. Copies have been placed in the House of Commons Library. Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise have responsibility for the delivery of Government training programmes through their respective networks of local enterprise companies. The contents of the annual operating contracts which exist between these enterprise organisations and the individual local enterprise companies within their networks are a matter for the enterprise organisations.

Northern Isles (Ferry Services)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by what date final tender proposals have to be submitted to his Department in respect of the provision of passenger ferry services for the Northern Isles. [14872]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 February 1997]: The shipping operators who are competing for the award of subsidy under the new block grant arrangements for the support of passenger ferry services to the Northern Isles have been asked to submit their tenders by Monday 24 February 1997.

Northern and Western Isles (Freight Services)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to issue a consultation paper on the future subsidy arrangements for the carriage of bulk freight to the Northern and Western Isles; and if he will make a statement. [14873]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 10 February 1997]: A consultation paper on bulk freight shipping services in the highlands and islands area was issued on Friday 7 February 1997. Responses have been invited by Friday 19 April.

Departmental Staff

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff his Department employs to advise schools on attaining self-governing status; and what is their current salary. [15172]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 1 February 1997]: Self-governing schools matters are dealt with by four officials within a policy branch of the Scottish Office Education and Industry Department which also deals with a range of other matters, including registration of, and liaison with, independent schools, the administration of the assisted places scheme, and school transport. Other officials, including Her Majesty's inspectors of schools and those dealing with legal and financial issues, also have occasional involvement on such matters when the need arises. It is not Scottish Office policy to disclose the salaries of individual officials.

WALES

Farms (Negative Equity)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many full-time farm businesses had a negative equity in each year since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [12756]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 28 January 1997]: Results of the farm business survey show only isolated incidences of farm businesses in the sample with negative equity—defined as liabilities greater than assets—since 1986–87, the first year for which information is readily available.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many full-time farm businesses in Wales had negative equity in each year since 1985. [13894]

Mr. Evans: Results of the farm business survey show only isolated incidences of farm businesses in the sample with negative equity—defined as liabilities greater than assets—since 1986–87, the first year for which information is readily available.

Public Information Videos

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many public information videos produced by his Department and the agencies for which he is responsible have been subtitled or signed. [14382]

Mr. Hague: In the past five years, no public information videos produced by my Department or agency Cadw have been subtitled or signed.

Economic Activity

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he plans to make to his policy to redress the imbalance in economic activity and inward investment between south-east Wales and south-west Wales. [14422]

Mr. Hague: I would like to see more investment in the western parts of Wales and in those other areas that have so far not been the principal beneficiaries of inward investment.

I will therefore set the Welsh Development Agency new and more demanding targets for inward investment outside the eastern M4 and A55 corridors. Additionally, I am asking the WDA, within agreed UK and European limits, to recognise the extra costs of locating in some areas by being prepared to give more assistance to companies locating in those areas than to equivalent projects elsewhere.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on current hospital waiting times in (a) Clwyd and (b) Powys. [14889]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Since 1 April 1996, the residents of Clwyd are the responsibility of North Wales health authority and the residents of Powys are the responsibility of Dyfed Powys health authority.

At 30 September 1996, 95 per cent. of north Wales residents and 93 per cent. of Dyfed Powys residents who were waiting for a first out-patient appointment had been waiting less than six months. In both areas, 99 per cent. of those waiting for in-patient or day-case treatment had waited less than 18 months and no one had waited over two years.

Maternity Beds

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of maternity beds provided by each (a) NHS and (b) non-NHS hospital in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [14893]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A list of NHS hospitals in Wales providing maternity beds is given in the following table. There are no specifically designated maternity beds in private hospitals in Wales.

Music Lessons

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines his Department has issued to (a) local education authorities and (b) schools in Wales regarding making music lessons available to pupils without consideration of parental payment; and if he will make a statement. [14780]

Mr. Hague: Welsh Office circular No. 4/89, "Charges for School Activities", a copy of which is in the Library, gives guidance on charges for individual tuition in playing a musical instrument unless the tuition was necessary as part of the syllabus for a prescribed public examination or of the national curriculum, when it must be provided free of charge. Amending legislation in 1993 subsequently extended charges to groups of up to four pupils.

Hospital Services

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many NHS hospitals in (a) Clywd and (b) Powys are currently paying private sector hospitals to treat NHS patients; if he will list the (i) hospitals concerned and (ii) costs involved; and if he will make a statement. [14892]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I am advised that no NHS trusts based in the former county of Clwyd or in Powys are currently paying private sector hospitals to treat NHS patients.

Roads

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the (a) road building and (b) road repairing work planned to take place during 1997, and for each the (i) start date, (ii) planned completion date and (iii) cost; if he will identify those where the construction of a flyover is involved; and if he will make a statement. [14915]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Our spending plans for roads in 1997–98 were announced by my right hon. Friend on 12 December 1996. All major schemes in the forward trunk road programme are being reviewed in the light of that announcement. We are reassessing the competing priorities of individual schemes in the programme against the resources available. Details of the revised forward trunk road programme will be published in the Welsh Office departmental report shortly. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library of the House.

Asthma

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are currently being treated for asthma in (a) each county and (b) Wales; and if he will make a statement. [14888]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of people treated for asthma in Wales is not available centrally. However, a health survey of adults was carried out in Wales during 1995 and one of the questions asked was "Do you have any of these chest troubles or breathing difficulties now?"—asthma was one of the conditions included. The results, by health authority, were published in chapter 1 of "Welsh Health Survey 1995", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Homelessness

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homeless households there are in each of the local authority areas in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [15140]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on the number of households accepted by local authorities as homeless is provided in the following table:

Number of households accepted as homeless, July to September 1996

Unfit Homes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many houses in (a) the Alyn and Deeside constituency and (b) Wales his Department estimates to be unfit for human habitation. [15145]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The latest Welsh house condition survey was conducted in 1993. From this, it is estimated that 151,200 occupied first homes in Wales were unfit. Information on individual constituency or local authority areas is not available from the survey. A further house condition survey, which will provide results for local authority areas, is under way. Information from this survey will be available in 1998.

Housebuilding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the level of housebuilding in Wales. [15144]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Provisional data available from local authorities and the National House Building Council on house building in Wales for the third quarter of 1996 show 2,543 dwellings were started and 2,227 were completed during the period. This represents a 12 per cent. increase in the number of starts and a 2 per cent. increase in the number of completions over the third quarter of 1995.

Planning Guidance

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received since the publication of "Technical Advice Note (Wales) 5"; how many expressed continuing concerns; and what those concerns were. [15241]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has received no representations on "Technical Advice Note (Wales) 5" since its publication.

European Anti-racism Year

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken in relation to the European Commission's decision to make 1997 the European Year Against Racism, Xenophobia and Anti-semitism; and if he will make a statement. [15264]

Mr. Hague: The Home Office has established a national co-ordinating committee which brings together representatives from a range of key organisations from across the country and will act as a focal point for the UK contributions to the European Year. The committee is currently drawing up a national programme of events for the Year and details will be announced in due course.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Recipients

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 190, how many recipients of council tax benefit were (a) retirement pensioners and (b) retirement pensioners also receiving income support; what estimates he has made of the numbers of retirement pensioners drawing council tax benefit who are eligible for, but not claiming income support in (i) Great Britain, (ii) the United Kingdom and (iii) Bristol, East. [14292]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Number of council tax benefit recipients in receipt of the state retirement pension for Great Britain as at the end of May 1995.

	Number of recipients (000s)
All recipients of council tax benefit and retirement pension.	2,431
All recipients of council tax benefit, retirement pension and income support.	1,100
Estimated recipients of council tax benefit and retirement pension, eligible for but not claiming income support	260

Notes:
1. The information applies only to Great Britain.
2. Information on Bristol East is not available.
3. The first two figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand. The estimated figure has been rounded to the nearest 10,000.
4. Figures refer to benefit units which may be a single person or a couple.

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14802]

Mr. Burt: Postcodes are used as one of the eligibility criteria for determining entitlement to a social fund cold weather payment. Each residential postcode is linked to one of 70 representative weather stations within Great Britain. The use of postcodes was introduced in November 1991. This enables those eligible for a payment to be identified quickly and a payment issued. After the end of each winter the scheme is reviewed. The review includes postcode to weather station links.

The family resources survey, which is sponsored by this Department, uses the Office for National Statistics small users postcode address file to select a representative sample of households in Great Britain. The sample selection is carried out by the Office for National Statistics. There has not been a comprehensive review of the usage of postcodes since the survey was launched in 1992, but the coverage achieved by the selection method is under constant surveillance.

The War Pensions Agency, in the annual report, "Pensioners by War Pension Committee Regions", shows the number of pensioners resident in specified war pension committee areas, which are broken down by postcode. The report is produced by the war pensions computer system. The method of compiling the report was last reviewed in June 1996.

The Child Support Agency uses postcodes to estimate broadly travel to work allowances which may form part of a maintenance assessment. The agency began using postcodes for this purpose following the introduction of child support legislation in April 1995, which allowed parents to have such costs reflected in their maintenance assessment. There has been no review of the usage of postcodes since that date.

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what targets exist for the Benefits Agency staff involved in adjudication and appeals of social security claims regarding appeal processing; [15220]

(2) to what extent the pay of Benefits Agency staff involved in adjudication and appeals of social security claims is related to targets on appeals processing. [15221]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of Social Security benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 11 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what targets exist for the Benefits Agency (BA) staff involved in adjudication and appeals of social security claims regarding appeal processing; and to what extent the pay of BA staff involved in adjudication and appeals of social security claims are related to targets on appeals processing.

The information is not available in the format requested. Responsibility for the overall clearance of appeals is for the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS).

National targets set by the BA for appeals processing relate to the period between receipt of an appeal by BA and the despatch of the submission to ITS. Once despatched, further action on the appeal is the responsibility of the ITS. Each individual benefit contributes towards these national targets and have their own targets for clearing claims to the ITS. The targets set for BA are shown in the attached Annex.

The pay of all Benefits Agency staff is performance related. The amount each receives depends on the achievement of a set personal key work objectives, and annual appraisal of performance.

Staff involved in adjudication and appeals processing would have key work objectives which support the achievement of those targets. The achievement of key work objectives informs the overall performance marking for individual staff which in turn determines annual performance pay awards.

I hope that you find this information useful.

The national targets set for the 3 types of appeal administered by BA are as follows:

Type of appeal	Primary target Per cent.	Secondary target Per cent.
Social Security	69 in 28 days	94 in 90 days
Medical	60 in 35 days	85 in 60 days
Disability	60 in 30 days	90 in 60 days

The individual benefit targets are as follows:

Benefit	Primary target Per cent.	Secondary target Per cent.
Income Support and Contributory Benefits	70 in 28 days	95 in 90 days
Job Seekers Allowance	70 in 28 days	95 in 90 days
Family Credit	69 in 28 days	94 in 90 days
Disability Living Allowance	69 in 28 days	94 in 90 days
Attendance Allowance	69 in 28 days	94 in 90 days
Disability Working Allowance	69 in 28 days	94 in 90 days
Invalid Care Allowance	61 in 28 days	93 in 90 days
Child Benefit	50 in 28 days	90 in 90 days
Guardians Allowance	93 in 28 days	—
Pension Services Division	64 in 28 days	94 in 90 days
Overseas Benefits Division	51 in 28 days	90 in 90 days

Disability Appeals	Primary target Per cent.	Secondary target Per cent.
Disability Living Allowance	60 in 30 days	90 in 60 days
Attendance Allowance	60 in 30 days	90 in 60 days

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what further studies he has made to measure the amount of benefit fraud; and if he will make a statement. [15901]

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced in July 1995 that he had instigated a series of benefit reviews across the major social security benefits to identify and quantify the level of fraud and error. Results of the reviews of income support, unemployment benefit, housing benefit, retirement pension and invalid care allowance have already been announced.

A review has now been completed on disability living allowance, a benefit which is paid to disabled people to help with some of the extra costs associated with disability. Not all disabled people satisfy the conditions for an award of DLA, which is based on the care and mobility needs arising from the effects of a disability rather than on the disability itself.

The review shows that some 73 per cent. of customers are entitled to the DLA they are receiving. In 27 per cent. of cases, therefore, DLA is being paid at an incorrect rate. Reasons for incorrectness, which involved both underpayments and overpayments of DLA, ranged from departmental or customer error right through to deliberate fraud.

In 12.2 per cent. of the cases surveyed, officials considered that customers did not satisfy the qualifying condition for receipt of either all or part of the benefit in payment due to their deliberate overestimate of their care or mobility needs or failure to report an improvement in their condition. Grossed up from the sample this represents an estimated annual overpayment of £499 million.

In addition there was a further 3 per cent. of customers who were found by the review to have been overpaid but where they might have been unaware that the changes in their condition was such that they should have reported it to the Benefits Agency. These represent an estimated annual overpayment of £83 million.

The exercise also identified another 9.3 per cent. of customers who were not receiving the appropriate rate of benefit because of an unreported deterioration in their condition. This represents an estimated annual underpayment of £227 million.

The results of this exercise will be studied and will help to inform plans to tackle incorrectness in DLA.

Customers who are entitled to the benefit have nothing to worry about from the findings of this exercise. But there are changes in medical conditions which can affect that entitlement level. The nature of some disabilities is such that there can be improvements where care or mobility needs, or both, become slight or non-existent. Customers have a duty to report such subsequent changes in their condition to the Benefits Agency and this requirement is clearly set out to customers when they receive benefit.

Elderly People (Winter Assistance)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he has taken to help the elderly during the winter months in each of the last three years; and at what cost. [15385]

Mr. Roger Evans: During the last three years, help has been available to pensioners awarded income support through the social fund cold weather payments scheme. This gives help towards additional heating costs during sustained periods of very cold weather. Estimates of benefit expenditure for each of the last three years are as follows:

Year	Total cold weather payments expenditure	Estimated expenditure to pensioners
1993–94	12,400	6,374[1]
1995–96	61,600	31,108[1]

[1] Estimated expenditure figures for pensioners are based on the income support quarterly statistical enquiry at February 1994, 1995, and 1996. Families with children under five, disabled people and pensioners on income support were eligible for cold weather payments. Expenditure on pensioners has been estimated on a pro rata basis.
Expenditure figures rounded to nearest £1,000.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Civil Service Briefings

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to offer to hon. Members briefings by the Northern Ireland civil service similar to those provided for the Anglo-Irish Secretariat on appropriate topics. [12173]

Sir John Wheeler: Briefings are provided for the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat, in accordance with the terms of the Anglo-Irish agreement, on appropriate matters. These briefings can be instigated by either side.

My ministerial colleagues and I also offer briefings to hon. Members on occasions but, in addition, always stand ready to consider favourably requests from hon. Members on issues relevant to the Northern Ireland Departments.

Gallaher Ltd.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland from which budget the award of £9.957 million to Gallaher Ltd. towards development at its Ballymena factory was made. [15182]

Mr. Ancram: The selective financial assistance offered to Gallaher Ltd. for development at the Ballymena factory will be payable from the Northern Ireland block, Department of Economic Development vote 1 section D (Assistance to Industry).

Job Skills Programmes

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what requests he has received from the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action to discuss matters relating to the use of European Union funding for mainstream job skills programmes and related programmes; and if he will make a statement. [14910]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend has not been asked by the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action for a meeting to discuss these matters.

EU Funding

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to modify his proposals for the mainstreaming of current temporary funding schemes from European Union programmes, with particular reference to the special support programme for peace and reconciliation and the European social fund; and if he will make a statement. [14906]

Sir John Wheeler: All projects developed under the special support programme for peace and reconciliation and the community initiatives component of the European social fund will be evaluated in due course to see what lessons may be learned. Apart from this, there are no such plans.

Training and Employment

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what has been the change in the funding of the action for community employment scheme in the past 12 months; what further changes are planned in the near-future; and if he will make a statement; [14907]

(2) what recent representations he has received concerning the role of the voluntary sector in reducing unemployment; and if he will make a statement; [14908]

(3) if he has received the report of the review of long-term unemployment conducted by the Training and Employment Agency; and if he will make a statement. [14909]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 12 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your questions about the Action for Community Employment (ACE) scheme, the role of the voluntary sector and long-term unemployment.

Resources allocated to ACE have been reduced in each of the last two public expenditure rounds. In the 1995–96 financial year £49.6 million was spent providing, on average, 9,189 ACE places. This year £39.8 million has been allocated to provide, on average, 7,200 places. In 1997–98 and the following two years ACE has been allocated £28.5 million which will support around 5,200 places. There are no plans to make further changes to ACE. Any such plans will only emerge following extensive consultation on the Training and Employment Agency's review of long-term unemployment which will be published shortly.

The Agency has frequent discussions with the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action (NICVA) which is the body most representative of voluntary sector organisations working with the unemployed. NICVA has provided very constructive advice, along with other organisations in the voluntary sector, on the preparation of the Agency's consultation document on long-term unemployment.

The consultation document is intended to stimulate an informed and forward looking debate on the types of approaches and measures which might most effectively help the long-term unemployed to reintegrate into the active labour market. It will examine the roles which different sectors, including the voluntary sector, might play within the overall strategy.

Baroness Denton has received a copy of the draft consultation document which the Agency expects to complete and publish shortly.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Fee-paying Schools

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the fee-paying schools which have received funds under (a) the targeting social needs scheme and (b) the raising school standards initiative, indicating the amounts received in each of the past three years and the sums forecast to be paid in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [15108]

Mr. Ancram: Fees in Northern Ireland's voluntary grammar schools are, with two exceptions, limited to a maximum capital fee of £80. All voluntary grammar schools receive some level of assistance from targeting social needs resources, on the principle that money follows the pupils eligible for free school meals. The amount going to voluntary grammar schools represents only 4 per cent. of the funds allocated under the scheme.

The table lists the sums received by each voluntary grammar school.

Bloody Sunday

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent representations he has received from the Taoiseach concerning Bloody Sunday; and if he will make a statement. [15258]

Sir John Wheeler: None. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister spoke to the Taoiseach on Friday 31 January; Bloody Sunday was among the many items discussed. The subject was also raised when my right hon. and learned Friend met the Tanaiste on Thursday 6 February.

Corrigendum

Official Report, 3 February 1997: In col. 458–59, written answers, the question and answer relating to the new parliamentary building should read as follows:

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee when construction of the new parliamentary building will commence; and if he will make a statement. [11925]

Sir Raymond Powell: I am pleased to report that good progress is being made with the design and procurement of the new building. Contracts for over 70 per cent. of the work by value have been awarded. For example, prefabrication of the roof is proceeding apace in Lancashire, of the stone columns in Derbyshire and the contractors are well advanced with the detailed design and ordering of the mechanical and electrical services.

It had been planned that work would start on site today, 3 February 1997. Unfortunately London Underground Ltd. and its contractor have not made as much progress as they planned with the construction of the new Westminster station and are not able to hand back the site. My Committee has taken evidence in public and in private from the chief executive of LUL and from the project director on a number of occasions and, while we appreciate the magnitude of their task, they have been left in no doubt of the considerable disappointment that they have not been able to return the site on the due date. In due course the House will be pursuing the remedies available under the terms of the agreement with LUL.

At this stage I cannot advise my right hon. Friend when work will start on site. There have been progressive slippages in the forecast date for the first stage handover and all the indications are that the current forecast of 29 July 1997 may not be achieved. My Committee continues to press London Underground and will keep the matter under continuous scrutiny.

Until there is a date from London Underground in which we can have confidence, it is not possible to give a firm date for the completion of the building. The aim, however, is that occupation should start during the summer recess 2000.

ENVIRONMENT

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14952]

Sir Paul Beresford: The local government review is an opportunity for improved services and more effective local government for the people of Bournemouth. As of 1 April 1997, Bournemouth borough council will be responsible for delivering the full range of local authority services, enabling improved services with efficiency savings.

Bournemouth borough council's standard spending assessment for the financial year 1997–98 will be £119,120,000. This represents an increase of £1,382,000, or 1.2 per cent. on the comparable figure for 1996–97. The Department does not have data for earlier years with which to calculate a SSA for a unitary Bournemouth so it is not possible to make a like-for-like comparison with 1992–93.

It is possible to compare the sum of the SSAs per head of Bournemouth borough council and Dorset police authority in 1997–98 with the sum of SSAs per head of Bournemouth borough council, Dorset county council and Dorset police authority in 1992–93. Although this is not entirely accurate, because it approximates to Bournemouth the average SSA per head of the county and police authority rather than the proportion relating to Bournemouth's needs, it is a reasonable approximation. On this basis, the total SSA per head of Bournemouth and the authorities which precept on it was £684 in 1992–93 and £789 in 1997–98. These figures do not take account of changes in local government functions, for example the transfer of further education from local authorities 1993–94.

Bournemouth borough council was successful in its bid for funding under the pilot capital challenge scheme. The council will receive a credit approval of £1.9 million for environmental works to enhance Bournemouth town square.

Bournemouth is benefiting from two schemes which have received funding from the Government's single regeneration budget challenge fund.

Dorset training and enterprise council's bid, "Community Focus—Turlin Moor and Boscombe", was one of 172 schemes awarded funding under round 2 of the challenge fund. "Community Focus—Turlin Moor and Boscombe" is a four-year scheme to meet training and educational needs in two areas which suffer from high crime rates and low employment. Over the full four years, it should receive a total of £406,000 in support from the challenge fund. This money, complemented by £395,000 of private sector funding and other public money, should create six jobs; involve 100 employers in collaborative education projects; and benefit 720 young people.

Bournemouth borough council's bid, "Making Small Firms Big Business—Dorset", was also awarded funding under round 2 of the challenge fund. "Making Small Firms Big Business—Dorset" is a three-year scheme to improve the infrastructure and competitiveness of the tourist industry in Dorset. Over the full three years, it should receive a total of £314,000 in support from the challenge fund. This money, complemented by £312,000 of private sector funding and £177,000 of other public money, should create or safeguard 51 jobs; advise 1,050 businesses; and help 1,100 people to obtain qualifications.

Residents of Bournemouth who live in houses in multiple occupation such as bedsits, shared houses, hostels and some houses converted into flats, will benefit from measures to improve fire safety and other standards in their homes introduced under the Housing Act 1996. The measures, which will come into force on 3 March, will make it easier for local authorities to ensure that HMOs meet acceptable standards. Bournemouth borough council will also be able to apply to the Department of the Environment for special powers to close down HMOs if they cause a nuisance or annoyance to the neighbourhood and to prevent new HMOs opening if they would be detrimental to the area.

Local Authority Services (Mergers)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what requests for assistance his Department has received from neighbouring or overlapping local authorities considering merging their treasurers, legal services and property services departments; what guidance he has issued on this subject; and if he will make a statement. [15012]

Sir Paul Beresford: While the Government recognise the value of sensible co-operation between the tiers of local authorities, no specific guidance has been issued. However, as part of the exercise on the extension to compulsory competitive tendering, my Department wrote to local authorities on 18 May 1995 outlining the main statutory framework within which authorities may make joint arrangements. No requests for assistance have been received.

Metropolitan District Budgets

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the budget of the metropolitan districts for the current financial year, ranking them from the largest increase over the previous year to the smallest; and if he will make a statement. [15232]

Ceramic Fibres

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's policy on the classification of ceramic fibres in respect of the review by the EU Commission's Technical Progress Committee; and if he will make a statement on the opportunities for ministerial representations to the committee. [15391]

Sir Paul Beresford: A series of EU technical meetings have examined a number of different possible proposals for the classification of a range of man-made mineral fibres, including ceramic fibres. The meetings have been attended by officials of the Health and Safety Executive who have followed the general policy adopted in these discussions that any proposals should be based on a sound analysis of the scientific evidence.

The purpose of the meetings is to assist the Commission in the preparation of a formal proposal which will then be submitted to a technical progress committee for a vote. When the proposal is made, it will be examined by Ministers, who will then determine the line to be taken by the UK officials who will attend the Committee and vote on behalf of the UK.

Poll Tax and Council Tax

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the amount of poll tax currently outstanding for each of the seven west midlands metropolitan authorities; and if he will list the collection costs for the council tax in the last year for which figures are available in each of those authorities. [15492]

Sir Paul Beresford: Estimates of the levels of community charge arrears for individual authorities are published regularly by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy. The latest information relates to the position at 31 March 1995 and is available in the revenue collection statistics 1994–95 publication in the Library. The figures for the west midlands authorities are as follows:

Metropolitan District Staff

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many full-time equivalent employees there are (a) in total and (b) per head of population in the service of each metropolitan district. [15483]

Mr. Curry: The information is given in the table.

The levels of employment in individual authorities are not directly comparable because of variations in population structure, social characteristics, hours worked by part-time staff, and the extent to which they use private firms and contractors or act as agents for other authorities.

Birds of Prey

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the incidence of the destruction of (a) eggs, (b) nests and (c) breeding habitats of (i) hen harriers and (ii) other birds of prey on privately owned grouse moors. [15643]

Mr. Clappison: None. Birds of prey, their eggs and nests are protected by the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. Offences against wild birds under this Act are not notifiable.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what were the terms of reference for the BRE Future Group established in December 1995; and how many of its participants are members of the Foundation for the Built Environment; [15613]

(2) if the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the BRE Futures Group were made available to both shortlisted bidders for the Building Research Establishment. [15621]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The terms of reference of the BRE Futures Group, set up in December 1995, were to support the BRE management board in considering the measures to be taken to improve the efficiency and value for money of the establishment, and the continuing management of change within BRE. The group has not met since the competitive sale of BRE was announced. None of the members of the group are members of the Foundation for the Built Environment. No documentation relating to the group was made available to any bidder.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on what grounds he decided that new legislation was not required to authorise the privatisation of the Building Research Establishment; [15615]

(2) under what existing statutory powers he is proposing to privatise the Building Research Establishment. [15616]

Mr. Jones: The Building Research Establishment is not a statutory body and has no statutory functions. No statutory powers are therefore required to transfer it to the private sector. The transfer can be effected by way of an ordinary contract of sale.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date the first results of their 1997–98 bids, in respect of projects under the partners in technology scheme, were made available to the Building Research Establishment executive agency. [15617]

Mr. Jones: My Department wrote to BRE on 14 January listing the partners in technology projects that it is prepared to support subject to contract.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if minutes and working papers of the management board meetings of the Building Research Establishment were made available to both the shortlisted bidders for the Building Research Establishment. [15619]

Mr. Jones: Relevant working papers of the management board were made available to both short-listed bidders for BRE. In addition, once the competitive sale of BRE was announced, the Department was required to be represented at all meetings at which decisions might be taken which would materially affect the conduct of the business, including meetings of the BRE management board. In some cases, where the discussion warranted it, a supplementary note was put in the data room for the information of bidders.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who will bear the legal liability, or any share of that liability, for claims arising from work carried out or advice given by the Building Research Establishment before its privatisation. [15622]

Mr. Jones: Legal liability remains the subject of negotiation between the Department and the preferred purchaser of BRE.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department decided to privatise the Building Research Establishment. [15614]

Mr. Jones: My right hon. Friend announced on 7 November 1995 his decision to move the BRE to the private sector and his intention to commission a study of the options for transfer. This decision was confirmed in his announcement on 2 April 1996 of his preferred way forward for effecting the transfer.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements were put in place to ensure a separation of the roles of members of the management bid team at the Building Research Establishment as bidders for the Building Research Establishment and as members of the Building Research Establishment management; when these arrangements were put into effect; and what steps were taken to monitor their effectiveness. [15618]

Mr. Jones: The Department issued guidance to the management and BRE staff when permission was given for the management bid team to express an interest in purchasing BRE. This guidance has been updated as necessary as the sale process has progressed. Its operation is overseen by the team of officials establishment by the Department to transfer BRE to the private sector.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if progress reports on the efficiency review of the Building Research Establishment's library service were made available to both shortlisted bidders for the Building Research Establishment. [15620]

Mr. Jones: Yes.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Section 2 Awards

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for the last three years for which figures are available (a) the total number and (b) the total value in current prices, of section 2 discretionary awards made to (i) post-graduate students, (ii) students aged 16 to 18 years undertaking further education and (iii) students aged 19 years and over undertaking further education, in each Government region. [15447]

Mr. Forth: The information requested is given in the following tables.

National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library copies of the submissions made to date to the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education. [15229]

Mr. Forth: Copies of papers submitted jointly by the Department for Education and Employment, the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Department of Education for Northern Ireland were placed in the Library in July 1996, as was subsequent evidence by the Scottish Office Education and Industry Department in November 1996, the Department of Trade and Industry in November 1996 and the Department for Education and Employment earlier this month. It is for the committee of inquiry as an independent body to decide whether or not to make evidence submitted by others publicly available, taking into account any requests for confidentiality.

University Research

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what representations she has received relating to capital equipment for university research; and if she will make a statement; [15266]

(2) what assessment she has made of the costs involved in replacing obsolete capital equipment for university research; and if she will make a statement. [15268]

Mr. Forth: We have received a number of representations about the cost of updating research equipment from universities and other bodies, including the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals, the Committee of University Chairmen and the Standing Conference of Principals. These representations are reflected in the reports of the joint DfEE—higher education sector working groups submitted to my right hon. Friend and placed in the Library last July. In response to such representations, my right hon. Friend is making available to the Higher Education Funding Council for England additional earmarked funds in both 1996–97 and 1997–98 for research equipment, to be matched with private contributions. In particular, the extra £100 million grant announced at the Budget for the HEFCE in 1997–88 includes £20 million specifically for research equipment, which is expected to generate matching private funds. The costs of up-dating research equipment are always likely to be high, but the earmarked funds—together with contributions from other funders—represent a significant contribution towards meeting them.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the private finance initiative has met the Government's objectives in respect of capital equipment for university research; and if she will make a statement. [15267]

Mr. Forth: Procurement decisions in the higher education sector rest in the hands of independent, autonomous institutions who may use a range of different financial sources to fund capital projects, including those for research equipment. The overall yield from PFI is therefore dependent on the decisions made by those independent institutions.

Following the joint DfEE-HE sector working group report on PFI in higher education, the HEFCE is currently considering a second round of bids for pathfinder status focusing on equipment.

Adult Training Courses

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the cessation of funding for adult training courses dependent upon the Further Education Funding Council; and if she will make a statement. [15464]

Mr. Paice: The Department has received recently a number of representations on the subject of the funding of further education, including adult education training courses. On behalf of my right hon. Friend, I announced on 5 February arrangements for the future funding of further education, and copies of my letter to all further education colleges have been placed in the Library.

Skill Shortages

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessments are made of the extent of skill shortages affecting employers. [15611]

Mr. Paice: The Department funds an annual survey of employers' recruitment difficulties and monitors similar surveys carried out by others.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new proposals he has to improve the accuracy of statistics on illegal drug use. [14189]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 11 November 1996, Official Report, column 1.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration detainees were held in (a) United Kingdom prisons by establishment and (b) (i) Campsfield house, (ii) Harmondsworth, (iii) Haslar, (iv) Meadvale Queens building, Heathrow, and (v) Tinsley house, on the nights of 31 January 1996 and 31 January 1997; and if he will make a statement. [15692]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information available is given in the table.

Persons recorded as being in detention solely under Immigration Act powers, by establishment

Establishment	31 January 1996	31 January 1997
Prison Service establishment in England and Wales[1]:
Haslar	118	[3]129
Other establishments	402	[3]347
	520	469[2]
Immigration Service detention centres:

Gatwick Meadvale	29	42
Harmondsworth	91	90
Heathrow Queen's building	14	15
Tinsley house	[3]—	134

[1] Corresponding data for Scottish prisons are incomplete and have been excluded.

[2] Figure relates to 31 December 1996.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum seekers were detained for a period of more than 48 hours during 1996; [15583]

(2) what percentage of asylum seekers were detained in (a) 1996 and (b) 1995. [15584]

Miss Widdecombe: Reliable information on the historical flow of persons placed into detention, and on the length of such detention, can be obtained only through examination of individual case records. The information requested is therefore available only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the cases of asylum seekers on hunger strike at Her Majesty's prison Rochester have been brought for independent review before a judicial authority. [15600]

Miss Widdecombe: On 12 February 1997, the total number of Rochester immigration detainees refusing food was eight, of whom six have sought asylum at some stage.

It has been open to all of these detainees to seek bail, habeas corpus or judicial review, and four are known to have done so.

Street Crime (East Staffordshire)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the effect on the level of street crime in east Staffordshire of the introduction of closed circuit television in Burton and Uttoxeter. [15396]

Mr. Maclean: The closed circuit television system in Burton has been operational for 16 months. The local police report that it has led to a reduction in auto-related crime of 95 per cent. and to a significant reduction in the number of public order offences. It has also had social benefits in terms of making people feel safer when visiting the town. Details of the effect of the system on crime levels in the wider east Staffordshire area are not available.

Although the borough of east Staffordshire was awarded a grant in the second Home Office CCTV challenge competition to assist with the installation of CCTV in Uttoxeter, the system has not yet become operational.

Surveillance Equipment

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers he has to take disciplinary action against a chief constable responsible for the misuse of surveillance equipment; and what steps he has taken in consequence of such misuse within the last eight years. [15438]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has no role in disciplinary proceedings except in that he is the appellate authority for all disciplined police officers. Under the Police (Discipline) (Senior Officers) Regulations 1985, the disciplinary authority for senior officers, including chief constables, lies with police authorities. In the Metropolitan police service, the disciplinary authority is the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. We are not aware of any disciplinary action having been taken against a chief constable in respect of alleged misuse of surveillance equipment.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records are kept by (a) Ministers, (b) Home Office officials, (c) the Police Complaints Authority, (d) Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary and (e) chief police officers about the use of surveillance equipment by chief police officers. [15435]

Mr. Maclean: Records on the use of surveillance equipment by the police are not held centrally by Ministers or Home Office officials. Each force maintains its own records and these are available for inspection by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. The Police Complaints Authority would not hold any information unless it related to an investigation into alleged misconduct.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Home Office guidelines exist for ensuring that surveillance equipment is not misused by police officers and what is the legal force of such guidelines; when were such guidelines first introduced; what happened prior to the introduction of the guidelines; when were the guidelines first published; how are copies of the guidelines obtained by the public; what modifications have been made since the guidelines were first introduced; and when and for what reason each modification was made. [15437]

Mr. Maclean: Intrusive police surveillance operations are presently authorised in accordance with guidelines issued by the Home Office in 1984. These guidelines have no statutory force. Formal guidance was first introduced by the Home Office in 1977 and, prior to 1977, police forces operated under the individual direction of their own chief officers. The 1984 Home Office guidelines were made public in a reply to a question from the hon. Member for Berkshire, East (Mr. Mackay) on 19 December 1984, Official Report, columns 157–58, and a copy was placed in the Library. Copies are available to the public on request from the Home Office. The only modification has been the replacement of the 1977 guidance with the current 1984 guidelines.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport (MV Cap Afrique)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bovine animals were imported on 23 January on the MV Cap Afrique; if such animals entered and were rested at an EU-approved collection centre operating in full compliance with European law; and what was the age of such animals. [14607]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 6 February 1997]: Forty bovine animals were imported on 23 January on the MV Cap Afrique. They were between 20 and 30 months of age. The animals were rested before being transported to their final destination. The resting place used is also an EC-approved collection centre but it was not operating as such when the animals were rested there.

BSE

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when specified bovine material was banned in (a) the Irish Republic and (b) each other EU country. [14770]

Mrs. Browning: The three other EU member states which have reported cases of BSE in native-born animals—France, Irish Republic and Portugal—all have some form of specified bovine material controls on cattle at slaughter. We understand the following controls apply.

The Irish Republic introduced legislation on 22 April 1996, prohibiting the use, sale or export of specified bovine material—defined as the bones of the skull, brain, eyes, spinal cord, spleen, thymus, tonsils and intestines and mechanically recovered meat obtained from bovine vertebrae excluding the tail—for human consumption unless licensed by the Minister.

In France legislation came into force on 28 June 1996 requiring the removal at the abattoir and incineration of:

(a) the brains, spinal cord and eyes of all bovines over six months; and

(b) the thymus, tonsils, spleen and intestines of cattle born or imported into France before 31 July 1991.

In addition, legislation introduced in September 1996, amending the June order, prohibits the sale of brains, spinal cord and eyes of bovines over six months.

In Portugal, legislation came into force on 28 January 1997 banning the use of certain bovine materials—including brains, spinal cord, eyes, tonsils, spleen, thymus and intestines—from any cattle of any age in the preparation of medical, pharmaceutical, and cosmetic products and in food.

No other member states have SBM controls on domestic production. The Government continue to press the Commission on this matter.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee to complete its investigation of possible links between the use of organophosphate warble fly treatments and the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement. [14823]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 February 1997]: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee is not currently investigating the use of organophosphate pesticides and a possible link with BSE. The theory that BSE could have been caused by the exposure of cattle to OP pesticides as a treatment for warble fly infestation has already been considered in detail by scientists in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Health and the Medical Research Council. A report from SEAC entitled "Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies—A Summary of Present knowledge and Research" (HMSO ISBN 0 11 242 9874) published in 1995 and available in the Library of the House, reviewed a number of alternative theories of BSE, including the OP theory, concluded that none justified extending the current research programme to investigate them further at that stage. The report notes that the original epidemiological investigation considered any possible association between the use of agricultural chemicals, including OP insecticides, and the occurrence of BSE. None was found.

I am aware of the recent press reports concerning new research carried out by the Institute of Psychiatry on behalf of Mr. Purdey into the use of phosmet and its possible association with BSE. Mr. Purdey has yet to produce any new scientific evidence to support his hypothesis or to cause us to question ours that BSE is of feed origin; a hypothesis that has been established form objective scientific research.

SEAC will be looking again at the possibility of a link between BSE and the use of certain OPs. Mr. Purdey has been asked to prepare a paper for presentation at a forthcoming SEAC meeting to define the latest theory on organophosphates and a possible link with BSE.

Turkeys

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps (a) to reduce the incidence of degenerative hip disorders and leg disorders in adult male turkeys, (b) to bring beak-trimming of turkeys to an end and (c) to secure an end to the selective breeding practices in respect of turkeys; and if he will make a statement. [15498]

Mrs. Browning: The Government endorse the Farm Animal Welfare Council's view that high levels of leg disorders in adult male turkeys should be avoided by the continued application of careful selection and good management practices.

The Government also support the Farm Animal Welfare Council's view that the long-term aim should be to end the need for beak-trimming. We are funding research into improved rearing methods which will assist in its achievement.

I cannot agree with the implied suggestion that selective breeding is an inherently undesirable practice.

I refer the hon. Member to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of turkeys, and to the Government's response to it, for a fuller assessment of turkey welfare and account of the steps the Government are taking to improve it.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Flander's Folly, Craven Arms

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what powers his Department has in respect of preventing Flander's Folly, Craven Arms from falling into disrepair and dilapidation. [15357]

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the upkeep of a historic building rests primarily with its owner. In the case of a historic building which has deteriorated to the extent that its preservation may be at risk, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State looks to the relevant local authority to take statutory action. Local authorities are empowered to serve notice on the owner of a listed building specifying works necessary for its preservation and, in the event of the owner failing to take action, to begin compulsory purchase proceedings. Authorities also have power to carry out works which are urgently necessary for preservation of an unoccupied listed building and recover the costs from the owner.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has similar statutory powers to those of local authorities. Her policy is to treat them as reserve powers, for use only in exceptional cases. On the information available, Flander's Folly, which is listed grade II, seems unlikely to be such a case.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by Benefits Agency region the number of pensioners who also claim income support; and if he will make a staement. [14999]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 12 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list by Benefit Agency region the number of pensioners who also claim income support; and if he will make a statement.

The latest information available is shown on the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Number of pensioners in receipt of Income Support (IS) by Benefits Agency (BA) Area Directorate

BA Area Directorate (AD)	Number of pensioners in receipt of IS as at the end of November 1996

The data relates to customers in receipt of a pensioner premium because the customer or partner is aged not less than 60.

Jobseeker's Allowance (Devon)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients there are of the jobseeker's allowance in (a) north Devon and (b) Devon; and how many of these are aged under 25 years. [15092]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of jobseeker's allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Nick Harvey, dated 12 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many recipients there are of the Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) in (a) North Devon; and (b) Devon; and how many of these are aged under 25 years.

The information is not available in the format requested. JSA payments are currently made via two computer systems, the JSA computer system (JSAPS) and the National Unemployment Benefit computer system (NUBS). It is expected that all JSA payments will be transferred on to and paid by the JSAPS by December 1997.

Statistics are not kept by customer age group.

The available information is in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Number of recipients of jobseeker's allowance (JSA)

	JSA paid via the National Unemployment Benefit computer system (NUBS) during week commencing 24 January 1997 and 31 January 1997	JSA paid via the JSA computer system as at the end of November 1996
North Devon[1]	2,725	3,031
Devon[2]	19,487	4,977

[1] North Devon includes: the Benefits Agency (BA) offices of Barnstaple, Exeter and Newton Abbot; and the Employment Service (ES) offices of Bude, Barnstaple, Bideford and Ilfracombe.

[2] Devon includes: the BA offices of Barnstaple, Exeter, Newton Abbot, Plymouth Crownhill, Plymouth Durley, Saltash and Torbay; and the ES offices of Bude, Barnstaple, Bideford, Ilfracombe, Axminster, Exeter, Exmouth, Honiton, Okehampton, Sidmouth, Tiverton, Brixham, Newton Abbot, Paignton, Teignmouth, Torquay, Totnes, Buckwell, Devonport, Hoegate, Plympton, Saltash and Tavistock.

The BA information has been provided by the Central Data Unit. The NUBS information has been provided by the South West Region's Employment Intelligence Unit. Data is subject to amendment.

National Insurance Contributions

Sir Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the revenue which will be generated by the removal of the cap on national insurance contributions. [14173]

Mr. Heald: If the upper earnings limit on employees' class 1 contributions and the upper profits limit on self-employed class 4 contributions were removed, it is estimated that an extra £3.75 billion would be collected in a full year.[1]

Note:

[1] The estimate is based on the assumption that the current 10 per cent. class 1 contribution rate would apply to earnings above the upper earnings limit and that the current 6 per cent. class 4 contribution rate would apply to profits above the upper profits limit.

PRIME MINISTER

Homelessness (London)

9. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to meet representatives of London's homeless. [14167]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so. However, my right hon. Friend the Minister for Housing is in regular contact with the voluntary agencies which co-operate with the Government in the rough sleepers initiative. I am kept closely informed on this matter.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 13 February. [14312]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 13 February. [14311]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Secretary of State for Health

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Prime Minister what responsibilities in respect of the Government's policies towards constitutional matters he has given to the Secretary of State for Health. [15503]

The Prime Minister: Ministers have collective responsibility for all the Government's policies.

NHS (Performance)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the performance of the NHS in the United Kingdom (a) since 1979 and (b) between 1974 and 1979. [16142]

The Prime Minster: Since 1979, the Government have established a record of significant and sustained improvements to the funding and management of the national health service, to patient services and to the pay and conditions of service of professional staff. For example:

spending on the NHS has increased by 75 per cent. in real terms. Between 1974 and 1979, in real terms spending increased by 17 per cent.

since 1979, capital spending has increased by 66 per cent. in real terms. Between 1974 and 1979, there was real-terms cut of 28 per cent.

the NHS is now one of the most efficient health services in the world. It treats 25 per cent. more patients per pound, at constant prices, than it did in 1979 since 1979, the percentage of gross domestic product spent on health in the United Kingdom has risen from 4.7 per cent. to 5.8 per cent. Between 1974 and 1979, the percentage of GDP spent on health in the United Kingdom fell from 4.8 per cent to 4.7 per cent.

I regret that there was an error in my oral reply of 11 February, Official Report, column 137. The correct figure for general and acute activity between 1974 and 1979, is an increase of 7 per cent. Since 1979, general and acute patient activity has increased by 80 per cent.

the number of doctors in England has increased by 23,000 since 1979

the number of qualified nurses and midwives has increased by around 55,000 since 1979

the number of dentists has increased by more than 6,000 since 1978

doctors' and dentists' average earnings have gone up by 74 per cent. in real terms compared with 0.1 per cent. between 1974 and 1979 nurses' average earnings have increased by 71 per cent. in real terms since 1979. Between 1974 and 1979, nurses' average earnings decreased by 3 per cent.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Recorders (Members of Parliament)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many hon. Members sit as a recorder or part-time recorder; what are the conditions under which they preside; and what is their remuneration. [15578]

Mr. Streeter: There are three hon. Members who sit as recorders; there are none who sit as assistant recorders. I have deposited a copy of the "Terms and Conditions of Service of Recorders" in the House of Commons Library. By custom, Members who are recorders do not either sit in their constituencies or hear cases remitted from their constituencies. As from 1 December 1996, recorders receive a fee of £366 for each day they sit.

Land Registration Act 1925

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 511, on the joint working party on reform of the Land Registration Act 1925, if he will list the dates on which the joint working party has met. [15450]

Mr. Streeter: The joint working party has met on seven occasions, as follows: 27 April 1994, 29 September 1994, 11 November 1994, 16 February 1995, 2 July 1996, 23 July 1996 and 23 October 1996.

Mr. Colin Balchin

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what factors underlie the delay in paying costs to Mr. Colin Balchin following his acquittal at Kingston crown court, case number TO960656. [14355]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Sir Julian Critchley, dated 13 February 1997

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the factors underlying the delay in paying costs to Colin Balchin.

As Mr. Balchin's claim exceeds £4000 it was sent to the Central Taxing Team (CTT) for taxation. The CTT aims to complete taxation within 3 months of receipt of all of the claims in a case. Mr. Balchin's claim was ready for taxation in early September but was not taxed until 31 January. The delay was caused by a 65 per cent. increase in the work of the CTT over the past year which has created a backlog. Efforts are being made to tackle this backlog and the arrears have been reduced since September.

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14944]

Mr. Streeter: On 2 December 1996, the new Bournemouth combined court centre was opened. The court provides improved facilities for both court users and staff in Bournemouth. This includes the Probate Service, which has previously used accommodation at the magistrates courts.

More broadly, while some of the policies of the Lord Chancellor's Department may have a particular effect in certain localities, they are generally designed to benefit the population at large.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Post Office Users Council for Northern Ireland

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members of the Post Office Users Council for Northern Ireland there are; how many of these are perceived to be from the Protestant community; and how many are members of (a) the Ulster Unionist party, (b) the Democratic Unionist party, (c) the Social and Democratic Labour Party and (d) the Alliance Party. [14687]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are currently six members of the Post Office Users Council for Northern Ireland, including the chairman. Information is not available on either their political or their religious affiliations.

Garden Birds (Export)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the number and type of British garden birds exported in each year since 1990 by (a) numbers, (b) species and (c) countries of destination. [15579]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested is not available from the United Kingdom overseas trade statistics because the system under which trade is recorded does not separately identify exports of garden birds.

Coal Industry

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent discussions (a) he and (b) his officials have had with the coal industry regarding its future; and if he will make a statement. [15880]

Mr. Page: My officials and I are frequently in contact with those engaged in the coal industry on a wide range of issues relating to its current performance and future prospects.

North-West Konver Working Group

Mr. Dover: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the members of the North-west Konver working group. [15612]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Members of the North-west Konver working group are as follows:

	Organisation
Chair Chris France	Acting Director Europe, Government Office North West
Secretariat Alex Findlay, Carole Lythall, Rob Shipway, Mike Warburton, Vernon Clarke

Members	Organisation
Mark Gallagher	European Commission
Pauline Herbert	Cumbria Training and Enterprise Council
Sheila Powell	Lancashire County Council
Colin Campbell	Chorley Borough Council
Tracey Morrison	Fylde Borough Council
Eric Hookway	Cumbria County Council
Tom Campbell	Barrow-in-Furness Borough Council
David Ingham	Carlisle Borough Council
Mark Ellison	Hyndburn Borough Council
Mike Dowden	Lancashire Enterprises Ltd. (LEL)
Roy Smith	LEL
Dr. Malcolm Green	British Aerospace Defence Ltd.
Harry Knowles	Furness Enterprise Ltd.
Michael Damms	East Lancs Chamber of Commerce
Roger Munns	Consortium of East Lancs Colleges
Jenny Booth	DfEE ESF Unit
Marcelle Janssis	DTI European Cohesion Division

Iraq (Trade Restrictions)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance has been given by his Department to British companies attending trade fairs in Iraq in 1996. [10748]

Mr. Nelson: The DTI offered no support for British companies to attend trade fairs in Iraq in 1996 under the trade fairs support scheme. However, following the limited lifting of UN sanctions in 1996, four licences were issued to a UK exhibition organiser to assist British companies participating in exhibitions covering the water industry, medical equipment, oil and gas and an international trade fair.

Prohibited Weapons (Export)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to monitor separately the export of those weapons prohibited under the term of the Firearms (Amendment) Bill. [14111]

Mr. Nelson: My Department does not monitor the subsequent export of licensed goods.

Privatised Utilities (Information)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what redress is available to shareholders who believe that information given by them to a utility has been revealed without their consent; and if he will make a statement; [15346]

(2) if he will make a statement on the circumstances in which a utility may divulge information given by shareholders for one purpose to a third party to be used for another purpose. [15344]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The privatised utilities are subject to the same laws concerning data protection as any publicly quoted company. Data protection legislation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department. I understand from him that the use of computerised personal data, including its disclosure, is governed by the Data Protection Act 1984. Responsibility for supervising and enforcing the Act lies with the Data Protection Registrar, to whom a complaint may be made if there is thought to have been a breach of the law.

Small Firms Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) pursuant to his answer of 7 November, Official Report, column 277, when he expects the completion of the criteria for potential lenders to the loan guarantee scheme; [13000]

(2) when he expects new specialist lenders in the technology sector to be added to the loan guarantee scheme's list of approved lenders. [12956]

Mr. Page [holding answer 27 January 1997]: Following detailed consideration, the criteria for new lenders for the loan guarantee scheme have been agreed. We will shortly be writing to potential lenders seeking information, particularly about their experience and expertise in lending within the technology sector.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many contracts his Department has had with consultants; and what has been the total cost in each year since 1979–80. [15370]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The number of external consultancy contracts let centrally by the Department of Trade and Industry, 1995–96, plus value—including contract amendments—is as follows:

Year	Number	Value (£)
1996	45	1,368,000

For information on contracts let centrally in 1990 to 1994, I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 18 July 1995, Official Report, column 1219.

Details for the years 1979 to 1989 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The information given does not include contracts let by the Department's executive agencies, and I have asked the chief executives to reply separately to this question.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 13 February 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the number of contracts The Insolvency Service has let to consultants and their total cost in each year since 1979–80.

Prior to 1994 contracts for consultants were let by the Department of Trade and Industry, and information relating to 1992 and 1993 was provided in the answer to Parliamentary Question No.146 put down by Ms Diane Abbott MP and dated 25 January 1994 (Columns 211–217). Information on consultancies prior to 1992 can only now be provided at disproportionate cots.

Details of those consultants The Service has engaged in each financial year since 1 April 1993, together with their costs, are:

Year	Organisation	Value (including VAT) £
1993–94	KPMG	45,000
	Ernst and Young	107,800
	BDO Stoy Hayward	76,670
1994–95	Price Waterhouse	124,800
	BDO Stoy Hayward	94,154
	Coopers and Lybrand	60,000
	Bond Pearce	10,100
	Ernst and Young	14,776
	Shreeveport	129,000
1995–96	Shreeveport	460,492
	Bevan Ashford	35,653
	Bond Pearce	6,392
	Ernst and Young	7,284

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 13 February 1997:

EXTERNAL CONSULTANTS ENGAGED BY THE RADIOCOMMUNICATIONS AGENCY

Mr Taylor, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Corporate and Consumer Affairs, has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question about external consultants.

The number, and cost, of contracts let by the Agency to external consultants since it assumed responsibility from the DTI for doing so is as follows:

FY 94/95 six contracts valued at £238k;

FY 95/96 eight contracts valued at £256k;

FY 96/97 six contracts (to date) valued at £380k.

Letter from John Holden to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 13 February 1997:

You recently tabled a Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade on consultancy contracts. I am replying as Chief Executive of Companies House Executive Agency.

In my letter in response to your similar question tabled on 14 October 1996, I set out the cost, at 1996/97 prices, of consultancy services provided to Companies House since 1992/93. The amounts in cash terms (ie money of the day) were as follows:

Year	£ thousand
1992–93	293
1993–94	172
1995–96	199

I regret that the information for earlier years can only be provided at disproportionate cost, since 1992/93 was the first full year for which Companies House operated its own free standing accounting systems. Companies House's use of consultants is mainly for specialist IT design and implementation and structural building matters. The expenditure is incurred with varying numbers of diverse specialists and the number of contracts with consultants (as opposed to the actual expenditure itself) cannot be determined with any accuracy within the time available. For example, in 1995/96 alone, some 90 payments are recorded on the accounting system. The overall pattern is one of a large number of relatively small payments, and it would take disproportionate effort to allocate each of these to particular contracts over the period.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 13 February 1997:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question about the contracts his Department has had with consultants.

1990/91 is the first year for which separate figures for NWML are available and the figures for the years since then are as follows:

Year	Number of contracts	Total cost (£000)
1990–91	0	—
1991–92	0	—
1992–93	1	7
1993–94	1	20
1994–95	0	—
1995–96	1	4
1996–97	0	—

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 13 February 1997:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about contracts placed with consultants.

The Patent Office has let 27 such contracts since 1990. The cost in each year has been 1990 £3,500, 1991 £4,700, 1992 £45,000, 1993 £46,000, 1994 £80,000, 1995 £138,000 and 1996 £99,700. I am unable to provide information for years earlier than 1990 without disproportionate cost.

Local Development Agencies

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what guidelines his Department issues to local development agencies in respect of them approaching companies in other areas to propose expansions or relocations away from their home areas; and what proposals he has to change these guidelines; [15645]

(2) what rules govern the operation of local development agencies. [15655]

Mr. Greg Knight: My Department does not provide grants or operate guidelines to local development agencies for domestic promotional activities. It does give grants to regional development organisations in England, whose task is to assist the Invest in Britain Bureau in promoting the benefits of the UK and their regions as a location for inward investment. Where investment grants may be available under the regional selective assistance scheme, there are guidelines which rule out support simply for jobs being transferred from one part of the country to another. Assistance would be available only to eligible expansion projects which led to a net national benefit.

TRANSPORT

Driving Standards Agency

Sir John Cope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his plans for establishing the Driving Standards Agency as a trading fund. [16140]

Sir George Young: I have today laid an order in draft which, subject to the approval of the House, will establish the Driving Standards Agency as a trading fund from 8 am on 1 April 1997.

Although driving test fees are set at a level to cover DSA's full costs, the agency currently surrenders all fee receipts to the Consolidated Fund and its expenditure is financed from my Department's vote. As a trading fund, the test fee receipts will become DSA's income.

Driving test candidates pay test fees several weeks in advance of taking the driving test. The DSA has estimated that it will be liable to conduct £7 million worth of driving tests from 1 April 1997 for which it will have surrendered test fee receipts to the Consolidated Fund. In order to establish the DSA as a trading fund with sufficient assets to cover its liabilities, some £7 million—equivalent to the fees paid in advance and surrendered to the Consolidated Fund—will be paid to the DSA on 1 April before the trading fund order takes effect.

Parliamentary approval of this payment will be sought in the main estimates for 1997–98 for the Department of Transport vote, class 5, vote 6. Pending that approval, the necessary sum will be met by a repayable advance from the Contingencies Fund.

London Underground (Blood Alcohol Tests)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with London Transport Underground management the introduction of the same system of random blood and alcohol level testing of staff members with safety responsibilities as is applied to railway company services. [15465]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for London Underground, which I understand already has a very comprehensive system of alcohol and drugs testing for employees with safety responsibilities, using breath and urine tests. This includes screening of all new employees as well as a programme of unannounced tests on a selected sample of safety critical staff.

Thames Bridge Construction

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussion his Department has had with Kvaerner about the construction of a Thames bridge to be funded by continuing the tolling on the existing Dartford–Thurrock crossing; and if he will make a statement. [15687]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 10 February, Official Report, column 62.

Aircraft Safety

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many British-based companies operate (a) passenger aircraft more than (i) 20 years old and (ii) 25 years old and (b) freight aircraft more than (i) 20 years old and (ii) 25 years old; and if he will make a statement; [15272]

(2) if he will make a statement on the safety record of aircraft operated by British-based companies. [15224]

Mr. Bowis: As of 10 February 1997, there were only four aircraft on the UK register of civil aircraft holding current transport category (cargo) certificates of airworthiness. Aircraft with transport category (passenger) certificates of airworthiness may be operated for any purpose, including the carriage of cargo; for this reason, the table does not distinguish between passenger and freight aircraft.

Aircraft over 5,700 kg maximum permitted take-off weight with a current transport category certificate of airworthiness

Construction date	Number of aircraft	Number of owners
1972–76 inclusive	37	24
Pre 1972	72	20

The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the safety regulation of UK registered aircraft. The CAA has comprehensive maintenance requirements which ensure the continued airworthiness of all aircraft and especially older aircraft which may need more intensive maintenance. The CAA has played a major role in identifying maintenance requirements for ageing aircraft and in helping to ensure that these steps are implemented internationally. The very high standards of safety which all UK operators must attain have resulted in a very good aviation safety record.

Railways (Targets)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received in respect of setting targets for (a) increasing rail freight and (b) levels of investment in the railways; and if he will make a statement. [15342]

Mr. Watts: None.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on the export of military equipment to Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [15203]

Mr. David Davis: We fully support United Nations Security Council resolution 1062 which expresses "serious concern about the modernisation and upgrading of military forces" on Cyprus. We will therefore grant licences for the export of equipment only to the military forces of either side on the island of Cyprus which we are satisfied does not fall within the following categories as defined by the EU common embargo list:

(a) Weapons designed to kill and their ammunition; or

(b) Weapons platforms; or

(c) Ancillary equipment which is specifically designed for use in conjunction with either (a) or (b).

Within this context, export licence applications will continue to be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Note: Among other items category (a) includes guns, bombs, torpedoes, rockets, missiles, fire control systems and tanks. Category (b) includes armed and armoured vehicles or vehicles with fitted mountings for arms, vessels of war, aircraft and helicopters.

HEALTH

Nerve Gas Attack (Japan)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what ways the Department of Health is intending to review and assess the clinical data of the long-term health effects arising out of the nerve gas attacks on the Tokyo subway and Matsumato in 1994 and 1995. [14417]

Mr. Horam: Department of Health officials have examined available published papers on the health outcomes of the incidents in Tokyo and Matsumoto, and will continue to do so as further work appears.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 758, what was the title of the conference attended by the official of his Department in July 1995; who were the organisers of this conference and where this conference was held; when the small working group is expected to finalise the guidance on managing the effects on health of incidents where chemicals have been deliberately released; and if this guidance will be made public. [14416]

Mr. Horam: The conference in question was the seminar on responding to the consequences of chemical and biological terrorism. It was sponsored by the United States public health service's office of emergency preparedness and was held at the uniformed services university of health sciences, Bethesda, Maryland. The small working group is aiming to complete its work by the end of July. The intention is to distribute the guidance to the national poisons information service and those who need it in the national health service, including public health and accident and emergency departments.

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14799]

Mr. Horam: Postcode areas are used in the analysis of data collected centrally in order to identify the health authority or local authority to which the data relates. The national health service uses a patient's postcode to identify which health authority is responsible for funding health care. Different data sets are reviewed on a regular basis, when the business need for the information is fully considered.

Neither the Department of Health nor any of its agencies use postcode data in formulae for the distribution of grants or awards.

GP Fundholder Appeals

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of GP fundholder appeals to the Department of Health in protest against the budgets allocated to them by health authorities between 1990–91 and 1995–96 were upheld. [14846]

Mr. Malone: Until April 1996, regional health authorities were statutorily responsible for determining general practitioner fundholder budgets. There was no formal right of appeal to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State against these budgets.

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research trials for the licensing of the drug Lariam were carried out on (a) women, other than service personnel, and (b) tourists going to countries subject to malaria, before the licensing of the drug in 1990; and what trials have been conducted subsequently, indicating the dates. [15195]

Mr. Malone: As for other medicines, information from research trials of Lariam (mefloquine) held by the Licensing Authority is confidential. Section 118 of the Medicines Act 1971 precludes the disclosure of confidential information received in pursuance of the Act.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlie the delay in publication of the Malaria Advisory Committee's new guidelines for the use of Lariam; what is the revised date of publication; and if he will make a statement. [15196]

Mr. Horam: The United Kingdom malaria guidelines are prepared by an informal group of experts. This group has no statutory status. We have been advised that this group of experts is preparing new guidelines. The consultation process is taking longer than anticipated. Publication will take place as soon as possible following finalisation of the consultation process.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence his Department has evaluated concerning the number and proportion of patients prescribed Lariam who visit overseas countries where malaria is prevalent and subsequently (a) contract malaria and (b) incur (i) severe and (ii) non-severe side-effects of the drug. [15192]

Mr. Horam: The number of cases of falciparum malaria reported in the United Kingdom since 1987 are given in the table. The table is subdivided to give the chemoprophylactic regimen stated in each case but information on compliance with this regimen is not available, nor is information on the number of people taking each different malaria prophylactic regimen.

Cases of falciparum malaria—excluding mixed infections—by stated chemoprophylactic regimen, reported in the United Kingdom to the Malaria Reference Laboratory:

	Mefloquine	Proguanil and Chloroquine	Other	None	Unknown	Total
1987	0	61	166	304	165	696
1988	0	138	256	407	224	1,025
1989	1	144	251	378	296	1,070
1990	1	162	169	452	275	1,059

	Mefloquine	Proguanil and Chloroquine	Other	None	Unknown	Total
1991	1	265	186	529	287	1,268
1992	4	168	102	422	239	935
1993	3	180	129	474	262	1,048
1994	16	114	109	541	398	1,178
1995	28	96	97	492	399	1,112
1996[1]	35	136	119	514	464	1,268

[1] 1996 data are provisional.

There are several possible reasons for the changes in the number of cases of malaria occurring with the different prophylaxis regimens. The number of cases may rise either because of increasing resistance by the malaria parasites or because more of the drug is being used and they may fall because of better compliance or because the drug is used by fewer people.

As for any licensed medicine, the Medicines Control Agency evaluates reports of suspected adverse drug reactions associated with Lariam (mefloquine) from the yellow card reporting scheme. However, often full details of the degree of the severity of side effects are not reported. In addition, worldwide information on adverse drug reactions from published literature, post-marketing studies and safety reports provided by the manufacturer are also evaluated, in order to ensure that the benefits of mefloquine in treating and preventing malaria outweigh the risks of developing an adverse drug reaction.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the scientific reports, with dates of publication, which provided the basis for granting a licence for the sale of Lariam in 1990 and (b) the scientific reports published since 1990 which are relevant to that licence. [15194]

Mr. Malone: The decision to grant a licence for Lariam was based on all the available evidence, published or unpublished and whether or not favourable to the application. The data submitted by the company was assessed by the Medicines Control Agency, which sought the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines, the Government's independent safety experts. The CSM were satisfied as to the safety, quality and efficacy of the product, the sole criteria under the Medicines Act 1968.

A large number of scientific reports are published relating to authorised medicines. As for all medicines, the Medicines Control Agency continuously reviews the published scientific reports in conjunction with other evidence that becomes available to ensure that the benefits of use outweigh the risk of developing adverse reactions.

Iron Deficiency (Children)

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding iron deficiency in children; and if he will make a statement. [14996]

Mr. Horam: We have received one letter since the beginning of the year. The prevalence of anaemia, which is the clinical manifestation of iron deficiency, has been monitored among young children by the "National Diet and Nutrition Survey (NDNS) of Children Aged 1½ to 4½ years" published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in 1995. Seven per cent. of males and 9 per cent. of females aged one and a half to four and a half years had haemoglobin levels less than 11g/dl.

On 2 January 1997, fieldwork for the NDNS of young people aged four to 18 years started. This will include measures of iron status. The joint Department of Health–Medical Research Council nutrition research programme will be funding research to help develop better measures of iron status.

The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy has agreed to convene an expert group to assess the iron status of the population. The group has not yet started work.

Dental Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists appeared before an NHS tribunal on the grounds that they breached their terms of service in each year since 1990. [15071]

Mr. Malone: Information is not collected centrally. However, details of the total number of cases, for all practitioners, is published in the annual report of the Council on Tribunals, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 767, how many deaths from food poisoning occurred in 1996 by category. [15136]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not yet available.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of (a) dysentery and (b) food poisoning there were in (i) York, (ii) North Yorkshire, (iii) Yorkshire and (iv) England in 1996. [15198]

Mr. Horam: Data on the number of cases of food poisoning and dysentery notified to the Office for National Statistics for 1996 are not yet available. Provisional figures for the first two quarters of 1996 have been published in "Quarterly Monitor (Series MB2) for Infectious Diseases" and copies are available in the Library. Provisional figures for the third quarter have been placed in the Library.

Eye Disease Treatment

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued on the availability of the Excimer process to improve vision and laser eye surgery to treat eye disease in the NHS. [15433]

Mr. Horam: It is for health authorities to decide what services should be made available to their residents following an assessment of their needs.

Pepper Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment of the health effects of pepper gas and the possible carcinogenic effects of capsaicin, has been made by the senior medical officers of the Department of Health since 1991; how many published and internal papers have been written by the Department's medical officers on this subject since 1991; and what are the current security classifications of these reports. [14385]

Mr. Horam: A single report on pepper spray was prepared by the Department of Health in 1993. This is unclassified. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Skin Diseases

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people (a) were treated for and (b) died from (i) skin cancer and (ii) other skin-related ailments in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [15335]

Mr. Horam: Information on the number of people treated for skin cancer is not available. Data on deaths certified as due to malignant melanoma of the skin (ICD* 172) and other skin cancer (ICD*173), as well as deaths from non-cancerous skin diseases (ICD*680–709), can be found in table 2 of the Office for National Statistics annual publication "Mortality statistics: cause", series DH2, numbers 18 and 19 (for 1991 and 1992) and in tables 3 and 4 of "Mortality statistics: cause" 1993 (revised) and 1994, series DH2, number 21. Copies are available in the Library.

Research Units

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total funding which each of the research units, funded by his Department, will receive from his Department in 1996–97; and if he will place a copy of each unit's programme of work in the Library and give the start and end dates of each unit's new contract. [15445]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is in the table.

Unit	Allocation 1996–97 £000	New Contract start date	End date
Dartington Social Research Unit (University of Bristol)	565	January 1996	December 2000
Personal Social Services Research Unit (University of Kent)	1,230	April 1996	March 2001
Cancer Screening Evaluation Unit (University of London)	429	January 1996	December 2000
Clinical Operational Research Unit (University of London)	210	January 1996	December 2000
Social Medicine and Health Services Research Unit (University of London)	478	January 1996	December 2000
Thomas Coram Research Unit (University of London)	702	January 1996	December 2000
National Primary Care Research and Development Centre (University of Manchester)	1,550	January 1995	December 2004
National Institute for Social Work (University of Manchester)	417	January 1996	December 2000
Childhood Cancer Research Group (University of Oxford)	372	April 1996	December 2000
National Perinatal Epidemiology Unit (University of Oxford)	728	January 1996	December 2000
Medical Care Research Unit (University of Sheffield)	333	January 1996	December 2000
Centre for Health Economics (University of York)	338	August 1996	July 2001
Social Policy Research Unit (University of York)	417	January 1996	December 2000

Programmes of work will be placed in the Library shortly.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the funding allocated by his Department for research into skin diseases for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [15270]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health policy research programme has provided funding for research on skin cancer only in each of the last five years as follows:

1993–94	31
1994–95	84
1995–96	75
1996–97	339

[1] Estimate.

Mental Health

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of registered mentally handicapped people in community care in each council area in England; and if he will make a statement. [15319]

Mr. Burns: Information is not collected centrally on the number of registered people with learning disabilities—mental handicap—in community care in each council area. The prevalence of severe learning disability in England is estimated as being in the order of three to four per 1,000 members of the general population. The majority live in the community and will receive varying levels of support from the statutory authorities.

Skin Ailments

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the funding allocated for research into psoriasis for each of the last five years for which figures are available, and if he will make a statement. [15269]

Mr. Horam: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the Department of Trade and Industry. In 1995–96, the MRC gave a project grant of £30,000 to Glasgow university for its "Molecular Genetic Analysis of Familial Psoriasis" project.

The MRC is an independent body deciding what research to support on its own expert judgment. The council is always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications.

The national health service research and development health technology assessment programme has recently issued a call for proposals for a systematic review of different treatments for severe psoriasis.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health authority area the number of patients treated for skin ailments in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [15334]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health does not collect figures on the numbers of patients treated for a condition or range of conditions. Figures are collected on the number of finished consultant episodes by specific medical condition. These are available from the annual hospital episode statistics published by the Department of Health, copies of which are available in the Library.

Sheffield Health Authority

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much public money was allocated to Sheffield health authority in (a) 1979 and (b) 1996–97. [15340]

Mr. Horam: The cash limit for Sheffield area health authority in 1979–80 is not directly comparable with that for Sheffield health authority in 1996–97 due to the reorganisation of the national health service. The final cash limit for Sheffield area health authority in 1979–80 was £79.177 million. The current cash limit for Sheffield health authority in 1996–97 is £367.130 million.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctors in England are routinely working hours above those set out in the "new deal". [15907]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 24 January 1996, columns 767-68.

Blood

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much blood from the national transfusion service was sold to the private sector in 1995 and 1996. [15502]

Mr. Horam: Blood itself is never sold, although a handling charge is made to hospitals, whether private or national health service, to cover the costs of collecting, testing, processing and delivery blood. Information about the amount of blood supplied to the private sector is not available centrally.

WALES

Health Service Staff

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) doctors and (b) nurses were employed in NHS hospitals in (i) Clwyd and (ii) Powys in each year since 1990; and if he will make a statement. [14890]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is given in the following table. Data for 1990 to 1992 are available only for each former health authority area as a whole while data for later years are shown by individual NHS trusts within the authority boundary. The small number of nursing and midwifery staff employed by North Wales health authority cannot be split into the former Clwyd and Gwynedd authorities. As information for nursing staff working in hospitals is not available separately, total nursing and midwifery staff numbers are given.

Whole-time equivalent number of staff in post at 30 September.

Salmon

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of reports prepared by (a) the National Rivers Authority and (b) the Environment Agency on the impact of drift net fishing off the west coast of Ireland on the salmon population in Wales. [15133]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Reports by the National Rivers Authority and the Environment Agency on the impact of the Irish drift net fishery on salmon stocks in Welsh and English rivers form part of the assessment work being carried out by a joint working party made up of Government fisheries scientists, the Environment Agency and the Irish Department of the Marine. This group is expected to report before the end of the year.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in respect of the impact of driftnet fishing in the Irish Sea on the number of salmon returning to Welsh rivers; and if he will make a statement. [15135]

Mr. Evans: In the period since June 1995, several representations have been received from Welsh salmon fishery organisations and other interested bodies about the impact of the Irish driftnet fishery on salmon in Welsh and English rivers.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact on Welsh rivers of drift netting in the Irish sea. [15066]

Mr. Evans: Recent reports indicate that the Irish driftnet fishery does exploit salmon originating from some rivers in Wales and England. The Irish Government have implemented some measures intended to reduce levels of exploitation in the driftnet fishery. Further work to evaluate the levels of exploitation is being carried out by a joint working group which includes the Irish Department of the Marine. The group is expected to report before the end of the year.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact on Welsh rivers of the recent measures introduced by the Irish Government relating to fishing in the North sea. [15068]

Mr. Evans: It is too early to assess the likely impact of recent measures introduced by the Irish Government to restrict salmon exploitation by commercial netsmen. The situation will be closely monitored.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on trends in the numbers of salmon and trout in Welsh rivers over the last 10 years. [15067]

Mr. Evans: Catch data provide an approximate index of the abundance of salmon and migratory trout entering Welsh rivers. Over the 10 year period to 1995 there is evidence of a decline in the declared catches of both these species.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on proposals for confining salmon netting within river headlands. [15237]

Mr. Evans: The Environment Agency's salmon management strategy states that exploitation of salmon should take place, as far as possible, where the stock is from a single river. In Wales, the Environment Agency has applied this principle by introducing measures which aim to phase out salmon netting outside river headlands.

Power Stations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the environmental impact of the (a) PowerGen and (b) National Power power stations in Connah's quay, Deeside. [15148]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Environment Agency monitors the impact of emissions on the local environment. The integrated pollution control register, held by the relevant regional and area offices of the Environment Agency, contains information about each authorisation issued and the results of monitoring required under the terms of the authorisation.

Air Pollution

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to reduce air pollution. [15141]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government have put in place a number of mechanisms to control pollution which apply throughout the UK. The Environment Act 1990 introduced two systems for controlling polluting emissions from industry: integrated pollution control, which limits emissions to all environmental media from large installations; and local air pollution control, covering emissions to air from small and medium sized plant.

The draft UK national air quality strategy, issued in August 1996, sets out the Government's proposals for air quality policy and includes standards and objectives for all the main air pollutants. The Strategy builds on the requirements of the Environment Act 1995 which includes a new system of local air quality management. Under the Act, local authorities will be required to review and assess air quality in their areas. We are preparing guidance for local authorities to assist them with their new air quality management duties.

Roseate Tern

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment has he made of the numbers of roseate tern in Wales over the last 10 years; what plans he has to encourage the growth of the roseate tern population in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [15062]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Roseate tern numbers are counted annually. The last 10 years data show that numbers have declined to virtual extinction within Wales and an action plan under the biodiversity programme will be prepared.

Child Care

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the provision of child care facilities for (a) students and (b) staff in further and higher education in Wales; [15130]

(2) what assessment he has made of the organisation and financing of child care facilities in further and higher education in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [15069]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None. The provision of child care facilities for students and staff in further and higher education is a matter for individual institutions.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the adequacy of provision of (a) short-term sessional and (b) out of school child care schemes for (i) staff and (ii) students at further and higher education establishments in Wales. [15061]

Mr. Evans: It is for individual further and higher education institutions to assess the adequacy of child care provision for their staff and students in the light of patterns of recruitment and retention, and the availability of resources.

Health Authority Finance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce the final allocation of finance for health authorities in Wales for 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [15394]

Mr. Hague: I will announce the 1997–98 health authority allocations very shortly.

Osiris Network

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 7 February, Official Report, column 757, if Siemens Business Services gave a discount to his Department on computer hardware under the Osiris contract as a consequence of its receipt of the old computer hardware stock of his Department [15690]

Mr. Hague: No. The Osiris contract is for the provision of services, not for the supply of hardware.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 7 February, Official Report, column 757, what consultations he had with (a) education institutions and (b) training and enterprise councils before the decision to dispose of his Department's computer hardware stock via Siemens Business Services. [15691]

Mr. Hague: None. Some of the equipment is in use within the Welsh Office and will remain so, managed under the Osiris contract. The majority of the personal computers are obsolete, and it would be difficult or impossible to maintain them.

The equipment does not belong to the Welsh Office: the transfer of assets formed part of the Osiris contract and was reflected in the pricing structure of the contract. Siemens Business Services and the Welsh Office have a joint review process to make sure that the more recent equipment will be redeployed in the most cost-effective way, taking account of the constraints of existing software licences and of security issues. Where possible, Siemens Business Services will use the present computer hardware and peripherals as part of, or in support of the Osiris system. Where this is not possible, the equipment wil be made secure for disposal: this entails removing all hard disk drives and software. Any subsequent user would have to purchase new items to replace these. The method of disposal will depend upon the type and age of the equipment, but might include transfer to educational or training bodies where appropriate.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information is available from his Department to grant-maintained schools on (a) addresses of potential pupils in the school's neighbourhood and elsewhere, (b) sources of finance and (c) the nursery voucher scheme. [15582]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Department does not collect names and addresses of pupils/potential pupils of any schools in Wales. Grant-maintained schools are informed of the grants available from the Department for capital and revenue purposes related to the school. No information as to sources of external funding is given.

In connection with the nursery voucher scheme, grant-maintained primary schools have been sent directly the detailed guide for providers; its update, the Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales. "Desirable Outcomes for Children's Learning Before Compulsory School Age"; a provider application form and copies of the "Basic Facts for Parents" leaflet. Grant-maintained schools registered for the scheme will also be receiving a registered providers' pack, which will include advice on the interaction of voucher income with their existing funding arrangements. Grant-maintained schools, along with other providers, can also contact the nursery voucher helpline or the department for further advice.

North Gwent Mental Health Project

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of the north Gwent mental health private finance initiative project. [15689]

Mr. Hague: Gwent Community Health NHS trust, with the agreement of Gwent health authority, is discussing a revised, small scheme with the private sector following concerns expressed by local general practitioners about the original proposals.

Chief Inspector of Schools

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who is to be appointed as chief inspector in the office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales, following the retirement of Mr. R. L. James. [16093]

Mr. Hague: By Order in Council, which will be laid before the House in the normal way, Miss Susan Lewis has been appointed chief inspector. She will take up her post on 1 June.

Police Forces (Finance)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact on council tax rates in Wales of the revenue and capital settlements for 1997–98 for Welsh police forces; and if he will make a statement. [14138]

Mr. Hague: For 1997–98, the proportion of settlement spending met by central Government support has increased. This means that the proportion to be met by council tax has decreased. The actual level of council tax set by police authorities will depend on the extent to which they budget above my plans.

Driftnet Fishing

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has made to the Irish Government concerning the potential impact of the changes in driftnet fishing regulations on Welsh anglers; and if he will make a statement. [15138]

Mr. Hague: None. I welcome the changes recently announced by the Irish Government on new driftnet fishing regulations which are intended to reduce the level of exploitation of salmon.

DEFENCE

Royal Irish Regiment

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many full-time soldiers there are in the Royal Irish Regiment; and how many of these serve only in Northern Ireland. [15470]

Mr. Soames: The number of full-time trained personnel serving with the Royal Irish Regiment on 1 January 1997 was 3,540.

	Officers	Soldiers	Total
Royal Irish General Service	119	614	733
Royal Irish Home Service	101	2,706	2,807
Total	220	3,320	3,540

The RIHS serve only in Northern Ireland.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the proposal from Belarus and Ukraine for a central and eastern European nuclear free zone at the 1995 extension and review conference of the non-proliferation treaty as an alternative to the eastwards expansion of NATO; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's response to the proposal. [15332]

Mr. David Davis: I have been asked to reply.

As my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development stated in another place on 18 June 1996, column 22, NATO countries continue to believe that nuclear deterrence makes an essential contribution to preserving peace and stability in Europe. We have made our position clear to both the Ukrainians and the Belarusians. However, NATO Foreign Ministers announced on 10 December 1996 that NATO had no intention, no plan and no reason to deploy nuclear weapons on the territory of new members.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1995, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14943]

Mr. Freeman: Within the Cabinet Office, the Office of Public Service has responsibility for improving the efficiency of Government and public services for deregulation and for the competitiveness agenda. Clearly, the success of the Government's policies on competitiveness and deregulation impacts on small businesses in the Bournemouth area. Similarly, the citizens charter initiative also impacts on the public services in the area. In 1995, Dorset Health Care NHS trust was awarded a chartermark for its service to the community.

Notes on Clauses

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will assess the advantages of publishing the notes on clauses relating to Bills. [15230]

Mr. Freeman: The notes on clauses prepared for Ministers taking a Bill through the House are, by convention, usually also made available to members of the relevant Standing Committee and to other interested Members. They are not formally published, but are in the public domain and copies can be made available to others on request.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what (a) controls, (b) monitoring and (c) guidance exist in respect of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [15610]

Mr. Freeman: Non-departmental public bodies are established to operate at arm's length from Government, often under specific statutory powers. An NDPB's governing board is responsible for the management and control of the body's functions.

Ministers and their Departments are responsible for monitoring the performance of the NDPBs they sponsor, and for ensuring that they operate within the framework of controls set out in the Treasury and Cabinet Office guidance "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: A Guide for Departments".

Guidance on best practice on the procurement and management of external consultants is contained in the efficiency unit scrutiny report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants", which is available to all NDPBs.

House of Commons Disqualification Act

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for what purpose it is proposed to alter part IV of schedule 1 of the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 to provide for the omission from the schedule of Her Majesty's lord-lieutenant or lieutenant for an island area in Scotland. [15575]

Mr. Bates: Under the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994, all lieutenancy areas in Scotland became known as "areas" rather than "island areas" or "regions", with the exception of the four city areas. The amendments proposed to part IV of schedule 1 to the House of Commons Disqualification Act reflect this and propose consolidating the disqualification provisions relating to lord-lieutenants and lieutenants for island areas in Scotland and lord-lieutenants and lieutenants for the Scottish regions under a single entry. The existing entry of Her Majesty's lord-lieutenant and lieutenant for an island area in Scotland could therefore be removed from the schedule.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for what reasons the proposed amendment to part I of schedule 1 of the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 does not add the office of recorder or part-time recorder. [15576]

Mr. Bates: The House has accepted, for many years, the position whereby hon. and right hon. Members may also serve as recorders or assistant recorders. It has long been recognised that it is not only compatible with being a Member of Parliament to practice some other profession or occupation, but that it can be a positive advantage both to the individual Member and to the House as a whole.

Those hon. and right hon. Members who are recorders or assistant recorders, however, do not by custom either sit in their constituencies or hear cases remitted from their constituencies.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which offices of Her Majesty's lord-lieutenant or lieutenant are existing offices of disqualification under the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975; and what is the geographical jurisdiction of those offices. [15577]

Mr. Bates: Part IV of schedule 1 to the House of Commons Disqualification Act 1975 lists the offices of Her Majesty's lord-lieutenants and lieutenants whose holders are currently disqualified from becoming Members of the House of Commons. The jurisdiction of these offices extend to the county, area or city for which the lord-lieutenant is appointed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Hepatitis B Vaccination

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the level of incidence of liver diseases in children; what proposals he has to incorporate hepatitis B vaccination in the immunisation programme; and if he will make a statement. [14681]

Sir John Wheeler: Information on the incidence of liver disease is not available. However, 43 cases involving persons aged under 16 years were treated in hospital for liver conditions during the year 1995–96. Current policy is to recommend immunisation against hepatitis B in individuals who are at increased risk of hepatitis B because of their lifestyle, occupation or other factors such as close contact with a case or carrier. Any changes in this policy would depend on the advice of the joint committee on vaccination and immunisation which advises all four UK health Departments on matters concerning immunisation.

Regent House Grammar School, Newtownards

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the proposals to extend Region House grammar school, Newtownards. [14682]

Mr. Ancram: Plans to extend and refurbish the existing school premises are being taken forward by the South-Eastern education and library board. The scheme is approaching final sketch plan stage and, when it has reached that stage, it can be considered for a place in the school building programme in light of the resources available.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many cold weather payments have been made in Northern Ireland during the current winter broken down by the station involved in triggering the payment; [14899]

(2) if he will list the cost of cold weather payments and the number of recipients of the payments for each weather station in Northern Ireland in each year since 1986; [14900]

(3) if he will list the weather stations in Northern Ireland which provide data used in determining cold weather payments. [14898]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 11 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about Cold Weather Payments.

There are four Meteorological Office sites in Northern Ireland which supply the data used to determine if a cold weather period has been recorded or is forecast. They are located in Aldergrove and Lisburn, County Antrim, Carmoney, County Londonderry and St. Angelo, County Fermanagh.

Since the Agency was established in July 1991, the first cold weather period was triggered in the winter of 1995. Unfortunately, statistics on the number and cost of cold weather payments are not available in the format requested and to obtain this information would involve an extensive clerical exercise at a disproportionate cost. I can provide, however, the number of computer issued payments for each Social Security Office in 1995/96 and to date in 1996/97. Tables are attached showing these figures. Statistics on the clerically issued payments are not available.

The total number of Cold Weather Payments issued in Northern Ireland so far this winter is 134,288 which equates to a cash figure of £1,141,448.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

Moseys Arch, Killyleagh

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who owns the footway and steps known as Moseys arch between High street and Frederick street in Killyleagh, County Down; how many and which people have made representations to the Housing Executive to have this public right-of-way closed by initiating an extinguishing order; and if he will make a statement. [14840]

Sir John Wheeler: I am advised that the Northern Ireland Housing Executive owns most of the footway and steps known as Mosey's arch, but part of the land may be in private ownership.

The Housing Executive has also advised that the initial request for an extinguishment order came from the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Since then, both the Department and the Housing Executive have received further representations from local residents in support of, or in opposition to, the extinguishment of the right of way.

The next stage in the process is for the Housing Executive to try to resolve the objections. If that proves impossible, the matter will be referred to the Department, which may then decide to hold a public local inquiry to hear the objections to the extinguishment order.

Stalking

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many groups and individuals responded to the consultation paper on stalking and if he will list them; and how many and which proposed separate legislation for Northern Ireland. [14836]

Sir John Wheeler: Responses were received from 11 groups, none of which proposed separate legislation for Northern Ireland. They were:

Democratic Unionist Party

Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights

Equal Opportunities Commission for Northern Ireland

Northern Ireland Women's Aid Federation

Soroptimist International of Dungannon

Soroptimist International of Downpatrick

Soroptimist International of Bangor

Women's Forum Northern Ireland

Police Federation for Northern Ireland

The Queen's University of Belfast, Faculty and School of Law

Probation Board for Northern Ireland.

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulae for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14804]

Sir John Wheeler: In Northern Ireland, the Department of Health and Social Services collects data broken down by postcode area in relation to patient treatment and the processing of benefit claims. This provides the basis of aggregation for research and issues which have a geographic dimension. Postcodes are used by the Social Security Agency in delineating which areas qualify for special cold weather payments to the elderly. The delineation of areas is reviewed each year.

The Training and Employment Agency collects most of its programme monitoring data on the basis of postcodes. This process has recently been introduced and therefore has not yet been reviewed.

The Department of the Environment uses postcode areas for the selection of sampling points for the measurement of drinking water quality and radon levels, and for the collection of data on retail outlet usage, urban development grant and the "Making Belfast Work" initiative. The use of postcode areas for these purposes has not been reviewed.

Drinks Licences

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the numbers of drinks licences in Northern Ireland presently in existence, by type, and specify the annual income received from issue of these licences and the costs of their administration in the last year for which figures are available. [14841]

Sir John Wheeler: For the period ended 31 December 1995, the last complete year for which figures are available, the number of drink licences in force in Northern Ireland, by type, was as follows:

Category of licence	Number of licences
Public houses	1,642
Off licences	322
Hotels	150
Restaurants	294
Place of public entertainment	10
Refreshment room in public transport premises	13
Seamen's canteen	3
Non-seagoing vessel	1

Figures supplied by the Northern Ireland Court Service indicate that a total of £742,559 in fees income was derived from the issue of licences and their associated applications during the financial year April 1995 to March 1996. This total is made up as follows:

Magistrates court: £692,109

County court: £50,450.

I am advised that the cost of administering the grant and renewal of liquor licences is part of the overall cost of civil business in the county and magistrates courts. Costs as between the different types of civil business are not maintained.

Building Societies and Banks (Employees)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are employed by (a) the Irish Permanent building society, (b) the National bank, (c) the First National building society, and (d) the ICS building society; and how many employees in each of these companies are perceived to be (i) Roman Catholic and (ii) Protestant. [15320]

Mr. Ancram: Since none of these companies is currently registered with the Fair Employment Commission, the commission has no figure available to show the number of persons employed by the companies or their perceived religion.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons in each parliamentary constituency area in receipt of disability living allowance; [15322]

(2) how many persons in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area are in receipt of severe disablement allowance; [15326]

(3) how many persons in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area are in receipt of incapacity benefit; [15330]

(4) how many persons in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area are in receipt of industrial injuries disablement benefit; [15328]

(5) how many persons in each district council area are in receipt of disability living allowance; [15323]

(6) how many persons in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area have received social fund maternity payments in each of the last three years; [15327]

(7) how many persons in each (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area are in receipt of one-parent benefit. [15329]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a response to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. John Taylor, dated 13 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the number of people in receipt of various benefits in each district council area and parliamentary constituency.

I have attached tables showing the number of people in receipt of Severe Disablement Allowance, Incapacity Benefit and Disability Living Allowance in each constituency and district council area. Unfortunately, information on Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit, One Parent Benefit and Social Fund Maternity Payments is not held in the format requested.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide any further information you require.

Handguns

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which type or make of centre-fired pistols or revolvers cannot be readily dismantled; and how many of these are licensed in Northern Ireland. [15247]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government accept that handguns in general can be disassembled with varying degrees of practicability. This will depend not only on the design of the gun but also on the skill and dexterity of the owner. At the end of November 1996, there were 12,808 licensed centre-fire handguns in Northern Ireland.

Department of the Environment (Compensation)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons in each parliamentary constituency have successfully claimed for compensation against the Department of Environment in the last three years; [15324]

(2) how many persons in each district council area have successfully claimed for compensation against the Department of Environment in each of the last three years. [15325]

Sir John Wheeler: It is not feasible to identify claims against the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) by parliamentary or district council area. However, throughout Northern Ireland, the following numbers of claimants against the Department of the Environment were successful.

	Settlements (prior to court hearing)	Court awards	Total
1993–94	936	174	1,110
1994–95	1,256	141	1,397

Hospital and Nursing Home Beds

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each year since 1979 the numbers of (a) registered beds and (b) occupied beds in (i) registered private hospitals/clinics, (ii) registered private nursing homes and (iii) all registered establishments in Northern Ireland, showing separately those which were for (1) acute specialties, (2) mental illness, (3) people with learning difficulties, (4) people with physical disabilities, (5) maternity and (6) other purposes. [15457]

Sir John Wheeler: Details of occupied beds in nursing homes, private hospitals and clinics are not available centrally. The first table shows the number of available beds in private hospitals and clinics from 1991. These are the earliest dates for which the information is available centrally. These figures do not include bed availability for acute specialties and maternity services provided by private hospitals and clinics, which are not collected centrally.

The second table lists the number of available beds in voluntary and private residential accommodation since 1979 and the numbers of occupied beds in voluntary and private residential accommodation up to and including 1987, the last year for which central figures on occupied beds in this category were collected, other than in the case of children's homes.

Local Government Finance

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce a relief scheme to assist non-domestic ratepayers whose bills will be increased following revaluation. [16173]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government intend to assist small businesses which have experienced relatively large increases in rateable value. To qualify for relief, a business will have to meet two criteria. First, the net annual value of the property shown in the valuation list on 1 April 1997 must not exceed £10,000. Secondly, the rate bill which would be levied on the property in each of the three years following revaluation must, before any rate relief is applied, be at least 25 per cent. higher than it would have been in that year—the base year—if the revaluation had not taken place.

Relief will be available during the three years 1997–98, 1998–99 and 1999–2000. The amount of relief allowed in any individual case will be based on the difference between the rate bill which is actually received by the ratepayer and an amount 25 per cent. or more above the base year amount—the revaluation effect. The full revaluation effect will be abated in the first year of the scheme, two thirds in the second year and one third in the third year. The full rate will be payable in the fourth year after the revaluation.

Rate accounts for 1997–98 will be adjusted before issue to reflect any relief to which ratepayers are entitled. No ratepayer will need to apply for relief under the scheme.

SCOTLAND

Judicial Reviews

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many decisions by his Department were challenged through judicial review in Session 1995–96; and in how many cases (a) the Department's decision was upheld by the court, (b) the court found for the applicant, (c) the Department submitted to the judgment and (d) the Department appealed successfully against the judicial review decision. [14374]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: During session 1995–96, 10 decisions were challenged by judicial review in the Court of Session; and (a) two decisions were upheld by the court; (b) and (c), one of these decisions was not defended by the Secretary of State and accordingly the judicial review petition was successful; and (d) none were appealed. Of the remaining seven cases, four judicial review petitions were withdrawn and three are yet to be decided by the court.

Scottish Charities Office

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the powers of the Scottish Charities Office to recover funds which may have been inappropriately used by registered charities. [14925]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Charities Office has no power under the legislation to recover funds. The Court of Session may make an order requiring any bank or other person holding money or securities on behalf of a recognised charity or of any person concerned in its control and management not to part with the money or securities without the court's approval. The full powers of the Court of Session are set out in section 7 of the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990.

Songbirds

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the summer use of (a) organophosphates and (b) pyrethroids on the numbers and range of songbirds. [14677]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 12 February 1997]: The Department of the Environment and the Joint Nature Conservation Committee commissioned a consortium, comprising Oxford University and a number of nature conservation organisations including the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, to carry out a review of available information on the indirect effects of pesticides on farmland birds. The results are expected to be published later this year.

Rights of Way

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to strengthen the law in relation to the protection of rights of way in Scotland. [15668]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government wish to promote responsible access to Scotland's countryside and considers that this can better be achieved through voluntary arrangements than by legislation. Established rights of way are already protected in law. In general, other access issues are better tackled through initiatives such as the access concordat concluded last year, and Scottish Natural Heritage's "Paths for All" project.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he proposes to introduce to ensure the take-up of nursery vouchers in remote areas with small numbers of pre-school children. [15500]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information so far is that take-up of pre-school vouchers in the four pilot areas has been extremely high—over 97 per cent. overall, and higher in the remoter Argyll and Bute and Highland pilot areas. About 93 per cent. of parents with vouchers are also using them. In the pilots, playgroups have often been key providers in rural areas, and we are taking action, specially through activity by national development officers and support to the Scottish Pre-School Play Association, to help rural playgroups meet the stringent quality standards which we require before they may redeem vouchers.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the Stirling university study of pilot nursery voucher schemes about the (a) take-up of vouchers and (b) availability of nursery places within the scheme in remote areas with small numbers of pre-school children. [15501]

Mr. Robertson: The four pre-school voucher pilot schemes are proving highly successful: over 97 per cent. of parents there have taken up vouchers, and despite a low level of provision before the pilots began, 93 per cent. of these have been able to use them. The formal independent evaluation of the pilots commissioned from Stirling university has, in accordance with my commitments to the House last year, given priority to operational matters. I welcome the December interim report of the evaluation. Although results are as yet provisional, this shows a very positive response from parents, and has enabled us to make some significant improvements to procedures before national implementation. Though the pilots cover a range of rural areas, including Caithness, Badenoch and Strathspey, parts of Argyll and Bute and Arran, the researchers have not yet addressed issues relating to rural provision. They are expected to do so before submitting their final report in August 1997.

Feudal System (Abolition)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Lord Advocate has given approval to the Scottish Law Commission to give high priority in its fifth programme to the abolition of the feudal system; and if he will make a statement. [15495]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Law Commission has been considering abolition of the feudal system as part of its fourth programme of law reform. I understand that my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has, at my request, said to the Scottish Law Commission that this should be treated as a matter of priority in any fifth programme. Until such time as the Scottish Law Commission's fifth programme of law reform has been presented to Parliament, it would not be proper for me to make a statement on its contents.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has received from the Scottish Law Commission as to the likely time for the receipt of its final recommendations on the abolition of the feudal system. [15496]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I expect the Scottish Law Commission's fifth programme of law reform to be presented to Parliament in the near future. A timetable for the completion of the commission's report on the abolition of the feudal system will be part of the programme but, until such time as the programme has been presented to Parliament, it would not be proper for me to make a statement on its contents.

Fish Farming

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding he is making available for research into the farming of different fish species; where such work is being conducted; and what findings have been received to date. [15497]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office spends around £1 million a year at the Marine Laboratory in Aberdeen on research into the farming of different fish species, including the control of diseases and parasites. Research findings are described in the Marine Laboratory's published annual reviews.

European Council

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of European Union Council meetings held in each year from 1979 to 1996, indicating the number (a) attended by Ministers from the Scottish Office and (b) at which Ministers from the Scottish Office are minuted as having spoken. [13892]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 31 January 1997]: The information is as follows:

	Total number of Council Ministers meetings[1]	Scottish Office Minister attendance
1979	60	—
1980	63	—
1981	62	—
1982	70	—
1983	80	—
1984	80	—
1985	73	—
1986	79	—
1987	81	—
1988	77	5
1989	87	4
1990	91	4
1991	84	5
1993	98	8
1994	94	8
1996	88	15

Records of the meetings attended by Scottish Office Ministers between 1979 and 1988 were not collated and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The records of Council meetings do not attribute individual contributions.

TREASURY

Income Tax

12. Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on income tax levels. [14183]

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received a number of representations welcoming the income tax cuts in the Budget. We now have the lowest headline rate of tax for 60 years and more than a quarter of all taxpayers pay tax at only 20p in the pound.

Tax Allowances (Teachers)

13. Mr. Day: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding tax allowances for teachers who carry out work at home. [14184]

Mr. Jack: A limited number of representations have been received from teachers.

Mortgage Tax Relief

14. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to maintain mortgage tax relief at existing levels; and if he will make a statement. [14185]

Mr. Jack: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his 1995 Budget speech, mortgage interest relief will remain unchanged for the lifetime of this Parliament. Beyond that, the level of mortgage interest relief is a matter to be considered each year in the Budget.

Business Investment

16. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about prospects for business investment in 1997. [14187]

Mr. Waldegrave: The prospects for business are excellent. The Government's policies have produced low inflation and steady growth, and low interest and tax rates. Demand has strengthened and profitability is high. The latest CBI and British chambers of commerce surveys show that companies are expecting to increase investment in plant and machinery in 1997. The current climate is one in which businesses can expand and invest with confidence.

Business Taxation

17. Mr. Mans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of current levels of business taxation. [14188]

Mr. Jack: In 1995–96, total tax on business raised £63.2 billion, 25 per cent. of total taxes and social security contributions. The UK tax burden on business is the lowest of the major European economies and is among the lowest in the G7. Low tax rates help to make the UK the No. 1 destination for inward investment into the EU.

VAT (Fuel)

18. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenues from VAT on fuel for each of the first two quarters of 1997–98. [14190]

Mr. Oppenheim: No forecasts are made of VAT receipts at this level of disaggregation.

Taxation

19. Mr. Legg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact on the United Kingdom economy of the level of taxation in the United Kingdom relative to that in other major EU countries. [14191]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The overall burden of taxation on the economy in the United Kingdom was 35.75 per cent. of GDP in 1995–96. This represents one of the very lowest levels in Europe and is below that of France, Germany and Italy.

The Government are committed to low taxation and a tax system that raises revenue in ways that do least damage to the economy and encourage enterprise.

Investment

20. Mr. Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current investment levels in the United Kingdom. [14192]

Mrs. Angela Knight: UK businesses have invested more in relation to GDP in the 1990s than in the 1980s, having invested more in the 1980s than in the 1970s. In setting the right climate of low inflation and steady growth, the Government's economic policies are encouraging business to expand and invest with confidence.

Single Currency (Convergence Criteria)

22. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic consequences to the United Kingdom of entering a single currency in circumstances when the convergence criteria have not been fully met by each of the participating countries. [14194]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: For the single currency area to be successful, there must be a high degree of sustainable economic convergence among the countries participating. If the single currency were to proceed without reliable convergence, we would not be part of it.

Mortgage Interest Relief

23. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he expects to be the cost of the mortgage interest relief at source scheme in the current year; and if he will make a statement. [14195]

Mr. Jack: In 1996–97, the estimated total cost of mortgage interest relief is about £2.3 billion, of which £2.2 billion is given through the MIRAS scheme.

These figures are provisional. They are based on the assumption, by convention, of no change from the current estimated average building society interest rate of 6.43 per cent.

VAT

24. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's current estimate of revenue from VAT for the current financial year. [14196]

Mr. Oppenheim: The most recent forecast of VAT receipts for 1996–97 published in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" is £47.5 billion.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the scope of VAT. [14177]

Mr. Oppenheim: Value added tax in the UK applies to about 60 per cent. of consumer expenditure on goods and services.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the additional tax that would be raised if VAT were imposed on (a) private education fees and (b) public health provision charges. [14870]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 10 February 1997]: Based on information in HM Treasury's "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs", the estimated revenue costs of (a) the VAT exemption of private education fees and (b) the zero rating of drugs and medicines on prescription are approximately £1,050 million and £750 million respectively in 1996–97. The estimates exclude the effect of behavioural changes and may tend to overestimate the extra revenue from withdrawing the exemption of zero rating.

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

25. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money has been collected by HM Customs and Excise since April 1992 as a result of the extension of VAT to domestic fuel. [14197]

Mr. Oppenheim: Domestic fuel and power has been subject to VAT only since April 1994. The total revenue raised from VAT on domestic fuel and power since the 8 per cent. was introduced is estimated to be as follows:

1994–95: £850 million

1995–96: £1,100 million

Cumulative Debt

26. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cumulative debt as a percentage of gross domestic product of (a) Britain and (b) other major EU countries. [14198]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Budget forecast of the ratio of gross general Government debt (GGGD) to gross domestic product (GDP) was 55¼ per cent. at end-March 1997. The latest European Commission estimates of the corresponding ratios of GGGD to GDP in Germany, France, Italy and Spain at end-December 1996 are 61½ per cent., 56 per cent., 124½ per cent. and 67¾ per cent. respectively. The European Commission estimates that Luxembourg is the only EU country with a lower ratio of GGGD to GDP than the UK.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's ability to meet stage 3 of EMU. [14174]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I believe that the United Kingdom economy is highly likely to satisfy the economic conditions of low inflation, low fiscal deficit and a low burden of public debt required to contemplate stage 3 of EMU.

VAT (Food)

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the European Community has for the harmonisation of taxation with special reference to VAT on food. [14186]

Mr. Oppenheim: There are no specific EC plans for harmonisation of VAT on food. The European Commission aspires more generally to further harmonisation of VAT rates as part of its suggested programme for a common system of VAT. There are no legislative proposals on rates on the table and the UK's zero rates—including that for food—are fully safeguarded under existing EC agreements. These cannot be changed without our approval.

Earnings Statistics

Mr. Booth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the real take-home pay of a family on average earnings in (a) 1991–92 and (b) 1996-97. [14193]

Mr. Jack: Real take-home pay in 1996–97 prices for a family on average earnings around £296.40 per week in 1991–92 and £311.05 per week in 1996–97. This same family should be around £370 better off next year.

UK Economy (Growth Prospects)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the prospects for growth in the United Kingdom economy for the first six months period of the present calendar year, with particular reference to (a) consumer spending, (b) spending on net new domestic capital formation from all sources and (c) the estimated impact of major public sector infrastructure schemes; and if he will make a statement. [14310]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The prospects for growth are excellent. The UK economy is now well into its fifth year of sustained expansion, and all forecasters share the Government's view that 1997 will see another year of healthy growth. Growth is expected to continue to be broadly based, with faster growth in consumers' expenditure, accelerating investment and rising exports. Lower public sector capital expenditure during 1997–98 will be offset by rising capital expenditure under the private finance initiative.

European Single Currency

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of how adherence to the criteria for joining the European single currency would affect the United Kingdom economy. [14175]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Maastricht convergence criteria of low inflation and sound public finances make sound economic sense in their own right, with or without EMU. They will continue to form the basis of the Government's policies to ensure future growth, job creation and rising living standards.

Factor 8 (VAT)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the total revenue raised from the imposition of value added tax on recombinant factor 8 used in the treatment of haemophiliacs. [15386]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 12 February 1997]: The application of the standard rate of VAT to recombinant factor 8 is common to all manufactured drugs. It is estimated to raise approximately £1 million per year.

Paymaster

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the privatisation of the Paymaster agency. [16092]

Mr. Oppenheim: Conditional agreements for the sale of both the pensions and banking businesses of Paymaster, together with its IT support and its building in Crawley, were exchanged with a joint venture between EDS and Hogg Robinson yesterday. These are subject only to Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment Regulations 1981) consultations, which can begin with the company at once.

The £22.7 million consideration agreed with the purchasers represents a good outcome for the taxpayer. The purchasers have made it clear that they intend to develop the business through the winning of new contracts and the transfer-in of other existing business, and to continue operations from its current Crawley and Basingstoke locations, so the outcome is equally good for the agency's staff and customers.

On the pensions side, the schemes will, of course, continue to be funded and have their rules set by sponsoring Government Departments, which will also remain responsible for ensuring service levels; only the administrative functions are being contracted out to the privatised agency.

On the banking side, I announced on 31 October 1996, Official Report, column 255, the creation of a new Office of HM Paymaster General as a separate statutory body within the National Investment and Loans Office to maintain control over the Paymaster General's accounts at the Bank of England. The privatised agency will supply transaction services to this office on behalf of its departmental and other public sector customers.

I believe that this is an excellent outcome for all. The purchasers are eager to keep the present business intact and to build on the service improvements introduced in recent years by the current management. They bring formidable IT and transaction-processing expertise to support those efforts, combined with a powerful private sector pensions reputation and marketing experience. Paymaster can look forward to becoming a player of repute in the private sector market that was previously closed to it, and customers can expect even higher service levels and more competitive prices in future.

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have for the disposal of their shareholding in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company. [15223]

Mr. Jack: The Government own some 12.4 million shares in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company, representing around 13.9 per cent. of the company's issued share capital. The Government have no immediate plans for the sale of their holding.

Arms Supplies (Rwanda)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1996, Official Report, columns 636–37, if he will place in the Library copies of pages 2 to 4 of the letter of 30 November 1995 from the chairman of the United Nations special commission on arms supplies to Rwanda to the international liaisons section of United Kingdom Customs and Excise. [14961]

Mr. Oppenheim: The letter of 30 November 1995 indicates that the attachment accompanying the letter was a copy of the United Nations Security Council resolution 1013 (1995). That was the sole content of pages 2 to 4 of the fax. A copy of that resolution is already held in the Library.

"Social Trends" Data

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the tables and graphs in "Social Trends" that make use of data drawn from the general household survey. [14686]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dennis Roberts to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 13 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS) to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking for a list of the tables and graphs in Social Trends which make use of data drawn from the General Household Survey. The Director has asked me to reply in his absence.

The tables and graphs which use data from the General Household Survey in the 1997 edition of Social Trends are shown in the list below.

Number	Title
2.2	Households by size
2.3	Households: by type of household and family
2.5	People in households and communal establishments: by type of household and family in which they live
2.9	Families headed by lone parents as a percentage of all families with dependent children
2.10	Percentage of dependent children living in different family types
2.12	Percentage of women cohabiting
2.19	Women remarrying: by year, and length, of separation, 1993–1995
2.28	Contraception: by method used
4.10	Percentage of full-time employees who started their current job in the previous 12 months
5.26	Membership of a current pension scheme: by gender and earnings, 1995–96
6.10	Households with consumer durables
7.4	Chronic sickness: by age, 1974 and 1995–96
7.19	Adult cigarette smoking: by gender
7.22	Consumption of alcohol: by gender 1984 and 1994–95
8.15	Site of NHS GP consultation
8.18	Sight tests: by source of funding and socio-economic group, 1994–95

Number	Title
8.20	Use of selected personal social services: by age, 1994–95
10.2	Owner-occupation: by socio-economic group, 1981 and 1995–96

10.9	Under-occupation and overcrowding: by type of household, 1995–96
10.15	Length of time at current address: by tenure, 1995–96
13.5	Participation in home-based leisure activities: by gender
13.20	Participation in the most popular sports, games and physical activities: by gender

2001 Census

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the draft religious questions which are being tested for inclusion in the 2001 census are being phrased in such a way as to identify each of the main Christian denominations. [14389]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The question on religious affiliation to be asked in the 1997 census test in England and Scotland will include pre-coded tick-boxes for Christian, Buddhist, Hindu, Islam, Jewish and Sikh, but will not identify the main Christian denominations. The census test in Northern Ireland will include a different question, which is worded to meet the local requirements for information, and which does identify the main Christian denominations present in the Province.

The final choice of questions to be included in the census will be made after a full evaluation of the results of the census test, further research, and a further extensive round of consultation. All this information will be taken into account when the Government publish their proposals for questions to be included in the 2001 census in a White Paper in mid-1998. The White Paper will invite comment. The census order paper will be debated in Parliament.

Car Production

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on the United Kingdom's balance of payments of Ford Escort production being transferred overseas. [15099]

Mr. Greg Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Identifying the change in the balance of payments following the transfer of car production overseas would be a major research task, which could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

South Yorkshire Supertram

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government will make additional funds available to local authorities in South Yorkshire to help them to meet the debts and liabilities associated with the south Yorkshire supertram. [16141]

Mr. Curry: The Government are well aware of the exceptional problems facing the South Yorkshire districts and the South Yorkshire passenger transport authority as a result of the loss-making supertram project. We have looked very carefully at this problem and discussed it with representatives of the South Yorkshire districts. We have decided to issue a further £20 million in credit approvals for 1997–98. We are also prepared to issue capitalisation directions if these would help authorities to meet the costs of supertram in 1997–98.

If the districts set budgets above their provisional cap, I will look carefully at all their circumstances before determining a final cap which is reasonable and achievable.

Vacant Local Authority Dwellings

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for vacant local authority dwellings in England. [16265]

Mr. Curry: At 1 April 1996, a total of 79,600 council homes in England were empty, 2.3 per cent. of local authorities' stock. The 1995 figure was 71,800; most of the increase was in "management vacants"—dwellings available for letting immediately or after minor repairs—which account for 60 per cent. of all vacant local authority homes.

I am placing in the Library of the House of Commons a list of local authorities in England ranked on the basis of their management vacants at 1 April 1996.

The Government want to see the best use made of local authorities' housing stock and I look to authorities to continue their efforts to keep their own empty dwellings to a minimum. Most authorities have a good record on filling their vacant dwellings, but there is still room for improvement. The achievements of past years must not be wasted.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Contracts

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the contracts awarded to (a) EDS, (b) Andersens, (c) BMI, (d) Capita and (e) Sema since 1992, (i) the broad function to be carried out by the contractor, (ii) the value of the contract and (iii) the Department with which the contract was made in each case. [15413]

Mr. Freeman: The total values of contracts placed with the named firms since 1 April 1993 by the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service and its agencies—the Civil Service College, CCTA, Security and Facilities Executive, Property Advisers Civil Estate and the Buying Agency—are listed.

(a) EDS: £2,744

(b) Andersens: £46,575

(c) BMI: Nil

(d) Capita: £85,029

(e) Sema: £22,560.

Information for the period requested prior to this date and details of individual contract values and the functions carried out are available only at disproportionate cost. Information on contracts awarded by other Government Departments is not held by the Cabinet Office.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Genetic Engineering

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 February, Official Report, columns 719–20, concerning genetic engineering, if he will list the (a) representatives of the animal feed trade, (b) food manufacturers, (c) retailers and (d) consumer organisations involved in the series of meetings on 7 January. [15635]

Mrs. Browning: On 7 January I met representatives from the National Farmers Union, the Grain and Feed Trade Association, the United Kingdom Agricultural Supply Trade Association, the Pet Food Manufacturers Association, Ciba-Geigy, the British Retail Consortium, the Institute of Grocery Distribution, the Food and Drink Federation, the National Association of Master Bakers, ASDA, Marks and Spencer, Safeway, Somerfield, Waitrose, the Consumers Association, the Consumers in Europe Group/National Federation of Consumers Groups, the General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland and the National Food Alliance.

A number of other consumer organisations were also invited but were unable to attend.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 February, Official Report, column 720, if he will identify the risk associated with the use of Ciba-Geigy's genetically modified maize in an unprocessed form. [15634]

Mrs. Browning: The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes considered that the presence of an antibiotic resistance marker gene with bacterial regulatory sequences in Ciba-Geigy's GM maize presented a small but finite risk of transfer of antibiotic resistance to bacteria in the rumen or gut of animals fed on the unprocessed material. The committee advised that, if transfer were to take place, it could compromise the use of ampicillin and related antibiotics in clinical and veterinary medicine. The three EC scientific committees discussed the ACNFP's concerns at length before concluding that the risk of transfer occurring was too small to justify banning imports of the GM maize into the Community.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 February, Official Report, column 719–20, concerning genetic engineering, if he will list the organisations which participated in the consultation meeting on 22 January. [15633]

Mrs. Browning: The consultation meeting to discuss the aspects of biotechnology relating to agriculture and food production, which was chaired by the Earl of Selborne, was attended by the 38 delegates listed, as well as a small number of Government officials. Several other organisations, including the Food and Drink Federation and the National Consumer Council, were also invited but unable to attend.

Rabies

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation he has had with the veterinary profession on possible changes to the United Kingdom's rabies control arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [15939]

Mrs. Browning: None, since the Government's internal consideration of our rabies control policy is still in progress.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14478]

Mr. Howard: In the financial year ending 31 March 1996, 36 staff, equivalent to 15.8 full-time posts, were employed within the Home Office and its agencies specifically to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities at a total salary cost of £463,253. These figures do not include staff, such as legal advisers, who advise on the application of equal opportunities as part of their duties and in relation to whom information is not readily available.

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14950]

Mr. Howard: Since 1979, spending on Dorset police has increased by 112 per cent. in real terms. Next year, 1997–98, Dorset police will be able to increase its spending by 3.9 per cent.—£2.7 million. Spending would then be over 16 per cent. higher in real terms than it was in 1992–93. By March 1997, it is estimated that there will be 142 more police officers in Dorset than there were in May 1979—19 of whom will have been recruited in 1996–97. Last year, two schemes in Bournemouth won money in the Government's closed circuit television challenge competition: Westbourne core shopping centre, £59,000, and Moordown St. John's Church of England primary school, £5,328. There are now 58 special constables in Bournemouth.

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14801]

Mr. Howard: My Department and its agencies by and large do not make regular use of postcodes in the areas of interest. The postcode address file is used as the basis for social and criminal research as and when the need arises. Resource allocation formulae generally use census data at a high level of geographic aggregation and are not dependent on postcode areas. However, some use of the ACORN—a classification of residential neighbourhoods—classification, for which postcodes form the base, is used in the police funding formula which is reviewed regularly. Use has also been made in research of postcodes to convert 1981 census enumeration districts to 1991 census enumeration districts.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants in (a) each standard region and (b) Great Britain as a whole in each quarter since 1990 were (i) signing on for unemployment-related benefits, (ii) signing on for national insurance credits, (iii) signing on by post for unemployment-related benefits and (iv) signing on by post for national insurance credits. [13588]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

However, the regular count for the number of postal claimants was suspended during the early months of jobseeker's allowance until claims have been transferred from the old to the new computer system. Arrangements have been made for a special one-off count to be made towards the end of February. Although we expect that the total will be lower, this will not necessarily indicate the number of jobseekers who have changed from postal to fortnightly signing, since it will also reflect moves in and out of unemployment. No figures are available for the number of jobseekers whose status has changed as a result of the new postal rules on signing.

Information is not collected on the number of claimants who sign on by post and receive credits of national insurance contributions only.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to the answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 719, to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) what estimate she has made of the number of people who could gain from abolishing the 16 guided learning hours limit for those receiving the jobseeker's allowance across the range of the estimates of £500 million to £1,250 million. [15414]

Mr. Forth: We estimate that between about 200,000 and 400,000 additional people could receive jobseeker's allowance. This does take account of behavioural effects which might result from the change.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry, indicating how much has been spent on legal advice and from whom it was obtained. [14531]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The amount spent by my Department on external advice in relation to giving evidence to the Scott inquiry and the preparation of the Government's response to it is £771,974. The whole of this amount was for legal advice and included £80,307 representing the value of legal services charged by the Treasury Solicitor's Department. It also includes £127,870 for the costs of legal advice for independent witnesses which were paid for by Sir Richard Scott's inquiry and therefore fell to this Department. External legal advice was obtained from Alistair Thompson and Partners, Barnett Alexander Chart, Beechcroft Stanleys, Blythe Liggins, Hamilton Burns and Moore, Harris Rosenblatt and Kramer, Herbert Smith, Irwin Mitchell, Mr. Gordon Jackson, Kingsley Napley, Mr. S. Richards and Russell Jones and Walker.

Mr. Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14530]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The direct salary cost of officials within DTI wholly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 was approximately £324,000. Other officials were involved from time to time; their direct salary cost is unquantifiable. This figure does not include the salary cost of those involved in taking forward the Department's review of strategic export controls since the end of August.

The direct salary cost since 1992 of Sir Richard Scott's inquiry team, which also fell to my Department was approximately £852,000.

Privatisation Brochure

Mr. Grocott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what was the total cost of (a) the production and (b) the distribution of his departmental document "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free". [15569]

(2) how many copies of "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free"; have been printed. [15568]

Mr. Lang: My Department has printed 3,000 copies of the booklet "Privatisation: Setting Enterprise Free". These cost £2,900 to produce and £707 to distribute.

PRIME MINISTER

Children's Services Strategy Group

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 28 January, Official Report, column 161, how he will monitor the performance of the children's services strategy group; how long the group has been in existence; how often it meets and under whose chairmanship; and what guidelines have been issued to Government Departments on the status of the group's advice. [15710]

The Prime Minister: The children's services strategy group first met in September 1996. It is likely to meet four to five times a year and its next meeting is scheduled for March. The group is chaired by Department of Health officials who lead on policy for children's services. There are no plans to monitor the group formally, although Department of Health Ministers will be taking a close interest in its work. The group has not issued guidelines to other Government Departments. It is there not to issue formal advice but to co-ordinate and inform the development of policy relating to children in all areas represented by its membership.

WALES

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14798]

Mr. Hague: Postcode areas are used for a number of purposes:

—By the Further Education Funding Council in part of its methodology for funding further education institutions.

—To select houses to be monitored as part of a research to assess radon levels in houses in Wales.

—For the 1996 Welsh house condition survey, which is one of the components in the housing capital allocation formula—As the basic sampling frame for both the 1992 Welsh social security survey and the 1997 household interview survey.

—By the Welsh register of manufacturing employment to define different regions in Wales, for example by parliamentary constituencies, unitary authorities and travel-to-work areas.

—In origin and destination traffic surveys to build a model of traffic movement and demand form one area to another.

—Indirectly in a small part of the formula for calculating local authority spending assessments which are used for the distribution of revenue support grant.

—To help identify individual companies or sites when compiling the Welsh index of production and construction.

By health authorities and trusts to authenticate ECRS (extra-contractual referrals) to determine the purchaser responsible for funding treatment.

—To assist health authorities and trusts in the health needs assessment process at district and sub district levels, for contract monitoring; monitoring activity at local level; and assisting in determining GP allocations.

—Used to assist in the administration of deprivation payments made to GPs having patients living in wards which are identified as deprived for the purposes of these surveys.

—Used by highways directorate to analyse comments made on public consultation returns for new road schemes, in order to determine whether the respondent is local to the area.

The ways in which the postcode areas are used are reviewed from time to time.

Deeside

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funding he has allocated to improve the physical environment of Deeside, indicating the location of each project. [15143]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Details of Welsh Office funding allocated in 1996–97 and 1997–98 for schemes to improve the physical environment of Deeside, and comparable Welsh development agency schemes for 1996–97, are contained in the following table:

Power Stations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue planning guidance to future applicants to build power stations to take account of (a) vapour clouds and (b) dust particles. [15147]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government's planning policies are set out in Wales, in "Planning Guidance (Wales) Planning Policy" and in a series of technical advice notes currently in preparation.

Under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, the control of emissions from power stations is the responsibility of the Environment Agency. The system of integrated pollution control introduced by the Act requires prior authorisation by the agency. Authorisation will not be granted unless the agency is satisfied that the process in question will not have a harmful effect on the environment. The authorisation process is backed up by a system of regular monitoring.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many councils have spent above the capping limit; and if he will make a statement. [15142]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Legally no local authority can set a budget above its cap. However, an authority can set a budget above the level of its provisional cap. Only one authority has done this. Aberconwy borough council set a budget for 1993–94 above its provisional cap, but because of the exceptional expenditure arising from the flooding in Llandudno in June 1993, it was designated at the level of the budget it had set. An authority's budget for capping purposes excludes some types of spending.

Influenza, Pneumonia and Bronchitis

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many deaths from (a) influenza, (b) pneumonia and (c) bronchitis occurred during January 1997; and what were the equivalent figures for January (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [15214]

Mr. Hague: Figures from the Office for National Statistics of the number of deaths among residents of Wales where the underlying cause was influenza, pneumonia or bronchitis are shown in the following table:

Deaths occurring in January of each year

ICD 9		1997[1]	1996[1]	1995	1994
487	Influenza	23	5	2	2
480–486	Pneumonia	747	459	397	338
466, 491	Bronchitis	40	38	38	33

[1] Provisional. Figures for 1997 are the latest available. They will be incomplete due to some January deaths waiting to be registered and added to the ONS database.

Child Care

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the (a) availability and (b) distribution of child care facilities in Wales. [15065]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Summaries of the data for Wales and for old county councils on facilities for full day care, including childminding, and for sessional day care are published in the latest in the series of Welsh Office statistical publication, "Activities of Social Services Departments", for the year ended 31 March 1994.

Information on child care facilities in Wales is contained in the Chwarae Teg 1996 audit of child care.

The child care database, compiled by Chwarae Teg and the Wales information network, provide comprehensive information on availability and distribution of childcare facilities in Wales. It can be accessed at a number of sources, including Chwarae Teg, public libraries and jobcentres.

Wales Youth Agency

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what decisions he has reached following the financial management and policy review of the Wales Youth Agency. [16399]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: As recommended by the review, we have taken the decision to change the status of the Wales Youth Agency from an executive non-departmental public body to a grant-aided organisation.

The agency will continue to be funded by the Welsh Office for its important work in helping to raise and maintain standards in youth work in Wales. From 1 April 1997 this will include the disbursement of grant to national voluntary youth organisations, amounting to £361,000 in 1997–98.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sport

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the new measures in sport which (a) her Department, (b) her Department in conjunction with other Government Departments, (c) sports councils and (d) other relevant bodies have instigated since the last general election. [6894]

Mr. Sproat: Since the last general election, the Government have developed a radical strategy of profound changes in policy for the way in which the Government, and Government-sponsored agencies, deal with sport in this country. It is not too much to say that these new policies amount to a revolution in sport.

The main elements of this radical strategy stretch across a very wide range of sporting areas: from putting sport back at the heart of weekly school life—with a particular, but not exclusive, emphasis on traditional, competitive, team games—through constructing much closer links between local schools and local sports clubs, to setting up, for elite athletes, a British academy of sport, a network of regional institutes of sport, academies of individual sports, and a multi-million pound sports scholarship scheme for thousands of individual elite athletes.

In support of this radical strategy, the Government have first, completely reorganised the sports council structure, abolishing the old Great Britain Sports Council, and the old regional councils for sports and recreation, and setting up an English Sports Council and a United Kingdom Sport Council, in addition to the existing Sports Councils for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Secondly, the Government set up the sports councils as distributors of lottery funds to inject an unprecedented amount of money into sport in this country. Since the lottery was introduced two years ago, the sports councils have awarded over £439 million to over 2,568 sports projects, involving 59 different sports.

The main details of this radical new strategy for sport are set out in a 103-point paper, which I have today placed in the Libraries of the House. These measures cover the whole range of the sporting spectrum, and fall into 11 main categories:

(i) sport in schools;
(ii) sport in further and higher education;
(iii) the role of governing bodies;
(iv) the role of local authorities;
(v) the role of local sports clubs;
(vi) restructuring of the Sports Council;
(vii) sport and safety;
(viii) the National Lottery;
(ix) other funding;
(x) support for elite athletes; and
(xi) UK sport in the wider world.

TRANSPORT

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what statutory authority powers the two United Kingdom assessors into the loss of the MV Derbyshire were appointed; and by whom. [15566]

Mr. Bowis: No statutory powers were required for the appointment of the technical assessors.

Public Transport Fare Increases

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the annual percentage change and (b) the increase in fares on (i) London Buses, (ii) London Underground, (iii) all London Transport, (iv) Network SouthEast and (v) British Rail in each year since 1984–85, taking 1984–85 as the base, showing the increase in both actual and real terms; and what was the annual rate of inflation for each of those years. [15940]

Mr. Bowis: Available information is shown in the tables.

	London Buses		London Underground		All London Transport		Network SouthEast		British Rail		RPI

1. Fares data for Network South East are no longer available.
2. BR data supplied by British Rail.
3. All other data are supplied by London Transport.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the annual percentage change and (b) the increase in child fares on London Transport in each year since 1984–85, taking 1984–85 as the base, showing the increase in both actual and real terms. [15941]

Mr. Bowis: Available data from London Transport are as follows:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Krishna Maharaj

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions when British representatives have met Mr. Krishna Maharaj. [15679]

Dr. Liam Fox: Consular officers visited Mr. Maharaj on:

3 January 1989
22 August 1989
12 February 1991
19 December 1991
11 June 1992
9 December 1992
22 November 1993
27 March 1995 and
4 April 1996.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the law office of the capital collateral representative has indicated it has the resources to pay for the legal preparation of Mr. Krishna Maharaj's application for a retrial in Florida. [15675]

Dr. Fox: The Florida state capital collateral representative is not responsible for the preparation of Mr. Maharaj's application for a retrial. If his current legal representative withdraws from the case the public defender's office will appoint the capital collateral representative to represent him. The question of resources is for the Florida state authorities.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the financial resources needed by Mr. Krishna Maharaj to put his case for a retrial. [15676]

Dr. Fox: That is a matter for Mr. Maharaj and his lawyers.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department's Ministers have met the family or legal representatives of Mr. Krishna Maharaj. [15678]

Dr. Fox: No.

Capital Collateral Representative (Florida)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the payments made by the capital collateral representative to condemned convicts normally meet the costs of their legal representation in cases where a retrial is sought. [15677]

Dr. Liam Fox: The capital collateral representative is appointed to represent prisoners sentenced to death in Florida who have no funds to retain counsel in post-conviction proceedings. The CCR does not make payments to condemned convicts.

Shanti Nagar, Pakistan

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the high commissioner for Pakistan about the destruction of homes and churches in the village of Shanti Nagar, near Khanewal on 6 February; and if he will make a statement. [15602]

Dr. Liam Fox: We are deeply concerned about the attacks on Christians and churches in Khanewal. We have not made representations to the Pakistan high commissioner, since I intend to discuss the matter when I visit Pakistan later this month. In the meantime, I understand that the governor of Punjab has promised compensation to those affected and has ordered an enquiry. I expressed general concern about the treatment of religious minorities to the Minister of Human Rights when I called on him in October.

Russia (Independence movements)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy towards the independence movements in (a) Chechnya, (b) Abkhazia, (c) Nagorno-Kharabakh and Trans-dnestr; and if he will make a statement. [15603]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We subscribe fully to the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe principle that frontiers are inviolable and can only be changed peacefully and by agreement. Any change in the status of the four regions mentioned would have to be mutually agreed with the authorities of the countries concerned. We do not believe that the right to self-determination equates automatically to a right to secession.

Arms Sales

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the countries and other bodies which have bought arms from the United Kingdom in the last 10 years under the export credits guarantee scheme and defaulted on their payments and (b) the sums of money involved in each case. [14007]

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

I am not currently able to provide the requested information. A review of what information can be made available is taking place and a fuller reply will be given in due course.

School Links

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department provides to schools wishing to develop links with schools in other countries (a) within and (b) outside the British Commonwealth, and if he will make a statement. [15275]

Mr. Paice: I am replying, since the Department for Education and Employment has responsibility for international school links.

The Department contributes to the funding of a number of organisations responsible for implementing the Government's education interchange programmes so far as schools are concerned. These include the Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges, which is primarily concerned with developing school links with Europe and the United States, and the League for the Exchange of Commonwealth Teachers. Grant in aid figures (England and Wales) for 1996–97 are: CBEVE—£3.9 million; LECT—£0.5 million. Under its development programme, the Overseas Development Administration also gave a grant of £50,000 in 1996–97 to Education Partners Overseas, which is an organisation set up to organise and supervise twinning between British schools and schools in developing countries. No distinction is made by the EPO between Commonwealth and non-Commonwealth countries.

DEFENCE

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) radioactive ship and submarine hulks remain at Rosyth and Devonport and (b) spent reactors remain at each site; and what is the amount of medium and high level radioactive waste at each. [16000]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There are three decommissioned nuclear submarines at Devonport and five at Rosyth, containing only intermediate and low-level waste. A further two nuclear submarines at Rosyth and one submarine at Devonport are to undergo defuelling, de-equipping, and lay-up preparations prior to long-term storage pending disposal. Immediately after, there are 75 tonnes of intermediate-level waste and 140 tonnes of low-level waste within each submarine, which will decay in time. The actual level of radioactivity for each submarine, bearing in mind the differing operating profiles, lifetimes and decommissioning dates, can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

There is currently one spent reactor core at each of the dockyards pending removal to the storage facility at British Nuclear Fuels, Sellafield. I am withholding information relating to the radioactivity levels within the spent reactor cores under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to Government information relating to national security and defence. Storage of used submarine fuel at both dockyards fully meets the site licence requirements as authorised by the Health and Safety Executive nuclear installation inspectorate.

Tomahawk-fitted Submarines

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Tomahawk-fitted submarines to enter operational service. [15705]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Tomahawk is expected to enter service in Royal Navy submarines in late 1998.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are claiming family credit in the Scunthorpe travel-to-work area. [15499]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Elliot Morley, dated 13 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people are claiming Family Credit (FC) within the Scunthorpe travel to work area.

The information is not available in the format requested. It may be helpful if I explain that FC is administered centrally by the Family Credit Unit. Statistics are produced on a national basis and provide the number of families in receipt of FC within a particular Benefits Agency (BA) office area at a given date. However, this only serves as a "snap-shot" of the position at that given date and does not provide details of the number of families in receipt of FC annually.

At 3 January 1997, there were 2,029 families in receipt of FC within the Scunthorpe BA office area. This has been extracted from a total of 687,917 recipients nationally. It should be noted that these figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers gaining if the disability test used at renewal stage were added to the list of qualifying benefits for new claims for disability working allowance. [15415]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley) on 30 April 1996, Official Report, column 476.

Social Security Spending

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current percentage of public spending taken up by social security; what was the equivalent figure in (a) 1979, (b) 1987 and (c) 1992; and what has been the percentage increase since 1979. [15426]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is set out in the table:

Grand total of social security expenditure expressed as a percentage of General Government Expenditure (X) (GGE (X))

1979–80: 23 per cent.

1987–88: 28 per cent.

1992–93: 30 per cent.

1996–97: 31 per cent.

This is a percentage increase of 35 per cent. between 1979–80 and 1996–97.

Sources:

1. March 1996 social security departmental report and earlier equivalents.

2. Financial statement and budget report 1996–97. The figures for the relevant years are shown in Table 6a: Point 1.

Notes:

1. Outturn figures are used for the period 1979–80, 1987–88 and 1992–93. The figure for 1996–97 is estimated outturn.

2. Grand total of social security spending; this includes both expenditure on benefits and their administration as well as additional local authority spending on housing and council tax/community charge benefit.

3. General Government Expenditure (X)* (GGE(X)); this excludes privatisation proceeds, expenditure out of the proceeds of the national lottery, and receipt of interest and dividends from public corporations and the private sector.

Income Support

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of (a) the numbers gaining and (b) the cost of extending payments of income support for four weeks to people who (i) are unemployed, (ii) have been unemployed for two years or more and (iii) are claimants in receipt of a disability premium. [15427]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Estimate of the number gaining and cost of extending payment of jobseeker's allowance (income based) for four weeks to the unemployed who come off the benefit because they have found work by duration of unemployment in 1997–98

	All unemployed	Unemployed for two years or more
Numbers gaining	1,580,000	30,000
Cost	£340 million	£10 million

1. Costs are rounded to the nearest £10 million, the number of gainers is rounded to the nearest 10,000.
2. Figures are based on estimates of the number of unemployed leaving jobseeker's allowance (income based) for work in a full year consistent with Her Majesty's Treasury unemployment assumption of 1.8 million in 1997–98.
3. Behavioural changes have not been taken into account.
4. 100 per cent. take up is assumed.
5. No in-work benefits are taken into account.
6. Income support for the unemployed was replaced by jobseeker's allowance on 7 October 1996.
7. It is assumed that benefit is extended only to those who begin work. There is not sufficient data to allow a robust estimate of the cost and numbers of people gaining from extending income support for four weeks to those in receipt of the disability premium who begin work.

Family Credit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 566, how many of the gainers from a reduction in the family credit taper to (a) 60 per cent. and (b) 50 per cent. would be (i) employed lone parents, (ii) employed couples, (iii) self-employed lone parents and (iv) self-employed couples. [15428]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is set out in the table.

Estimated numbers gaining from reducing the family credit taper 1997–98

Family type	60 per cent. taper	50 per cent. taper
Couples
Employed	305,000	445,000
Self-employed	55,000	75,000
Lone parents
Employed	210,000	240,000
Self-employed	15,000	15,000
Total	585,000	770,000

1. Estimates are based on the 1994–95 Family Resources Survey uprated to 1997–98 prices and benefit levels.
2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest 5,000 and may not sum exactly due to rounding.

Claimants (Exempt Work)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people on (a) incapacity benefit and (b) severe disablement allowance have applied to undertake exempt work since April 1995; how many have subsequently undertaken work; and how many have been refused by reason for refusal. [15429]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Earnings Disregard

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of raising the earnings disregard to £25 for each individual adult in a benefit unit claiming (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit, for 1997–98 and 1998–99; and what is his estimate of (i) the cost and (ii) the numbers gaining for each benefit. [15430]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is set out in the table.

Benefit	Cost/savings (£ million)		Gainers/losers
	1997–98	1998–99	1997–98	1998–99
Income support	–60	–60	+135,000	+135,000
Housing benefit	–115	–115	+205,000	+205,000
Council tax benefit	–45	–45	+260,000	+255,000

Benefit	Cost/savings (£ million)		Gainers/losers
	1997–98	1998–99	1997–98	1998–99
Family credit	+25	+30	–5,000	–10,000
Total	–195	–190	—	—

Source:
May 1995 Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry and 1994–95 Family Resources survey.
Notes:

1. Costs are rounded to the nearest £5 million and gainers/losers to the nearest 5,000.

2. A negative figure denotes costs or gainers, and a positive figure indicates savings or losers.

3. All disregards were increased simultaneously. Increased Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit costs arising from new entitlement to Income Support are included in the Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit costs and gainers respectively.

4. Benefit units entitled to either Family Credit or Income Support are assumed to claim the benefit which gives them a higher net income. Hence some families leave Family Credit to claim Income Support.

5. This is a deadweight estimate. There is insufficient information on which to estimate a behavioural response.

6. Income Based Jobseeker's Allowance cases are excluded from the estimate of Income Support.

War Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by (a) region, (b) parliamentary constituency and (c) type of impairment the number of war pensioners making claims for benefit. [15504]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is as follows:

Two thousand one hundred and fifty-one new claims for war pensions were received in January 1997, the latest month for which figures are available, and 3,725 claims from existing war pensioners were received for further disablements.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his current estimate of the savings which will result from changes to the administration of claims to the War Pensions Agency. [15505]

Mr. Heald: The information is as follows:

Estimated reduction in forecast programme expenditure (rounded to the nearest £5 million)

1997–98: £5 million

1998–99: £10 million

1999–2000: £15 million

Estimated reduction in forecast expenditure on administration (rounded to the nearest £0.1 million)

1997–98: £0.7 million

1998–99: £1.0 million

1999–2000: £1.0 million

The changes affect future entitlement only.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his Department's correspondence with Mark Lutman and Adrian Davis regarding their evidence on the subject of noise-induced hearing loss; and if he will publish the correspondence. [15506]

Mr. Heald: My right hon. and noble Friend the Lord MacKay of Ardbrecknish, the Minister of State for Social Security, received an open letter signed by four leading experts in hearing loss including professors Lutman and Davis. A copy of this letter has been placed in the Library. The letter confirms that noise-induced hearing loss and hearing loss due to aging are broadly additive. It is that medical opinion which is now being applied in the assessment of claims for war disablement pension.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost of raising the earnings limit for invalid care allowance to £61 in order to be credited for class 1 national insurance contributions. [15585]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The cost of changing the earnings limit for invalid care allowance to a gross earnings limit equal to the current lower earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions is estimated to be £5 million.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on sample data and should be treated with caution.

2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Source:

Family Resources Survey 1994–95.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to credit state earnings-related pension scheme contributions to carers receiving invalid care allowance. [15586]

Mr. Heald: The White Paper "Equality in State Pension Age" stated that the regulations to extend home responsibilities protection to SERPS would be made at the appropriate time.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the cost of enabling carers over retirement age to receive invalid care allowance; [15587]

(2) if he will estimate the cost of allowing new claims for carers premium to be made for those over retirement age. [15588]

Mr. Mitchell: The estimated cost of allowing new claims for invalid care allowance from those aged over 65 is £20 million for 1996–97, of which £10 million would be accounted for by increased receipt of the carer premium.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on sample data and should be treated with caution.

2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Benefit Collection System

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the (a) percentage and (b) number of pensioners who currently have their state pension and other benefits collected by (i) an agent and (ii) an appointee. [15623]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available in relation to retirement pension, attendance allowance and income support for pensioners is set out in the table:

	Numbers of appointees	As proportion of beneficiaries of pension age	Numbers of agents	As proportion of beneficiaries of pension age
Retirement pension[1]	214,482	[2]2.1 per cent.	not known	not known

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the operation of the agency and appointee system for the collection of the state pension and other benefits. [15624]

Mr. Mitchell: The Department keeps these matters under on-going review. In particular, we are examining the current arrangements for appointees and agents in the context of the transition to payment by benefit cards.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 153–54, what estimates he has made of gross pensioner income in 1996 prices in (a) 1994, (b) 2010 and (c) 2025; (i) by quintile and (ii) decile, indicating in each case the composition of income by source. [13233]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 29 January 1997]: Information is not available in the format requested. The pensioners' incomes series 1994–95 has been used to provide estimates of gross income, and its components, by quintile of the single and couple pensioner populations in 1994–95, at July 1994 prices. Estimates are given in tables 1 and 2.

The pensioners' incomes series 1994–95 is largely based on data drawn from the 1994–95 family expenditure survey, which does not contain information concerning the work histories of individuals, and is therefore not a good base upon which to forecast future levels of pensioners' incomes. Estimates of gross income, and its components, by quintile of the single and couple pensioner populations in 2010 and 2025 at 1994 prices have been made using PENSIM, a dynamic simulation model that projects pensioners' incomes into the next century, and are shown in tables 5 to 8.

However, for a number of reasons, the pensioners incomes series 1994–95 and PENSIM estimates are not directly comparable—they are necessarily based on different data sources, and have been calculated using methodologies that differ in a number of respects. While the pensioners' incomes series provides a good guide to historic absolute levels of pensioners' incomes, and their components, PENSIM has been designed to forecast long-term trends in pensioners' incomes, rather than precise amounts. In order to highlight these trends over time, tables 2 and 3 show PENSIM estimates of gross income, and its components, by quintile of the single and couple pensioner populations in 1994, at 1994 prices.

Tables 5 to 8 also show estimates of net income, and the percentage growth—to the nearest 5 per cent.—in net income from 1994. This information effectively supersedes that information given in my written answer to the hon. Member on Monday 13 January, Official Report, columns 153–54, which contained some figures which were calculated for 2020, but were described as estimates for 2010.

PENSIM estimates are based on a number of economic and behavioural assumptions. Due to the reliance on assumptions and the time period covered, estimates should be treated with caution, and have been rounded to the nearest £1. Reliable estimates of gross income by decile are not available from PENSIM or the pensioners' income series 1994–95, due to the size of the data samples used. The Department is aware of the limitations of the current PENSIM model. Most of these are due to the age and internal consistency of the relatively small data set used, which is based on three different surveys. It is intended to use larger data sets, including the lifetime labour market data base, to improve the robustness and modelling capability of PENSIM in the future.

Notes:
1. All figures rounded to the nearest £0.10. Components may not sum to totals due to rounding.
2. Income refers to gross income before housing costs (BHC).
3. The quintiles have been constructed based on the equivalised BHC net income distribution. This is consistent with table 5 of the PI Series.
4. Pensioner units are defined as single people aged at state pension age or above, or couples in which the man is aged at state pension age or above.

2. Income refers to income before housing costs.
3. Benefit income includes basic state pension, SERPS, graduated pension, income support and housing benefit.
4. Pensioners are defined as those single aged at state pension age or above, or couples in which the husband is aged at state pension age or above.
5. Quintiles for single pensioners and pensioner couples have been calculated separately—i.e. the bottom quintile of single pensioners represents those pensioners in the bottom 20 per cent. of the income distribution of single pensioners.

TREASURY

Taxation (Personal Allowances)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) the numbers gaining and (b) the cost of extending to married women the additional personal allowance currently payable to a married man whose wife is incapacitated. [15416]

Mr. Jack: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate of the tax yield from claimants of incapacity benefit; and how many claimants had tax deducted from their benefit by the Benefits Agency, during (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97 to date. [15417]

Mr. Jack: The estimated tax yield from taxable incapacity benefit for 1996–97 is about £60 million.

The number of claimants who had no other source of income from which the tax could be collected and who have had the tax deducted from their benefit by the Benefits Agency in 1995–96 is about 25,000. A reliable estimate for 1996–97 to date is not available.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Olner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost of making invalid care allowance tax free when the recipient is also in receipt of a non-state pension. [15589]

Mr. Jack: The estimated cost for 1997–98 of exempting invalid care allowance from tax for all claimants is about £20 million. A reliable estimate of the cost for claimants who are in receipt of a non-state pension is not available.

Customs Information System

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Government have designated a competent customs administration to have national responsibility in the United Kingdom for the customs information system convention agreed at the Cannes European Council in June 1995. [16264]

Mr. Oppenheim: I can advise that HM Customs and Excise is designated as the customs administration with national responsibility for the customs information system in the United Kingdom.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of salaries since 1992 paid to persons in his Department employed on a part-time or full-time basis in any capacity relating to the Scott inquiry. [14538]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The direct and quantifiable salary cost of officials in my departments wholly or partly employed on matters relating to the Scott inquiry since 1992 is approximately £510,970. This figure is the identifiable salary cost of officials for their work on the Scott inquiry, although, with one or two exceptions, none of these officials was engaged exclusively on the inquiry. In addition, other officials were inevitably involved from time to time, but the direct cost of their involvement is unquantifiable.

SCOTLAND

Hospital and Nursing Home Beds

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each year since 1979 the numbers of (a) registered beds and (b) occupied beds in (i) registered private hospitals/clinics, (ii) registered private nursing homes and (iii) all registered establishments in Scotland, showing separately those which were for (1) acute specialties, (2) mental illness, (3) people with learning difficulties, (4) people with physical disabilities, (5) maternity and (6) other purposes. [15455]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information in the level of detail requested is not collected centrally. Table A shows available information on the number of homes and hospitals registered under the Nursing Homes Registration (Scotland) Act 1938, as amended, or the Mental Health Acts 1960 to 1984, the total number of beds, and the category of services provided for each year since 1987. Table B provides details of the number of patients resident in these establishments by category as at 31 March in each year since 1994.

Scottish Natural Heritage

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the principal terms of all the agreements entered into by Scottish Natural Heritage which contain provision for profits forgone; [15665]

(2) if he will list the principal terms of each management agreement entered into by Scottish Natural Heritage in which sums greater than £100,000 are to be paid to a landowner or land user. [15666]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 February 1997]: Details of all management agreements entered into by Scottish Natural Heritage appear in its annual reports, copies of which are laid before Parliament.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total figure in performance-related pay given to former family health service authority mangers for recruiting new GPs to fundholding between 1990–91 and 1995–96. [14845]

Mr. Malone: Such information is not collected centrally.

NHS Nurses

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the (a) morale and (b) recruitment pattern of NHS nurses. [14781]

Mr. Horam: Morale and recruitment issues are matters for local health service employers. Evidence is considered by the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine and its conclusions are published in annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

On 29 January, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced a £32 million initiative to enhance the existing policies to recruit and retain, and encourage the return to work of nursing staff.

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department define as severe, moderate and slight side effects of the drug Lariam; what other definitions of the severity of side effects have been put to him by (a) the manufacturer of the drug and (b) independent scientists; what information he has obtained on the rates of incidence of these side effects; and to what extent the rate of incidence calculated by different parties varies. [15202]

Mr. Malone: There are no internationally defined standards for defining the severity of side effects; therefore the Department does not categorise the side effects of medicines, including Lariam, as severe, moderate or slight. Clinicians assess the rates of incidence of side effects from their patients and report to the Medicines Control Agency on a yellow card.

Information on the incidence of the side effects of Lariam is available from various clinical studies. Different criteria and methodologies are used for the definition of the severity of an adverse reaction. However, these studies show that serious adverse reactions are rare.

Infant Mortality

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outcome of the tendering process for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the service specification and contract. [15442]

Mr. Horam: A contract was signed for the management of the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy with the Maternity and Child Health Research Consortium on 7 March 1996 and took effect from 1 April 1996.

Copies of the service specification—or "statement of requirements"—have been placed in the Library.

The contract contains commercial information that was supplied in confidence and is not, therefore, available for disclosure.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been allocated to the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy for the financial year 1996–97; and how much has been allocated for (a) central organisations and analysis, (b) allocations to regions and (c) other purposes. [15439]

Mr. Horam: The total amount allocated to the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy in the 1996–97 financial year is £2,039 million.

The other financial information requested is contained within the contract, is commercially confidential and is not, therefore, available for disclosure.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for disseminating the report of the evaluation of the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [15443]

Mr. Horam: No evaluation has yet taken place.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the full costs of the tendering process for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy referred to in his answer to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) of 11 December 1995, Official Report, columns 525-28. [15456]

Mr. Horam: The estimated cost is £11,000.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria he uses to decide on the membership of the national advisory body for the confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy; and for what reasons representatives of Wales and Northern Ireland do not have observer status on the body. [15444]

Mr. Horam: Membership of the national advisory body is designed to cover a range of professions, interest groups and perspectives. This includes knowledge of practices in different parts of the country. It is not a representative body.

The role of the national advisory body has changed since April 1996 and it is appropriate for its size to be reduced accordingly.

Fluoridation

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the correlation between the incidence of dental caries among schoolchildren and the proportion of fluoride in the water over the last 10 years (a) in England and (b) in the north-west; and if he will make a statement. [15630]

Mr. Malone: During the last 10 years, the British Fluoridation Society has produced a series of national dental health league tables on levels of tooth decay in five, 12 and 14-year-olds using data from the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry surveys of children's dental health. These league tables show that, in general, districts with the best oral health were fluoridated. Most of the worst districts for tooth decay were not fluoridated; a number of these are in the north-west. BFS leaflets showing the league tables will be placed in the Library.

Pharmaceutical Donations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 27 January, Official Report, column, 119, if he will seek through the World Health Organisation to ensure that other nations do not offer financial incentives to companies to donate pharmaceuticals overseas; and if he will make a statement. [15631]

Mr. Malone: At the World Health Assembly in May 1996, the United Kingdom supported a resolution which promoted new World Health Organisation drug donations guidelines and urged their publication. The aim of these guidelines is to prevent the unsolicited donations of drugs and the overpricing of such drugs. We will place copies of the "Essential Drugs Monitor" publication which includes the guidelines in the Library.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 279, on what date membership of the United Kingdom Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority will be finalised; and if he will make a statement. [15632]

Mr. Horam: The membership of the United Kingdom Xenotransplantation Interim Regulatory Authority will be finalised as soon as possible. Appointments will be announced at that time.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Waiting Times

Mr. Straw: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the percentage of defendants (a) on bail and (b) in custody who were committed for trial at the Crown court in 1996 and waited (i) less than eight weeks and (ii) less than 16 weeks before being dealt with. [15725]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Jack Straw, dated 14 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question about the waiting times for defendants on bail and in custody committed for trial to the Crown Court in 1996.

	Less than 8 weeks per cent.	Less than 16 weeks per cent.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Telephone Tapping

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what cases of surreptitious recording of telephone conversations and other complaints of surveillance falling outside the scope of the Interception of Communications Act 1985 (a) have been brought against the Government and (b) have been drawn to the attention of Ministers; and what steps (i) have been and (ii) are proposed to be taken by the Government in consequence, with special reference to the implementation of compliance measures. [15440]

Mr. Howard: The Interception of Communications Act 1985 is concerned only with the interception of communications in the course of transmission by post or by means of a public telecommunications system, and not with other forms of surveillance. I am aware of three cases regarding alleged interception of telephone calls outside the scope of the Act since it came into force. One of these is currently before the European Court of Human Rights and the other two were decided in 1994: one by the Court of Appeal and the other by the House of Lords. Two cases involving police surveillance operations have been drawn to my attention. One is currently before the European Commission on Human Rights and the other was decided by the House of Lords in July 1996. The Police Bill, which is currently before the House, places police operations involving interference with property on a statutory basis.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what safeguards exist to protect the privacy of people against interference with private telephone conversations; and what inadequacies in the present law have been identified in research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated. [15432]

Mr. Howard: Under the Interception of Communications Act 1985, it is a criminal offence intentionally to intercept a communication in the course of its transmission by means of a public telecommunications system except in obedience to a warrant issued by the Secretary of State or in certain other circumstances described in section 1 of the Act. Section 6 of the Act requires arrangements to be made to ensure that disclosure of material intercepted under warrant is kept to the minimum that is necessary. The legislation is kept under review.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his consent is required before the police intercept calls on mobile phones. [16248]

Mr. Howard: The Interception of Communications Act 1985 provides that communications may lawfully be intercepted in the course of their transmission by means of a public telecommunications system only in obedience to a warrant issued by the Secretary of State or in certain other circumstances specified in section 1(2) and (3) of the Act. This applies equally to mobile and fixed telephone systems.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to review the effectiveness of the current provisions to prevent undue pain and suffering to live animals used in experiments. [14986]

Mr. Sackville: The operation of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 is currently being reviewed by the Animal Procedures Committee. I understand that it hopes to submit a first report to my right hon. and learned Friend by the end of July this year.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many lethal dose toxicity tests on animals have been authorised over each of the last five years for which figures are available. [14987]

Mr. Sackville: The number of these procedures performed is published annually in "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain". The latest figures available are for the calender year 1995. The figures for acute lethal toxicity are:

Year	Number
1995	[1]148,708
1994	[2]116,493
1993	[2]154,880
1992	[2]153,222
1991	[2]131,760

[1] Table 12.
[2] Table 14(8) and 14(9).

Differences in the way these types of procedures are now classified mean that direct comparison between the 1995 figure and those for earlier years is not possible.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make representations to (a) pharmaceutical and (b) other commercial companies undertaking tests on live animals to move towards alternative methods of testing. [14988]

Mr. Sackville: All applicants for project licences, commercial or otherwise, are required by the terms of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 to consider the use of non-animal tests, where they are available and where they are consistent with the achievement of the scientific objectives of the project.

The Home Office is also working with regulatory agencies and with organisations representing commercial interests to encourage the use of alternative methods of testing.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to encourage provision for alternative methods to experimentation on live animals for basic research in toxicity testing and drug development; and if he will make a statement. [14989]

Mr. Sackville: Research on alternative methods is funded through the research budget of the Animal Procedures Committee. The Government support the operations of the European centre for the validation of alternative methods in co-ordinating research into alternative methods across all areas of scientific activity which use animals in regulated procedures. This includes methods to reduce the number of animals, to refine the severity of procedures, and to replace animal use.

Officials meet regulatory agencies and other Government Departments to establish principles for the use of animals in safety testing. In addition, all applicants for project licences under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are required to consider the use of alternatives where these are available.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those organisations which have received Government grants for research into alternatives to experimentation on live animals indicating in each case the amount of the grant for each of the last five years. [14990]

Mr. Sackville: The following organisations have received grants through the Animal Procedures Committee:

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Criminal Cases Review Commission will publish its code of practice. [15596]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Criminal Cases Review Commission will take on responsibility for considering cases on 31 March 1997. It will then determine in what form to make available information about the way it will carry out its work.

Obscenity Law

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions have taken place under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 for material found on the Internet in the last two years. [15851]

Mr. Sackville: Court proceedings data held centrally for offences under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 do not identify the type of medium used.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the interdepartmental working group on obscenity has met; on what dates; and what subjects have that discussed. [156845]

Mr. Sackville: The interdepartmental group on obscenity has met seven times so far. The main subjects discussed have been the availability of pornographic material on the Internet and self-regulation by Internet service providers; police enforcement of the law on obscenity and child pornography; the display of indecent publications in newsagents; guidance on the sexual contents of teenage magazines; the international treaties on obscenity; the workings of the Obscene Publications Act 1959; unlicensed sex establishments; satellite pornography; the Home Office research study "Testing obscenity: an international comparison of laws and controls relating to obscene material"; and Lord Halsbury's Bill on obscenity. The group has met on the following dates:

21 September 1995

30 January 1996

24 September 1996

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) consultations and (b) discussions are being undertaken on a definition of obscenity to replace that in the Obscene Publications Act 1959. [15846]

Mr. Sackville: The Government have undertaken no formal consultations or discussions on the definition of obscenity contained in the 1959 Act. We are, however, aware of the concerns expressed in some quarters about the continuing appropriateness of the test, and undertook to follow up any possible ways forward that might emerge from consideration of Lord Halsbury's Bill on this subject. It is clear that there is as yet no consensus on a workable alternative approach.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements the Government have put in place to monitor the effectiveness of the Internet Watch Foundation in reducing child pornography on the Internet. [15847]

Mr. Sackville: Officials have held meetings with the Internet Watch Foundation to discuss its work, and we receive reports from the foundation providing regular updates on its progress.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, (1) how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there have been under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 in the past 15 years; and how many of these took place in courts outside London; [15848]

(2) how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions there have been under the Protection of Children Act 1978 in the past 15 years; and how many of these took place in courts outside London. [15849]

Mr. Sackville: The information is given in the table:

Number of defendants prosecuted at magistrates courts and convicted[1] at all courts for offences under (a) the Obscene Publications Act 1959[2] and (b) the Protection of Children Act 1978[3] by area, 1980 to 1995

Repatriated Prisoners (Sentences)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the sentencing provisions set out in chapter I of part II of the Crime (Sentences) Bill will apply to prisoners who are repatriated to England and Wales from overseas in order to serve the remainder of their sentences. [16640]

Mr. Maclean: Prisoners repatriated to England and Wales, whose offences overseas are committed after the commencement of the provisions set out in chapter I of part II of the Crime (Sentences) Bill, will be treated as if the balances to serve here of their overseas sentences were their sentences for the purposes of this jurisdiction, and in particular for the purposes of earned early release and post-release supervision. They will be eligible to earn early release on the balance to serve of their original sentences accordingly. Where the balance to serve is more than 12 months' imprisonment, they will be required to undergo a period of post-release supervision equal to 25 per cent. of the balance to serve in this country or three months, whichever is the greater.

In calculating the balance of the prisoner's sentence remaining to be served following repatriation here, account will be taken, as at present, of the time the prisoner has spent in prison abroad, including, where applicable, any remand time, with any remission to which he is eligible for that period. Both periods will be deducted from the original sentence.

In appropriate cases, the resulting balance will be further reduced by a period equal to that of the post-release supervision period which the prisoner will be required to undergo following release from custody. Accordingly, the time to be served in prison by a repatriated prisoner on return here and the required period of supervision, when added together, will not exceed the remaining part of the term of the sentence imposed in the foreign jurisdiction.

This method of calculating the period to be served in prison will not apply to prisoners repatriated from foreign jurisdiction operating sentencing provisions equivalent to those contained in chapter I of part II of the Crime (Sentences) Bill.

Prisoners seeking to be repatriated from overseas will continue to receive full information about the way in which their sentences will be administered on their return here. This will enable them to make an informed decision about whether to consent to repatriation.

DEFENCE

Resolution Class Submarines

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list when (a) HMS Resolution, (b) HMS Revenge, (c) HMS Repulse and (d) HMS Renown were unavailable because they were undergoing docking and essential defects or refit in the last five years. [15716]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Ships Support Agency, I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Roger Babington to Mr. Alan Simpson, dated 17 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the refits and defect rectification periods of Resolution Class submarines during the last five years, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

Resolution Class submarines were subject to an annual 'programmed' docking between refits. Occasionally operational requirements lead to the submarines being docked at short notice, which are reflected in the table below as 'unprogrammed' dockings. The total number of dockings, both programmed and unprogrammed, for the four Resolution Class submarines during the last five years is reflected in the table below:

		Programmed	Unprogrammed
Resolution	1992	46 days
	1993	35 days	10 days
	1994	13 days
Renown	1992	365 days
	1993	70 days	31 days
	1994	17 days	4 days
	1995	13 days
Revenge	1992	20 days
Repulse	1992	20 days	15 days
	1993	52 days	5 days
	1994	8 days	13 days
	1995	37 days
	1996		15 days

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) HMS Resolution, (b) HMS Revenge, (c) HMS Repulse and (d) HMS Renown performed their last patrols. [15714]

Mr. Soames: I have decided under exemption 1 of the code of practice on access to government information to continue to withhold details of the strategic submarine operational programme. However, the decommissioning dates of the four Resolution class submarines were:

HMS Revenge: 25 July 1994

HMS Resolution: 22 October 1994

HMS Renown: 24 February 1996

HMS Repulse: 28 August 1996.

Military Personnel (Wales)

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel are temporarily stationed in Wales for training purposes each year. [16033]

Mr. Soames: Statistics are not maintained in a way that would enable this information to be provided except at disproportionate cost. However, the hon. Member may be interested to note the following.

The Royal Navy has no major establishments in Wales. There are a number of Reserve training centres which cater for the training of local volunteers, and small numbers of RN personnel undertake elements of resource and initiative training from time to time in some areas of the Principality.

For the Army, collective training in Wales is conducted at two Army field training centres, Sennybridge and Castlemartin, and five divisional ranges and training areas. Sennybridge and Castlemartin accounted for 389,462 and 80,000 man training days respectively during 1995–96. The infantry training centre at Brecon and the joint service mountain training centre at Tywyn accommodate respectively 2,400 to 2,700 and 1,100 to 1,300 students per year.

The RAF has approximately 6,200 training places in Wales each year. This includes outdoor activity/leadership training at the RAF resource and initiative training centre at Fairbourne, the joint service adventurous training instructors school at Llanrwst and the joint service hang gliding and paragliding centre at Crickhowell, but excludes detachments at RAF Valley, summer camps and station-organised adventurous training expeditions.

As their name implies, joint service establishments cater for personnel from more than one service and, indeed, some foreign and Commonwealth training.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel are stationed in Wales. [16029]

Mr. Soames: On 1 April 1996 there were some 5,400 military personnel stationed in Wales.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters there are for military personnel in Wales. [16030]

Mr. Soames: There are currently 2,169 married quarters in Wales.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel were recruited in Wales during the last decade. [16031]

Mr. Soames: Information about the number of military personnel recruited in Wales during the past 10 year is not available for all three services. Such information that is available about recruitment in Wales is detailed:

Royal Navy: 529 in the last 5 years

Army: 10,292 personnel since 1987

Royal Air Force: 825 from 1991–92—to date.

The figures for all three services represent personnel recruited through careers offices located in Wales.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of (a) RAF, (b) Army and (c) Navy units in each Welsh county. [16032]

Mr. Soames: The information is as follows:

County	Units
	RAF	Army	Navy
Clwyd	2	6	—
Dyfed	2	5	2
Gwent	—	6	—
Gwynedd	2	2	—
Mid Glamorgan	—	3	—
Powys	—	3	—
South Glamorgan	2	5	1
West Glamorgan	1	3	—

Note:
Figures include Reserve Centres and exclude Careers Information Offices.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel give their next of kin as resident in Wales. [16035]

Mr. Soames: Departmental records show that as at 14 February 1997 the numbers of service personnel who give their next of kin as resident in Wales are as follows:

Royal Navy[1]: 1,341

Royal Air Force: 1,360

[1]Includes Royal Marines.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average annual number of military discharges in Wales for (a) medical and (b) psychiatric reasons in the past five years. [16036]

Mr. Soames: This answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Quantock School

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if his Department intends to send the Office for Standards in Education report on the Quantock school, Somerset, to the parents of service families whose children attend the school; [16118]

(2) if he will make a statement on the suitability of the Quantock school, Somerset, to remain on the service children education authorities admissible schools list; [16120]

(3) what recommendations the Service Children's Education Agency has made to his Department in response to the Ofsted report on Quantock school, Taunton; and if he will make a statement. [16122]

Mr. Soames: Following the recent Ofsted inspection and report on Quantock school, the Service Children's Education Agency has recommended that copies of the report should be sent to service parents whose children attend the school and that the weaknesses identified in that report should be drawn to the attention of parents, that the school should be removed from the admissible school list and that parents who currently have children at the school should be allowed to place them in other schools if they so wish. Quantock school may be considered for readmission to the admissible list at a later date if it is able to meet the criteria proposed for inclusion on the list.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many pupils attending the Quantock school,

Somerset, are participants in the service children's boarding school allowance scheme; and at what cost to his Department. [16117]

Mr. Soames: The total number of service children attending Quantock school, and whose parents were in receipt of boarding school allowance, was 48 in the autumn term 1996—the latest term for which detailed statistics are available. Information on how much individual schools have received in BSA payments is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Boarding Schools Allowance Scheme

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of state for Defence what was the cost to his Department of the service children's boarding schools allowance scheme in the last year for which figures are available. [16119]

Mr. Soames: The cost to my Department of boarding school allowance for financial year 1995–96, the last year for which figures are available, was £110.6 million.

Land Mines

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the international agreements covering the sale and manufacture of land mines and related equipment, and indicate which have been signed by the United Kingdom. [16004]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Amended protocol II to the United Nations convention on prohibitions or restrictions on the use of certain conventional weapons which may be deemed to be excessively injurious or have indiscriminate effects regulates the use and transfer of certain types of mines. This amended protocol was adopted on 3 May 1996. The United Kingdom signed the convention on 10 April 1981. There are no international agreements covering the manufacture of land mines or related equipment.

Bowman Project

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on awarding the contract for the Bowman project. [15807]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Procurement options for the Bowman production phase are currently being evaluated by the Ministry of Defence. A decision on the way ahead will be announced shortly.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate his Department has made of the extra cost of sustaining Clansman during the delay in ordering Bowman. [15808]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The net additional cost of maintaining Clansman in service owing to delays to the Bowman programme is estimated to be some £8 million.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the impact on operational efficiency in the Army of the delay in the Bowman project; and if he will make a statement. [15809]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We expect Bowman to enter service in 2002. Until then, the Clansman family of radios will remain in service and provide a worthwhile, though reducing, capability.

Firing Ranges (Schools)

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Government policy on the use of school land and premises as locations for armouries and firing ranges. [15884]

Mr. Soames: We often work in partnership with schools to promote the benefits of the cadet force movement to young people. Where possible, training facilities, including armouries and ranges, are provided in co-operation with local schools on their premises. This provides a secure and convenient basis for cadet force activities.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost for the construction and provision of a firing range and armoury at Longhill high school, Brighton. [15887]

Mr. Soames: The estimated cost for the construction of an armoury and conversion of existing accommodation into a firing range at Longhill high school, Brighton is £95,000.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those schools in the state and local education authority sector which have had provided for them a school armoury and firing ranges by the Minister of Defence. [15886]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Polaris

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, columns 128–29, for what reasons the operating costs of Polaris (a) fell in the financial year 1984–85, (b) rose in the financial year 1985–86 and (c) fell in the financial year 1988–89. [15722]

Mr. Soames: Details of calculations pertaining to the 1980s are no longer available. Annual cost changes would have resulted primarily from the operational and maintenance cycles of individual submarines.

RAF Bases (Running Costs)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the annual running costs of (a) RAF Marham, (b) RAF Honington and (c) RAF Bruggen in financial years (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1995–96. [15715]

Mr. Soames: The annual running costs, including staff costs, utilities, contract services and property management of RAF Marham, RAF Honington and RAF Bruggen in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 were as follows:

£ million

Station	1994–95	1995–96
RAF Marham	62	64
RAF Brüggen	97	98
RAF Honington	31	30

Welsh Regiments

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Welsh regiments have been involved in armed conflict since 1987. [16034]

Mr. Soames: None. However, a detachment of the Queens Dragoon Guards provided reconnaissance for 7th Armoured Brigade and served as a sub-unit with the 16/5th the Queens Royal Lancers in the Gulf in 1990.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the casualty figures for Welsh regiments in (a) the Gulf war, (b) Cyprus and (c) Northern Ireland since 1967. [16037]

Mr. Soames: Casualty figures, defined in terms of those killed in action, including those who died of wounds, for the Welsh regiments are:

Gulf war: 0

Cyprus: 3

Northern Ireland since 1967: 17.

Empty Homes (Disposal)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made in the disposal of empty homes; and if he will make a statement. [16606]

Mr. Soames: The targets for disposal of 1,500 homes by April 1996 and a further 2,500 by the end of summer 1996 was not only achieved but significantly exceeded, as the total number of disposals reached 5,348 properties.

Gurkhas

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the result of his Department's review of Gurkha terms and conditions of service; and if he will make a statement. [16554]

Mr. Soames: Terms and conditions of service for Gurkhas serving in the British Army are set out in the 1947 tripartite agreement—TPA—between the Governments of Nepal, India and the United Kingdom to enable Gurkha troops to be recruited and employed in the Indian and British Armies on a broadly comparable basis. The last major review of Gurkha terms and conditions of service took place in 1955. Since then, the British Army Gurkhas have been increasingly widely deployed and dispersed. Conditions of service have necessarily been adjusted to take account of local factors, although basic pay and the level of accompanied service have not departed from the guidelines set out in the TPA. Over time, such adjustments have led to significant anomalies. For example, Gurkhas are currently paid markedly different rates, depending on the country in which they serve, their marital status and whether they are accompanied, with a consequent threat to the morale of those on significantly lower incomes.

Taking advantage of the drawdown in Hong Kong and the relocation of most of the brigade to the UK, the MOD has undertaken a major review to restore fairness and equity across the brigade. As a result, revised terms and conditions of service will be introduced from July 1997. The main elements are set out:

Basic pay will continue to be set in accordance with the Indian army pay code in line with the requirements of the TPA, but a universal addition to basic pay will be introduced in place of the current anomalous system of allowances. This will standardise Gurkha pay across different geographical areas, and bring Gurkha take-home pay broadly into line with that received by British soldiers. So far as Gurkhas stationed in the United Kingdom are concerned, no soldier will suffer a reduction and many will gain. In Brunei and Nepal, the great majority of soldiers—those who are married unaccompanied ranks—will benefit from the changes. Gurkha married accompanied personnel in Brunei and Nepal will, however, experience a reduction in their take-home pay, which is currently significantly higher than that of other members of the brigade.

Married accompanied service is to be made available in the United Kingdom. In keeping with the tripartite agreement, which specifies that up to 25 per cent. of Gurkha officers and soldiers will be provided with family accommodation, sergeants and below will be granted one three-year accompanied tour and the more senior ranks will be permanently accompanied. This reflects the basis upon which married accompanied service is available in Brunei and Nepal and was provided to those serving in Hong Kong. Some 450 married quarters will be made available at locations in the United Kingdom where about 2,000 members of the brigade of Gurkhas will be stationed. We expect that under these arrangements some 900 Gurkha dependants, wives and children, will come to the United Kingdom.

Gurkha parents will have the option of sending their children to school in the UK or of taking advantage of a new Gurkha education allowance to enable them to enjoy the benefits of continuity of education within the Nepali system. We expect that most will choose the latter course, relying on Nepali boarding schools and looking to relatives to provide care and support for the children in their absence. There will be an entitlement of one free flight a year to enable children to be united with their parents in the UK during the long Nepali school holiday.

The present entitlement of Gurkha soldiers to long leave every three years will remain. This recognises the continuing importance we attach to keeping the Gurkha soldier in touch with his home culture and roots. But the entitlement will be reduced from six to five months to take account of improved internal communications in Nepal.

We also intend to transfer resettlement training from Nepal to the United Kingdom. This will provide Gurkhas with a much wider choice of training, while ensuring they continue to undertake a reorientation course in Nepal before discharge from the British Army. We intend to retain the Queens Gurkha officer commission for the majority of officers in Gurkha units, but we shall also take the opportunity to introduce a new Gurkha short service commission for a limited number of suitably qualified Gurkha officers to allow them to gain wider employment within the wider British Army.

I am confident that this package represents a significant improvement over current arrangements while continuing to respect the tripartite agreement. It also recognises and gives continued substance to the Gurkhas' position as an integral and valued component of the British Army. I am sure that it will be well received by the brigade.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sports Council Lottery Fund

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many sports have benefited from awards made by the Sports Council lottery fund; and if she will list them together with the total value of the awards for each year since the introduction of the national lottery.
[13522]

Mr. Sproat: Fifty-nine sports have benefited in England from awards made by the lottery sports fund to a total value of £371,374,314. In 1995, 607 awards were made, totalling £104,731,747. In 1996, 1,094 awards were made, totalling £245,722,611. To February 1997, 135 awards have been made, totalling £20,919,956. Full details are provided in the table:

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Towels

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what is the annual cost of (a) purchasing, (b) laundering and (c) distributing the individual hand towels supplied in washrooms throughout the House. [15723]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: (a) Hand towels are purchased when required, in blocks of 5,000, at a cost of £1.09 each. (b) The annual cost of laundering hand towels is £7,300. (c) The staff costs involved in distribution are £3,200 per annum.

New Parliamentary Building

Mr Wigley: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what was the original estimate for the cost of building the new building for parliamentary use at Bridge street, Westminster; and what is his latest estimate of this cost. [16436]

Sir Raymond Powell: The House of Commons Commission approved the final sketch design estimate in 1993 at the prices then prevailing with an allowance forecasting the possible rate of inflation in construction costs until the work is completed in 2000. Since 1993, instructions have been given to the project team for various changes to the brief and the date when work is to start. These account for the difference between the 1993 forecast of £219 million and the current figure of £225 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Armoured Vehicles (Indonesia)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, columns 708–709, if the export licence includes (a) machine guns, (b) automatic cannon and (c) other weapons for installation in Indonesia. [14303]

Mr. Nelson: The licences issued to Procurement Services International and Alvis do not list any weapons for installation in Indonesia.

The Alvis armoured cars licensed for export are equipped with a 90 mm gun and two machine guns as standard. All but two of the other vehicles have either one or two machine guns fitted as standard.

The licence issued to Procurement Services International is for vehicles which were detailed in my reply of 23 January 1997. None of these vehicles is fitted with machine guns or automatic cannon.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 29, if he will list the types and amounts of ammunition that are included in the export licence granted to Alvis. [14260]

Mr. Nelson: Details of goods listed on export licences are a matter between the company and the licensing authority. However, in this case, I can confirm that the export licence granted to Alvis covers a limited quantity of 90 mm ammunition and phosphorous grenades for acceptance testing and training purposes.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 9 December, Official Report, columns 29–30, if he will list the types and quantities of ammunition included in the licence for Procurement Services International. [14267]

Mr. Nelson: No ammunition was included in the licence issued to Procurement Services International.

Sellafield

Mr. McGrady: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he will take to ensure that the nuclear installations inspectorate requires British Nuclear Fuels plc to adhere to appropriate safety regulations in respect of the highly radioactive waste tanks at Sellafield. [15467]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 6 February 1997, Official Report, column 677.

I have every confidence that the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate will continue to discharge its statutory responsibilities in the regulation of safety standards throughout the civil nuclear industry.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the expenses and allowances paid to parties and witnesses appearing before industrial tribunals. [16558]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Parties, witnesses and some unpaid representatives appearing before industrial tribunals may claim certain expenses and allowances. These have been reviewed recently by my Department. With effect from 1 April 1997, the following may be paid: travel expenses in excess of £5, including the costs of travel by public transport—standard class—or, if a private motor vehicle is used, a mileage allowance of 15p per mile; loss of earnings—or national insurance benefit which would otherwise be payable—subject to a maximum of £40 per day; an overnight allowance of £64.30 (inner London) or £54.30 (elsewhere) to meet hotel and other costs where a night's absence is unavoidable; and other reasonable expenses, subject to certain limits. Such expenses include interpreters' fees, essential child care costs and expenses incurred in securing locum cover.

The daily subsistence allowance presently paid to those absent from home for more than five hours is being withdrawn. The Government do not believe the continued payment of such allowances to those involved in essentially private law disputes is justified.

British Shipbuilders

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the external financing limit of British Shipbuilders. [16555]

Mr. Lang: The external financing limit has been adjusted from–£21 million to–£1 million. The original figure rested on the assumption that agreement would be reached the latter with regard to a claim for payment to British Shipbuilders of £20 million. The matter has now gone to arbitration and receipt is not now expected in this financial year.

British Gas

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if British Gas plc will pay stamp duty on demerger. [16594]

Mr. Lang: Section 75 of the Finance Act 1986 makes provision for the exemption of demergers from stamp duty if certain criteria are met. The intention of the legislation is to ensure that demergers involving no real change of ownership, as is the case with the British Gas demerger, qualify for relief from the duty. There must be an issue of shares to all shareholders of the transferor company, in this case British Gas plc, and after the transfer of shares, the proportion of shares held by each shareholder in the transferor company must be the same as the proportion of shares held by those shareholders in the transferee company, in this case Centrica plc. Except for the Government's special share, the British Gas demerger meets these requirements. The Government intend to continue to hold a special share in British Gas plc which, after the demerger, will be known as BG plc. In order, therefore, to allow the British Gas demerger to qualify for exemption from stamp duty, prior to the demerger, two ordinary shares, one in BG plc and one in Centrica plc, will be transferred to the Secretary of State and, on the demerger taking effect, a further share in Centrica plc will be issued to the Secretary of State. These arrangements will ensure that the British Gas demerger meets the conditions for this relief.

Land Mines

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the British companies involved in (a) the manufacture and (b) the export of land mines and related equipment. [16003]

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Member to the response given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Blaneau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 12 February 1997, Official Report, columns 180–81.

TREASURY

Taxes and National Insurance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will translate the column headed "Non-North Sea oil taxes and NICs" in table 4A9, page 88 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98", into cash figures at 1997–98 prices. [15253]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The table shows the information requested. However, cash figures for tax receipts over a long run of years—even if measured at constant prices—are of only very limited interest if they are not set in the context of what has happened to national income over the same period. This is why the historical time series for spending, receipts and borrowing in tables 4.A8 and 4.A9 of the 1997–98 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" are all expressed as ratios to gross domestic products.

Non-North sea taxes and NICs are rebased to 1997–98 prices using the GDP deflator. Forecasts and projections of the GDP deflator were published in table 3.11 and 5A.1 of the 1996 "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13456]

Mrs. Angela Knight: It is not possible to provide the information in the form requested. However, I refer to the answers I gave on 14 January 1997 to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe), Official Report, columns 201–202.

Deaths

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths from (a) influenza, (b) pneumonia and (c) bronchitis occurred during January 1997; and what were the equivalent figures for January (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [15215]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from John Fox to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 17 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked the Director of the Office for National Statistics to reply to your recent question on how many deaths occurred from influenza, pneumonia, and bronchitis during January 1997. The Director has asked me to reply in his absence.

The figures for England and Wales are given in the table below.

Deaths occurring in January, 1994 to 1997, England and Wales

	Influenza ICD9[1] 487	Pneumonia ICD9[1] 480–486	Bronchitis ICD9[1] 466,491
1994	28	6,245	461
1995	29	6,474	402
1996[2]	105	8,386	437
1997[2]	255	10,940	435

[1] International Classification of Diseases, 9th revision.

[2] Death occurrences for 1996 and 1997 are provisional. Figures for 1997 are the latest available. They will be incomplete due to some January deaths awaiting to be registered and added to the ONS database.

Dorneywood

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 31 January, Official Report, column 421, if he will list the dates (a) he and (b) his predecessor have been in residence at Dorneywood since 1993. [15656]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Since 1993, my predecessor and I have resided at Dorneywood on a number of occasions. These stays have not been at the expense of public funds or the taxpayer.

Profit-related Pay Schemes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 February, Official Report, column 733, how many companies notified the Inland Revenue of their intention of introducing a profit-related pay scheme during (a) the first eight months of 1997, (b) 1996, (c) 1995 and (d) 1994. [15657]

Mr. Jack: The available information is in the table.

	Number of applications for registration of profit-related pay schemes[1]
1994	7,200

[1] Rounded to the nearest 100.

From 1 January to 31 January 1997—the most recent period for which figures are available—the Inland Revenue received about 760 applications.

All these figures include some businesses which have previously had a registered scheme and some which have not.

HEALTH

GP Fundholders

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of fundholding (a) general practitioners and (b) practices by health authority (i) in total and (ii) as a percentage of all general practitioners and practices. [13245]

Mr. Malone: Current year information on the number of fundholding practices and general practitioners is given in the table. These figures are available only as totals and not as percentages. The corresponding figures, including percentages, are available for 1995–96 and this information is in the Library.

Senior House Officers (West Midlands)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the main findings of the inquiry of the chairman of the task force into the implementation of proposals in respect of medical senior house officers at the North Staffordshire medical assessment unit; and if he will make a statement. [14313]

Mr. Malone: The West Midlands regional task force on junior doctors' hours provides both formal and informal advice to local health authorities and trusts when necessary, as part of their on-going role in helping to ensure compliance with the new deal for junior doctors' hours. The issues raised are a matter for local discussion.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of additional senior medical house officers required in (a) North Staffordshire and (b) the West Midlands. [14314]

Mr. Malone: The postgraduate dean, with advice from the West Midlands regional task force on junior doctors' hours, is currently considering numbers of senior house officers in all areas of the west midlands to ensure an appropriate balance of doctors and to help to implement the new deal for junior doctors, hours, copies of which are available in the Library.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the West Midlands NHS trust the ratio of senior medical house officers to the number of acute medical admissions (a) in day-time hours and (b) out of hours. [14318]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of admissions by time of day is not available centrally.

Staff Training (North Staffordshire)

Mr. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will visit the North Staffordshire NHS trust medical assessment unit to congratulate staff on their achievements in respect of the gold standard in training initiatives. [14316]

Mr. Malone: We are always pleased to acknowledge the achievements of staff in the national health service. Unfortunately, due to commitments already made, both I and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be unable to visit the unit in the foreseeable future. I have undertaken to write to the staff acknowledging their achievement.

Strokes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the recent publication "Stoke: National Tragedy, National Priority", published by the Stroke Association; and if he will make a statement; [15640]

(2) what measures he proposes to assist district stroke services. [15642]

(3) if he will make it his policy to ensure that all people who have had strokes are (a) treated as emergency cases by A and E units and (b) assessed and diagnosed at hospital shortly after admission. [15641]

Mr. Burns: We are sure that local health authorities will find the Stroke Association's publication "Stroke: National Tragedy, National Priority" a useful aid to commissioning services for its areas for people who have had a stroke.

The Department of Health has awarded the Stroke Association a number of grants, under the section 64 general scheme, for projects to enhance the provision of stroke services in primary care. Reducing the death rate from stroke is a target of "The Health of the Nation". This is supported by a number of high–profile campaigns such as promoting physical activity and sensible drinking and encouraging people to stop smoking. The national health service executive has produced recommendations on the provision of rehabilitation services for stroke patients which have been distributed to the NHS to assist local health authorities in making decisions about how to organise their services. Copies of this document—an effective health care bulletin entitled "Stroke Rehabilitation"—are available in the Library.

Decisions on when and where to refer for treatment are a clinical matter for the patient's doctor. Under the patients charter, patients in an accident and emergency department can expect to be seen immediately and have their need for treatment assessed. In addition, health authorities should set local standards on times patients can expect to wait to receive treatment in accident and emergency departments after their need for treatment has been assessed.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of junior doctors are working on (a) part-time contracts and (b) flexible training programmes. [15908]

Mr. Malone: At 30 September 1995, 3 per cent. of junior doctors were working on part-time contracts. Separate information on flexible training programmes is not collected centrally.

Blood Products

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which blood products the blood transfusion service sells to the private sector. [15721]

Mr. Horam: The bio products laboratory, which, like the former blood transfusion service, forms part of the National Blood Authority, manufactures a wide variety of blood products, which are sold both to the national health service and to the private sector.

Dentures

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received concerning the wish of denturists to be allowed to fit false teeth. [16225]

Mr. Malone: On several occasions, we have received representations from the Clinical Dental Technicians Associations requesting that the Dentists Act 1984 be amended.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were on the waiting list for operations in the north-west of England in 1979. [16160]

Mr. Horam: Information in the form requested is not available centrally.

Abortion

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that general practitioner fundholders who accept funding for abortion services provide those services. [16112]

Mr. Malone: The accountability framework for general practitioner fundholding EL (95)54 provides the mechanism for agreeing and reviewing fundholder plans and performance, including for the purchase of terminations of pregnancy.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to review the provision of abortion on the NHS by region. [16113]

Mr. Horam: None.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the schools offering assisted places in 1995–96 showing for each (a) the number of places offered, (b) the amount of income received and (c) the proportion of the school's intake covered by assisted places. [15490]

Mrs. Gillan: The table gives the information requested for the 293 schools participating in the assisted places scheme in England in the academic year 1995–96. Information on the proportion of each school's first year intake covered by assisted places is not collected centrally. The table therefore shows total assisted pupil numbers as a proportion of total pupils on roll.

Attendance Database (Bolton)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will disseminate nationally as a model of good practice the pupil attendance database established by Bolton education authority; and if she will make a statement on (a) the correlation between the database and the child benefit register and (b) access by the local education authority to information concerning families claiming housing benefit. [15644]

Mr. Robin Squire: Following a series of contacts with the local authority associations and other interested parties on issues raised by the West case, the Department has issued a consultative letter on tightening up procedures governing the transfer of pupil records and reports. My right hon. Friend will consider whether there is a case for disseminating any particular model of database, or any other example of good practice, in the light of the outcomes of that consultation.

Special Needs

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were (a) the number and (b) the percentage of children with statements of special need (i) in each local education authority area in England and (ii) in total, in each year since 1992. [15481]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is shown in the table and is taken from the Department's statistical bulletin 12/97.

1. Figures are taken from schools' returns under the annual schools census. They include all nursery, primary, middle, secondary and special schools, city technology colleges and pupil referral units; including maintained, grant-maintained, non-maintained and independent schools.
2. The table shows numbers and percentages of pupils educated in schools in each LEA area. For any particular LEA, this will include pupils with statements placed by other LEAs, and exclude such pupils placed by the LEA in other areas.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many appeal hearings have been considered by the special educational needs tribunal (a) in respect of each local education authority in England and (b) in total, in each year since the tribunal began operating. [15480]

Mrs. Gillan: The tribunal maintains records of the number of appeals registered—and decisions issued—rather than the number of appeal hearings.

The number of appeals registered for individual LEAs is set out in the table: 1,092 appeals against decisions by English LEAs were registered in 1994–95 and 1,551 in 1995–96. Some 40 per cent. of all appeals registered to date have been withdrawn before a hearing.

Employment Directions (EU)

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the directions relating to employment in force in the EU and indicate which are issued under the social chapter. [15990]

Mr. Paice: Fourteen directives relating to employment are currently in force in the EU. There are a number of other directives on health and safety at work.

Directives falling within the policy responsibilities of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment:

Council directive 75/117/EEC on the approximation of the laws of the member states relating to the application of the principle of equal pay for men and women.

Council directive 76/207/EEC on the implementation of the principle of equal treatment for men and women as regards access to employment, vocational training and promotion, and working conditions.

Council directive 86/613/EEC on the application of the principle of equal treatment between men and women engaged in an activity, including agriculture, in a self-employed capacity, and on the protection of self-employed women during pregnancy and motherhood.

Directives falling within the policy responsibility of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade:

Council directive 75/129/EEC on the approximation of the laws of the member states relating to collective redundancies.

Council directive 77/187/EEC on the approximation of the laws of member states relating to the safeguarding of employees' rights in the event of transfers of undertakings, businesses or parts of businesses.

Council directive 80/987/EEC on the approximation of the laws of member states relating to the protection of employees in the event of the insolvency of their employer.

Council directive 91/533/EEC on an employer's obligation to inform employees of the conditions applicable to the contract or employment relationship.

Council directive 92/56/EEC amending directive 75/129/EEC on the approximation of the laws of member states relating to collective redundancies.

Council directive 92/85/EEC on the introduction of measures to encourage the safety and health of pregnant workers and workers who have recently given birth or are breastfeeding—this directive includes provisions related to employment.

Council directive 94/104/EC concerning certain aspects of the organisation of working time.

Council directive 94/33/EC on the protection of young people at work.

*Council directive 94/45/EC on the establishment of a European works council or a procedure in community-scale undertakings and community-scale groups of undertakings, for the purposes of informing and consulting employees.

*Council directive 96/34/EC on the framework agreement on parental leave concluded by UNICE, CEEP and the ETUC.

Council directive 96/71/EC concerning the posting of workers in the framework of the provision of services.

Directives marked with an asterisk have been promulgated under the agreement on social policy, known as the social chapter, and are not, therefore, applicable to the UK.

Jobmatch Scheme

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the estimated annual cost of the national jobmatch scheme for under-25-year-olds. [15800]

Mr. Forth: In 1997–98, the jobmatch scheme will offer 4,000 opportunities at a cost of some £4.8 million

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of (a) the costs and (b) the numbers gaining if the jobmatch scheme for under-25-year-olds was available to those (i) unemployed for one year and (ii) unemployed for 26 weeks; and what is her estimate of the cost of reinstating bonus payments after 26 weeks in work. [15801]

Mr. Forth: To extend the availability of the jobmatch scheme to people under 25 who have been unemployed for one year would require some 10,000 opportunities at a cost of about £12 million; to extend it to those unemployed for 26 weeks would require up to 19,000 opportunities at a cost of some £23 million. To reinstate the additional payments in 1997–98 for young people unemployed for two years would cost about £300,000.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if Employment Service advisers will be authorised to issue a jobseeker's direction to a claimant aged 18 to 24 years directing him to apply for a part-time vacancy under the jobmatch scheme. [16124]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 17 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about whether Employment Service Advisers have the authority to issue Jobseeker's Directions to 18 to 24 year old jobseekers for a part-time vacancy under Jobmatch. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

It may be helpful if I explain that the purpose of a Jobseeker's Direction is to make sure that jobseekers who may not be properly or effectively looking for work undertake a specific job search activity which will put them in a better position to find a job. A Jobseeker's Direction can fall into one of four categories:— those which underpin active jobsearch; referral to Employment Service (ES) programmes; other referrals to non ES programmes (eg Training for Work); and a personal direction related to behaviour/appearance. A Direction will only be given if the jobseeker has gone through the usual advisory interview process, and has not been influenced or persuaded to undertake a particular activity which is reasonable and will improve their chances of finding work.

It follows that an ES adviser would be able to issue a Jobseeker's Direction to a jobseeker aged 18–24, who has been employed for two years or more to apply for a part-time vacancy, which would qualify them for Jobmatch.

I hope this clarifies the position.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many unemployed people receiving the jobseeker's allowance are involved in self-build schemes; how many have been refused the jobseeker's allowance because they have been deemed unavailable for work while involved in self-build schemes; and what is her estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers who are aged (i) under 25 years and (ii) over 25 years from deeming availability during a period on a self-build project. [15830]

Mr. Forth: The Employment Service does not collect specific information about unemployed people who receive JSA and who participate in self-build schemes. It is not possible, therefore, to provide any of the estimates requested.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of (a) the costs and (b) the numbers of under-25-year-olds gaining from (i) the abolition of the 16-hour rule for the jobseeker's allowance, (ii) introducing part-time availability for work to those undertaking part-time study under the 16-hour rule and (iii) removing the requirement on those in part-time study to give up a course if suitable work is available until such time as the course has ended. [15803]

Mr. Forth: We have made no such estimates. The evaluation of the workskill pilots, which we plan to introduce on 7 April 1997, is intended to provide some information of this kind.

Bridging Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many young people claimed the bridging allowance during 1995–96; what was the average period during which payments were made; and how many claims were refused, by reason for refusal. [15802]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 17 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the number of young people claiming bridging allowance during 1995–96.

The Employment Service does not hold figures on the number of claims for Youth Training Bridging Allowance (YTBA) by young people; the average period during which payment is made; how many claims are refused or the reason for refusal.

The Employment Service does, however, record the total number of young people in receipt of YTBA. In the period April 1995 to March 1996 the total was 41,815.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

School Uniforms

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which metropolitan cities have banned school uniforms from local education authority schools; when bans were originally enforced; and if she will make a statement. [16020]

Mrs. Gillan: Information about school uniform policies is not collected centrally. School governing bodies are free to decide for themselves whether their schools should have a uniform.

Teacher (Early Retirement)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what procedures are in place for auditing the cost to the teachers superannuation scheme of early retirements though ill health and for monitoring the causes of variations between local education authorities in the numbers of early retirements through ill health. [16099]

Mrs. Gillan: The teachers superannuation scheme is subject to an actuarial inquiry every five years, carried out by the Government Actuary's Department. Its report deals with the finances of the scheme and makes recommendations on the total contributions payable by teachers and employers which will meet the cost of benefits—including early retirements—debited to the teachers superannuation account.

We do not monitor the causes of variations between local authorities in the numbers of early retirements through ill health; each application is assessed on an individual basis.

Quantock School

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of Education and Employment what action her Department has taken in response to the recent Office for Standards in Education report on Quantock school, Somerset; and if she will make a statement. [16121]

Mrs. Gillan: Officials have written to the school about the weaknesses identified in the recently published Ofsted report and have sought firm commitments within two months on remedial action. We will consider what further steps may be necessary in the light of the response.

TRANSPORT

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15922]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member when the information he requests is available and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Drink Driving

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his current estimate of the average number of people each week driving with illegal levels of alcohol; and what were the equivalent figures in 1987. [15841]

Mr. Bowis: Information is not available in this form as drivers are tested only following an accident, or on suspicion of having consumed alcohol or of having committed a traffic offence in a moving vehicle.

For several years, male drivers have been asked, in surveys conducted before the Department's Christmas drink-drive campaigns, if at any time in the previous week they had driven after having drunk six or more units of alcohol. In 1987, 7 per cent. admitted to doing this; by 1995, the latest year for which the figure is available, this had fallen to 4 per cent. The effect of consuming six units varies between individuals and circumstances and so this cannot be closely aligned with the legal limit. It does, however, give some indication of the trend.

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 68, what financial arrangements have been made with Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and the Discovery Channel; who will have editorial control over the programme; and if he will make a statement. [16039]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for negotiation between Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution and the Discovery Channel.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Prosecution Guidelines

27. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Attorney-General when the Attorney-General's guidelines on the prosecution of offences were last reviewed; and if he will make a statement. [14437]

The Attorney-General: The Attorney-General's criteria for prosecution issued in 1983 were superseded in 1986 by the code for Crown prosecutors. This was last amended in 1994 to clarify the realistic prospect of conviction test and the public interest factors in favour of prosecution. The fundamental principles have remained unchanged throughout.

Asil Nadir

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the current position on the prosecution of Asil Nadir. [14431]

The Solicitor-General: Asil Nadir stands indicted before the central criminal court on 13 counts of theft. The Crown is ready to proceed. Mr. Nadir should return to the country forthwith.

Government Property Lawyers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the work of the Government property lawyers. [14438]

The Attorney-General: The Government Property Lawyers is an executive agency of the Treasury Solicitor's Department. It provides conveyancing and comprehensive lands advisory services to Government Departments and other publicly funded bodies in England and Wales. The conveyancing services include purchases of land and properties, sales of surplus land, leases of office buildings and various other land transactions. Further information about the work of the agency is obtainable from the annual report and accounts 1995–96, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Albania

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects for democracy in Albania; and if he will make a statement. [15780]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There has been significant progress in democracy in Albania in recent years. However, Council of Europe reports make it clear that deficiencies remain. We continue to press the Albanian Government both bilaterally and through the EU for improvements in democratic practices and for the involvement of all parties in the process of constitutional reform.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements exist to ensure that payments from the know-how fund and other aid funds to Albania are used effectively and are not subject to any corrupt practices; and if he will make a statement. [15784]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The know-how fund provides support for Albania by funding the costs of British expertise, or know-how, for specific projects. The fund closely monitors and evaluates all its projects, both as they are running and after they are complete. In this way, it can ensure that the projects are correctly and cost-effectively implemented and have achieved their objectives. The fund also employs independent consultants to assess the success and impact of the projects it funds.

Other British aid funds to Albania come from the emergency aid department of the Overseas Development Administration. In 1996–97 its support has so far consisted of a single grant of £100,000 to a World Health Organisation programme for prevention of poliomyelitis. This programme was evaluated in January 1997 by an EMAD staff member and found to be satisfactory.

For EC programmes, to which we also contribute, there are separate procedures, agreed by the member states, for ensuring that funds are correctly spent.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Albanian authorities about the conduct of the Albanian police in dealing with recent public protests; and if he will make a statement. [15778]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are appalled by the violence used by both police and demonstrators in Vlora. We have made clear our views to the Albanian authorities.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the (a) role and (b) profits of United Kingdom consultancy firms in Albania; and if he will make a statement. [15779]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There are a number of UK consultancies active in Albania, working under contract to a variety of organisations. We do not hold information on their respective profits.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the contribution of smuggling to the Albanian economy; and if he will make a statement. [15781]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There are no reliable estimates of the effect of smuggling on the Albanian economy. Our aim is to see a prosperous and stable Albania. We therefore strongly support the work of the International Monetary Fund, which has implemented an economic reform programme in Albania.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about the level of pyramid selling in Albania; when he expects that problem to be resolved; and what contribution Her Majesty's Government are making to resolving the problem. [15783]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Albanian media reports suggest that 50 to 70 per cent. of the population may have invested money in pyramid schemes. The problem is therefore unlikely to be resolved quickly. The United Kingdom has offered technical expertise through the UK know-how fund to help the Albanian Government. With our EU partners, we are considering whether there is a role for the EU.

European Institutions (Running Costs)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his current estimate of the annual running costs of (a) the European Commission, (b) the European Parliament, (c) the European Court of Justice and (d) other EU institutions. [15727]

Mr. David Davis: The running costs of EU institutions in 1995, 1996 and 1997 are as follows:

	1995	1996	1997
Commission	2,538.6	2,696.7	2,798.1
Parliament	832.1	802.7	887.2
Council	306.2	307.0	320.3
Court of Justice	112.9	169.7	123.1
Court of Auditors	50.0	56.2	57.7
Economic and Social Committee	25.0	27.6	27.9
Committee of the Regions	10.5	16.1	15.6
Joint organisational structure (supports the Economic and Social Committee of the Regions)	49.8	52.6	53.8

All figures are commitments in mecu and are rounded to the nearest 0.1 mecu. The 1995 figures are taken from the Court of Auditors annual report concerning the financial year 1995. The 1996 and 1997 figures have been taken from the general budget of the European Union for these years.

UN Rapid Deployment Brigade

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support the joint appeal by the Foreign Ministers of Canada, Denmark and the Netherlands for the creation of a UN rapid deployment brigade; and if he will make a statement. [15825]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We welcome this initiative. We are, however, concerned that earmarking specific troops for the proposed force would place restrictions on our ability to provide the most appropriate UK contribution in a particular UN operation. We would also be concerned about the possible effect on our other operational responsibilities.

We support the UN Secretary-General's standby force planning arrangements, under which UN member states declare the forces and assets they are prepared to provide on a case-by-case basis. We have provided the UN secretariat with detailed information on UK forces we might make available, and have encouraged others to do the same.

Sudan

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to assist the combatant parties in Sudan to reach a negotiated settlement which provides for self-determination for the southern population; what measures he has taken to date to assist the peace process; and if he will make a statement. [15794]

Mr. Hanley: We have fully supported the peace initiative of the intergovernmental authority for development. The declaration of principles produced under that initiative included the right of self-determination for southern Sudan. In our frequent contacts with the parties, we continue to urge a negotiated end to the war.

Israel

Sir Cyril Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent of Israel's compliance with the EU–Israel association agreement. [16110]

Mr. Hanley: The EU–Israel association agreement is not yet in force. When it is in force, the association committee to be established under article 70 and to be made up of officials representing both parties will be responsible for the implementation of the agreement. Any major issues arising under the agreement will be examined by the association council to be established under article 67 with representatives from both parties which will meet at ministerial level. It has the power to take decisions binding on the parties for the purpose of attaining the objectives of the agreement.

Sir Cyril Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the compliance of the Israeli authorities with the EU's Dublin declaration relating to the immediate lifting of the blockade in Palestine. [16123]

Mr. Hanley: There has been some increase in the number of permits available for Palestinians to work in Israel. We will continue to press for freer passage for Palestinian goods. We welcome the parties' renewed commitment to tackle outstanding issues from the interim agreement, such as the opening of Gaza airport and the construction of Gaza port. With our full backing, the EU special envoy to the peace process has begun a constructive dialogue with both sides on how to remove the remaining problems.

China

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions Her Majesty's Government have had with the Government of China concerning their contributions to global warming; and if he will make a statement. [15946]

Dr. Liam Fox: We are in regular discussion with all countries, including China, which are part of the negotiating process to mitigate climate change under the framework convention on climate change. We have urged all countries to contribute to a successful outcome to the third conference of the parties at Kyoto in December, and have proposed that developed countries should take the lead by reducing greenhouse gas emissions to 5 to 10 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have been (a) murdered and (b) injured in (i) Roman Catholic and (ii) Protestant places of worship by terrorists in Northern Ireland since 1968. [13848]

Sir John Wheeler: The information regarding murders is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The information requested on injuries is not available.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Roman Catholic maintained schools, (b) Roman Catholic churches, (c) controlled schools, (d) Protestant church properties and (e) Orange halls have been attacked in each year since 1968 in Northern Ireland. [13846]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not held in precisely the format requested and is not available for the full period requested.

The information that is available is as follows:

(a), (c) Attacks on School Property

1994: 23

1995: 39

1996: 60.

(b), (d) Attacks on Church Property

1994: 20

1995: 52

1996: 53.

(e) Attacks on Orange Halls

1990: 6

1991: 11

1992: 17

1993: 12

1994: 8

1996: 32.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) Roman Catholic churches and (b) Protestant churches have closed in each year since 1968 because of terrorist attack in Northern Ireland. [13847]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not available.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if any of the birds involved in the recent outbreak of Newcastle disease had been given the vaccine prior to contamination; and if he will make a statement. [13606]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 31 January 1997]: None of the birds involved in the recent outbreak of Newcastle disease in Northern Ireland had been given vaccine prior to becoming infected with the disease.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of (a) chickens and (b) turkeys on farms in Northern Ireland are currently vaccinated against Newcastle disease; and if he will make a statement. [13603]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 31 January 1997]: Vaccination of poultry against Newcastle disease is normally prohibited in Northern Ireland.

Following an outbreak of the disease on a broiler production unit near Lurgan, County Armagh on 7 February 1997, ring vaccination has been carried out by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland within a 10 km zone of the infected premises: 52,000 chickens—0.35 per cent. of chickens in Northern Ireland—and 2,000 turkeys—0.50 per cent. of turkeys on farms in Northern Ireland—were vaccinated.

Arthur Andersen

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current status of his Department's litigation against Arthur Andersen over the demise of DeLorean Motors. [14811]

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Economic Development legal action against Arthur Andersen and Company in the US remains. The judge in the case has decided, following a hearing in New York on 28 and 29 October 1996, to dismiss the Department's federal law claims and transfer the common law claims to state court. The Department is considering whether to appeal this judgment.

Gun Laws

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many letters he has received concerning the proposed changes in gun laws; how many and what proportion (a) favoured and (b) did not favour the complete banning of handguns; and if he will make a statement about the time scale for his proposals as regards the law in Northern Ireland. [14837]

Sir John Wheeler: To date a total of 96 letters has been received about the possible implications for Northern Ireland of the Government's proposals for firearms reform in Great Britain following Lord Cullen's report. Of these, two—2.8 per cent.—were in favour of and 90—93.75 per cent.—were opposed to a total ban on handguns. A further four letters were received which were of a simple inquiry nature. The Secretary of State has yet to decide what reforms he would like to see introduced but, on current plans, it remains his intention to have the amending legislation in place during the latter part of the 1997–98 parliamentary Session.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which projects have been given private finance initiative approval; which projects have been authorised to seek PFI funding; which projects are being considered as suitable for PFI funding; and if he will make a statement on the progress of the PFI in Northern Ireland. [15321]

Sir John Wheeler: The private finance initiative in Northern Ireland is beginning to gather momentum. NI Departments and the Northern Ireland Office are committed to making the maximum use of private finance opportunities, and have appointed appropriate personnel to advance the initiative as effectively as possible within their own programmes. Projects approved under the private finance initiative to date include a contract energy services scheme at Holywell hospital, car parking facilities at the Royal group of hospitals, and leasing of medical and other equipment. All capital projects are required to consider private finance solutions, details of projects which are currently under consideration for PFI are given in the table.

	Project
Bangor and Kinnegar sewerage treatment works	Design, build, finance and operate
Hydro electric project	Hydro electric scheme
Westlink urban motorway	Design, build, finance and operate

T and EA IT system	Computerisation

In addition to the projects listed on the table, the Department of Education is also undertaking a market sounding study of its schools estate in order to assess the wider potential for PFI in respect of more than 100 high-priority schools projects.

Farm and Countryside Enhancement Scheme

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what payments have been made in respect of each of the approved applications for the farm and countryside enhancement scheme. [15468]

Mr. Ancram: None of the applications received has been approved and no payments have been made under the farm and countryside enhancement scheme.

Health Clinic Facilities (Armagh)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what public funds are involved in the proposed purchase of Thompson's egg store, Dobbin street, Armagh, to provide additional health clinic facilities; and if he will make a statement; [15471]

(2) what plans he has to sell the doctors' health clinic at Dobbin street, Armagh; and if he will make a statement. [15472]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subjects in these questions has been delegated to Health Estates under its chief executive, Mr. R. H. Browne. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from R. H. Browne to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 14 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State regarding plans to sell the health centre at Dobbin Street Lane, Armagh and the use of public funds in the purchase of Thompson's Egg Store, Armagh.

Whilst no formal approach has been made, it is understood that the general practitioners who operate from the health centre are interested in buying the property. In the event of an approach being received from the general practitioners, the property would be offered to them at a price negotiated by the Valuation and Lands Agency. The sale would be conditional upon a lease-back arrangement in respect of the accommodation occupied by staff of Armagh and Dungannon HSS Trust.

As regards Thompson's Egg Store, I am not aware of any proposal, involving public funds, to purchase the store for the provision of additional health facilities.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Queen's University (Student Intake)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children progressed from each (a) controlled, (b) maintained and (c) other schools to Queen's university in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [15473]

Mr. Ancram: The last educational institutions attended by Northern Ireland domiciled first year full-time undergraduate students aged under 21 were as follows:

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Controlled schools	449	461	n/a
Maintained schools	128	113	n/a
Other schools	1,281	1,390	n/a
FE/unknown/other	362	377	n/a
Total	2,220	2,341	—

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students went to Queen's university from (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Great Britain, (c) the Republic of Ireland and (d) elsewhere in each of the last three years. [15474]

Mr. Ancram: The information for full-time undergraduate students is as follows:

Domicile	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Northern Ireland	2,557	2,494	2,642
Great Britain	68	52	104
Republic of Ireland	201	200	275
Elsewhere	157	171	241
Total	2,983	2,917	3,262

Union Flag

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Union flag was not flown at the Department of Agriculture, the Mall, Armagh city on 6 February; if a Union flag has been provided for this public building; if a schedule of dates for flying the Union flag has been advised to the staff; if the person responsible was prepared to carry out this duty; and if he will make a statement. [15573]

Mr. Ancram: I regret that the Union flag was not flown on the day of Her Majesty's accession. This building was completely refurbished recently and reoccupied by new staff who were unable to trace the original flag which had been moved to another location. A flag has been ordered, a list of dates for flying the flag provided and arrangements are now in place to have a person responsible for carrying out this duty.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Union flag was not flown at the Department of Agriculture, 2 Newry road, Armagh city on 6 February; if a Union flag has been provided for this public building; if the schedule of dates for flying the Union flag has been advised to the staff; if the person responsible was prepared to carry out this duty; and if he will make a statement. [15572]

Mr. Ancram: I regret that the Union flag was not flown on the day of Her Majesty's accession due to an oversight. A Union flag is available for the building and a list of dates had been advised. The person responsible is prepared to carry out the duty and steps have been taken to ensure that the mistake is not repeated.

Raising School Standards Initiative

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the schools which (a) have participated and (b) are participating in the raising school standards initiative; and if he will make a statement. [16006]

Mr. Ancram: The information has been placed in the Library.

WALES

Job Creation

11. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress has been made to define specific targets for the Welsh Development Agency and other bodies involved in the creation of new jobs in Wales, to secure a larger number of job opportunities in the western parts. [14451]

Mr. Hague: I have already announced that I will be setting new and far more demanding targets for jobs outside the eastern M4 and A55 corridors.

18. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of jobs created by inward investment since 1979. [14458]

Mr. Hague: Since April 1983, when the Welsh Development Agency began a database of investment into Wales, more than 59,000 new jobs have been promised by overseas-generated projects.

19. Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs have been (a) created and (b) safeguarded since 1992; and what estimate he has made of the number of jobs to be created in the next financial year as a result of Government policies to assist (i) employment creation and (ii) inward investment. [14459]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested. On the basis of projects involving regional selective assistance since April 1992, firms have forecast some 43,000 new jobs to be created and 19,800 safeguarded. Of these, more than 22,500 new jobs and 12,600 safeguarded jobs involve overseas-owned firms.

Hospital Admissions (Suspension)

12. Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh hospitals have had to suspend non-emergency admissions in the past three months. [14452]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I understand that 15 Welsh hospitals have closed at different times to non-emergency admissions since the beginning of November.

I have been impressed by the way in which health authorities and trusts have worked together to minimise the impact of medical emergency admissions on elective cases. This is a significant improvement over previous years.

Job Insecurity

13. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of job insecurity in Wales. [14453]

Mr. Hague: In spring 1996, according to the labour force survey, 8.3 per cent. of Welsh employees were in temporary employment.

Activity Centres (Safety)

14. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement regarding the implementation of the Activity Centres (Young Person's Safety) Act 1995 in Wales. [14454]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: During the transitional period for inspecting and licensing existing providers, Tourism Quality Services Ltd., the designated licensing authority, will be carrying out inspections of all operators on Wales falling within the scope of the Act. Good progress is being made and Tourism Quality Services is on course to complete its inspections by 1 October.

Roads Expenditure

16. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent by his Department on (a) motorways and (b) major trunk roads in Wales in each of the past five years, at constant prices. [14456]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Separate figures for motorways and major trunk roads are not available. Total expenditure on motorways and trunk roads in Wales in each of the past five years at 1995–96 prices was:

	£ million
1991–92	151.0
1992–93	188.0
1993–94	208.2
1994–95	199.4
1995–96	193.8

Devolved Government

17. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations he has received on the introduction of devolved government in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [14457]

Mr. Hague: Eleven since the beginning of January 1996, the majority being against the creation of a Welsh Assembly.

Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent measures he has taken to reduce unemployment in Wales. [14455]

Mr. Hague: I have set—and continue to set—challenging job creation targets for the various Government agencies in Wales. These targets are being met or exceeded.

Technical Advice

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the (a) individuals and their relevant work establishment and (b) organisations which were sent copies of each of the draft technical advice notes which his Department has published for consultation; if he will list those which have submitted responses to date; and if he will make a statement; [15239]

(2) if he will list the (a) individuals and their relevant work establishment and (b) organisations who were sent copies of each of the technical advice notes which his Department has now published; if he will list those that submitted responses; and if he will make a statement. [15240]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The following lists have been placed in the Library of the House:

1. Planning Guidance (Wales), Technical Advice Notes (Wales). Recipients of consultation.
2. Planning Guidance (Wales), Technical Advice Notes (Wales). Recipients (1) of published advice notes. There have been no responses to the published documents.
3. Respondents to the public consultation versions of the published advice notes 1–8.
4. Respondents to date, to the public consultation exercise on advice notes 9–23. This public consultation exercise ends on 21 February 1997.
5. Consultees on advice notes on "Planning and the Historic Environment: Historic Buildings and Conservation Areas" and "Planning and the Historic Environment: Archaeology" (2).

(ii) Respondents to the consultation.

(iii) Recipients of the published circulars (1).

Note:

(1) Those to whom copies were sent by the Welsh Office.

(2) These advice notes were published by Cadw as circulars.

St. Asaph Business Park

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the original targets set for (a) the number of units, (b) the acreage of land and (c) the number of jobs created in respect of the St. Asaph business park; what percentage of these targets have been met; what has been the cost of the business park; and what funding has been received from European grant aid. [16109]

Mr. Hague: This is an operational matter for the Welsh Development Agency. I have asked the agency's acting chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the details requested and I shall arrange for a copy of the reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) of 3 February, Official Report, columns 517–18, what part of the additional expenditure under the (a) industry and (b) other sub-heads expenditure in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99 will count towards the eligible expenditure of the Welsh Development Agency under its (1) approved and (2) proposed financial limits. [16198]

Mr. Hague: The planned additional expenditure that will count towards the eligible expenditure of the Welsh Development Agency shown in the table that I provided on 3 February 1997, Official Report, columns 517–18, is as follows:

	1997–98 £ million Cash prices	1998–99 £ million Cash prices
Industry	44.7	82.4

It is expected that there will be sufficient headroom for the 1997–98 provision to be accommodated within the current financial limit. However, the limit will need to be raised to accommodate the 1998–99 provision.

Community Care (Direct Payments) Act 1996

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implementation of the Community Care (Direct Payments) Act 1996; and if he will make a statement. [14446]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government intend to bring the Community Care (Direct Payments) Act 1996 into force on 1 April 1997. The implementation of the Act will be monitored as part of the Department's general monitoring of community care.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Pollution

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list (a) the location of and (b) the number of fish killed in each of the (i) category 1 and (ii) category 2 pollution incidents caused by each of the water and sewerage companies in 1995; [14979]

(2) how many fish were killed in (a) category 1 and (b) category 2 pollution incidents caused by the water and sewerage companies in each year from 1989 to 1995. [14980]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 10 February 1997]: I have arranged for the relevant details of category 1 and 2 water pollution incidents which occurred in 1995 and were attributed by the Environment Agency to water and sewerage companies in each agency region to be placed in the Libraries of the House. Data are not available on the numbers of fish killed as a result of incidents that took place before 1995.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new documentation will be considered in the extended period of evaluation announced on 5 February, in respect of the Nirex application to contract a rock characterisation facility at Longlands farm, Gosforth, in Cumbria; if he proposes the inspector at the public inquiry on the RCF should review this new documentation; and if he will make a statement. [15448]

Mr. Gummer: Before reaching a decision on the planning appeal concerning this application I am considering the evidence brought to my attention which is relevant. I am also considering how any relevant evidence should be reviewed.

Commission for the New Towns (Corby)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total sum realised by the sale of assets by the Commission for the New Towns in Corby for each year since 1979–80. [15733]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Commission for the New Towns took over from the Corby new town development corporation in 1980. The total sum realised by the sale of assets in Corby each year since then is as follows:

Year	Amount £ million
1980–81	0.913
1981–82	0.557
1982–83	5.723
1983–84	2.495
1984–85	1.470
1985–86	1.772
1986–87	4.220
1987–88	10.249
1988–89	17.410
1989–90	38.087
1990–91	7.541
1991–92	2.498
1992–93	0.558
1993–94	0.368
1994–95	9.507
1995–96	1.943
Total	105.311

Local Authority Employees (Northamptonshire)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were employed by each local authority in Northamptonshire (a) full time and (b) part time in each year since 1992. [15732]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is given in the table.

The levels of employment in individual authorities are not directly comparable because of variations in population structure, social characteristics, hours worked by part-time staff, and the extent to which they use private firms and contractors or act as agents for other authorities.

Numbers employed directly by local authorities in Northamptonshire: (excluding Law and Order)

Joint Staffing Watch.
1996 figures are provisional.
[1] Data not available.
[2] In making comparisons between years it should be noted that staffing levels within county councils have been affected by (a) the removal of further education institutions from the local authority sector and (b) local authorities taking on responsibility for Community Care. Both these changes took place from April 1993.

Environment Agency (Prosecutions)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the prosecutions carried out in England and Wales by the Environment Agency for waste offences, in each month since 1 April 1996, indicating (a) the person or company prosecuted, (b) the date and outcome of the prosecution, (c) the nature of the offence and (d) the penalty imposed. [15671]

Mr. Clappison: Data relating to prosecutions by the Environment Agency for waste offences are not yet held centrally, although detailed records are held at a local level.

The agency does, of course, recognise the need to collate and manage its data effectively and has already taken significant steps towards drawing up a coherent national policy on data management, addressing the many disparate data collection and information systems inherited by the agency on 1 April 1996. It is also considering a number of policy options that will enable information relating to all of its enforcement activities to be made fully available. As I said in my answer of 16 October 1996, Official Report, columns 1045–46, when data on waste offences are centrally available I will write to the hon. Member about it.

Global Warming

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sums were provided to institutions and research bodies in connection with research and information on global warming in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what amount is planned to be spent in the coming year. [15945]

Mr. Clappison: In 1996–97, the Department of Environment is providing about £14.5 million to institutions and research bodies for research and information specifically related to climate change. A similar amount is likely to be spent in the coming financial year.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his Department's current estimates of global temperature rises over the 1951 to 1980 average; and if he will list the sources of research from which the estimates are drawn. [15947]

Mr. Clappison: The global temperature in 1996 was 0.265 deg. C above the 1951 to 1980 average; this was the eighth warmest year since instrumental records began in 1860.

The global temperature in 1995 was 0.425 deg. C above the 1951 to 1980 average; this was the warmest year since instrumental records began.

These data are compiled from observations made at more than 1,000 land meteorological stations and a similar number of ships and buoys around the world; analysis of the data is undertaken by the UK Meteorological Office, which supplied those statistics.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have been held within the European Council on the European contribution to global warming; and if he will make a statement. [15944]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Council regularly discusses climate change issues, including the sources and scale of European greenhouse gas emissions and the action which should be taken under the framework convention on climate change to counter the threat of climate change.

Factory Shop Complex (Ashford)

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce his decision on the next stage of the proposed factory shop complex in Ashford. [15707]

Sir Paul Beresford: We are considering the representations made on this matter and hope to issue our decision as soon as possible.

Estate Action Schemes

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the forecast level of local authority matching funding contribution required by the Department of the Environemnt in 1997–98 and the next two financial years to fund estate action schemes. [15888]

Sir Paul Beresford: The phasing of estate action grant by scheme in 1997–98 and the next two years—and hence the phasing of local authorities' required contributions to schemes—is currently being finalised. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as the requested figures are available.

Local Government Finance

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answers of 13 January, Official Report, columns 98–100, and 11 December 1996, Official Report, columns 213–14, if he will now update the answers based on the final local government financial settlement for 1997–98. [15952]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have place in the Library a table for standard spending assessment plus police grant for all local authorities and a table showing the adjustments made to the 1996–97 amounts.

The remaining tables, for total standard spending and aggregate exchequer finance for the main local authority groups, total external support for individual authorities, and for regional analyses, will be placed in the Library shortly.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each individual local authority and class of local authority in England at 31 March 1996 (a) the total value of fixed assets, (b) the long-term and temporary external debt outstanding and (c) the value of fixed assets net of total external debt ranked by the value of fixed assets net of external debt. [15852]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have today placed the information requested in the Library of the House.

Climate Change Convention

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to submit a report to the United Nations, setting out the United Kingdom's progress in meeting its commitments under the UN framework convention on climate change; and if he will make a statement. [16443]

Mr. Gummer: I intend to publish, tomorrow, the United Kingdom's second report under the framework convention on climate change, "Climate Change, the UK Programme", copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House.

Rough Sleeping

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to encourage local authorities to assess levels of rough sleeping in their areas and to develop strategies to tackle any problem that they identify. [16303]

Mr. Curry: Under the rough sleepers initiative, my Department has encouraged and assisted head counts of people sleeping rough in a number of areas. Following the Government's announcement in March 1996 that they would continue the rough sleepers initiative in central London and extend it to Bristol, my Department commissioned Shelter to co-ordinate evaluations of the level of rough sleeping in 23 areas where some evidence of a problem had been mentioned in consultation with local authorities and other statutory and voluntary sector agencies. The evaluations were conducted during June and July 1996 and Shelter's report to the Department informed the Government's decisions, announced on 31 October, Official Report, column 187, to expand the rough sleepers initiative in London and extend it to Brighton; and to offer financial support from a new rough sleepers revenue fund for strategies to tackle rough sleeping in 10 other areas.

As part of that announcement, I said that the Department would publish guidance to help all local authorities to assess the extent of rough sleeping in their areas and to develop effective strategies to help people sleeping rough. I am pleased to announce publication today of that guidance, which is being made available free to all housing authorities and voluntary sector agencies working with people sleeping rough. Copies have been placed in the Library.

My Department's housing strategies guidance to local authorities advises them that they should aim to make it unnecessary for anyone to sleep rough within their area and that they should aim to provide a strategic framework of assistance covering all the agencies involved in meeting the needs of single homeless people, including people sleeping rough. That guidance advises local authorities to consider undertaking a count of rough sleepers to assist in assessing local needs. I hope that local authorities for areas in which rough sleeping problems exist will make use of the more detailed guidance published today. The Government will consider extending funding under the rough sleepers initiative and the rough sleepers revenue fund to areas where the guidance has been followed, where major rough sleeping problems have been demonstrated and where local authorities take a lead in developing joint statutory and voluntary sector strategies to tackle rough sleeping.

Minerals Compensation Regulations

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the results of public consultation on new minerals compensation regulations; and if he will make a statement. [16305]

Sir Paul Beresford: Public consultation on the new minerals compensation regulations closed on 24 January. Thirty-three responses were received by my Department. A summary of the key points has been placed in the House Library together with the Government response. The regulations have been laid before Parliament today and are subject to approval by affirmative resolution in both Houses.

I am also making available in the Library a monitoring report, published in October 1996, which shows how the compliance costs associated with the minerals reforms introduced by the Environment Act 1995 have been assessed.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the allocation for the 1997–98 round of the estates renewal challenge fund. [16304]

Mr. Curry: I shall be announcing allocations for the 1997–98 round of the estates renewal challenge fund tomorrow and shall place copies of the press notice detailing the successful authorities in the Libraries of both Houses.

Asbestos

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the Health and Safety Commission's recommendations relating to the future of the regulatory regime for asbestos; and if he will make a statement. [16442]

Mr. Gummer: I have written to the Health and Safety Commission welcoming and accepting its timely advice on a range of asbestos issues. It has recommended that we maintain our existing policy, to work with our EU partners to extend the ban on asbestos to all types of asbestos, with a limited number of exceptions for genuinely essential uses where safe and effective substitutes cannot be found at affordable cost.

The HSC has also said that, in the light of responses to its May 1996 discussion document "The future of the lead and asbestos regulations", it has asked the Health and Safety Executive to consider and develop, where appropriate, proposals for some changes to the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983 and the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987. It plans to publish a consultative document in 1998. This represents a progressive yet sensible approach to this difficult subject, and I welcome the initiative.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his plans for the development of the local authority role in waste recycling. [16556]

Mr. Gummer: A review group on the local authority role in recycling was established last year, comprising members from local government, from private sector producers, waste disposal operators and users of recycled waste, from community groups, and from central government. Its report has now been finalised and submitted to me and to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. It contains a number of proposals, including for local authorities to work together to produce municipal waste management strategies, and emphasises the importance of an integrated approach to waste management. I and my right hon. Friend are today issuing the report for consultation, and will consider its recommendations in the light of comments received. Copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

Local authorities have a vital role to play in helping to achieve the goal of sustainable development. I welcome the group's report as a positive contribution to the development of that role, and am grateful to its members for the time and effort they have put into the group's work.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the White Paper on sustainable development will be published; and if he will make a statement. [16557]

Mr. Gummer: We will publish "This Common Inheritance: UK Annual Report 1997" tomorrow, Tuesday 18 February 1997. Copies will be placed in the Library.

The White Paper reports progress during 1966 in meeting the commitments we made in previous White Papers and in the 1994 UK sustainable development strategy, as well as making commitments for future action. In particular, it highlights our new priorities for the year ahead and brings together the key quantified targets already agreed by Government or under consideration.

Cash Limits

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change the 1996-97 cash limits and running cost limits for which he is responsible. [14301]

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his answer, 31 January 1997, c. 389]: The Department of the Environment/European regional development fund non-voted cash limit was incorrectly shown as being reduced by £4,995,000 from £183,295,000 to £178,300,000. This should have shown the DOE/ERDF non-voted cash limit as being reduced by £4,965,000 from £182,782,000 to £177,817,000. This reflects transfers of £4,518,000 to sections M and N on vote 2—regeneration and countryside and wildlife—and £447,000 to the Department of Transport.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioner Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the value of the 25p age addition to the retirement pension in 1997–98 if it had been uprated by (a) prices and (b) earnings since its introduction; and if he will estimate how much it would cost to increase it to these levels. [14281]

Mr. Heald: The 25p age addition to the retirement pension was first introduced in September 1971. In 1997–98 it would be worth £1.70 if uprated by prices and £3.80 if uprated by average earnings[1]. The estimated costs are in the table[2]:

Age addition in 1997–98	Uprated by prices to £1.70	Uprated by earnings to £3.80
Gross cost	£180 million	£440 million
Net cost	£110 million	£260 million

[1] The uprated value of the age addition has been calculated by assuming that it was uprated each time Retirement Pension was uprated and all calculations were rounded to the nearest 5p at each uprating date. The upratings have been calculated using either the Average Earnings Index (whole economy unadjusted) as published by the Office for National Statistics or the Retail Prices Index (all items) as appropriate.

[2] All costs are rounded to the nearest £10 million. The gross costs of uprating were estimated by the Government Actuary's Department. The costs net of the impact on income-related benefits have been calculated using offset ratios of 42 per cent.

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, columns 191-92, if he will list (a) total expenditure on national insurance benefits, including administration but not including incentives to personal pensions, (b) total receipts of the national insurance funds, (c) the amount of the surplus over receipts and (d) the percentage of (b) over (a) in each year from 1979–80 to 1995, at 1995–96 prices. [14274]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

	(A) National Insurance Benefit expenditure and administration cost[1] (£ billion)	(B) Total National Insurance Fund receipts[1 2] (£ billion)	(C) Column B—Column A[1]	(D) Percentage of Column B over Column A

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 721, how many of the 51 notices issued by the clerk to the social security appeal tribunal covering the Newport, Gwent, area in the week commencing 9 December 1996 resulted in requests for oral hearings by (a) the claimant only, (b) the adjudication officer only and (c) both the claimant and the adjudication officer; and how many of those requests were made within 10 days of receipt of the notice. [15735]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for the independent tribunal service.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a consistent policy or practice has been specified for the various departments of social security offices as regards the procedure for issuing national insurance numbers; if he will set out the criteria that have to be fulfilled to obtain a national insurance number; and if he will publish procedural (a) guidelines or (b) advice he has issued. [16222]

Mr. Heald: The Department of Social Security has a corporate policy and guidance for staff on allocation and registration of national insurance numbers.

Most young people who live in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, and for whom child benefit is in payment, are automatically registered for NI and issued with a plastic NINO card shortly before they reach 16.

In other circumstances, most usually for people entering this country from abroad, a person applies to be registered by calling into their social security office, taking with them acceptable evidence of identity, and completing an application for NINO allocation and registration.

Thorough checks are made to ensure that the person does not already have a NINO and their identity is established in accordance with the departmental guidance outlined in the "Evidence of Identity Handbook", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Disabled Ex-service Personnel

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many disabled ex-service personnel are registered in Wales. [16038]

Mr. Heald: As at 31 March 1996, the latest date on which figures are available, a total of 22,123 ex-service men and women resident in Wales were receiving war disablement pensions.

Rent Allowances

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the forecast level of growth in expenditure on rent allowances in cash and real terms over the next three years expressed as (a) total rent allowances and (b) private rented sector allowances excluding registered social landlords; and what is the forecast for changes in the level of investment in local authority and registered social landlord housing stock over the same period. [15889]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Child Support

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends that existing clients of the Child Support Agency will be invited to consider making an application for a variation of their maintenance assessment under the new departures scheme. [16608]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Two hundred and seventy-three thousand of the Child Support Agency's clients have already been invited to apply for a variation of their maintenance assessment under the new departures scheme. The agency expects to be in a position to contact all remaining clients to invite them to apply by April of this year.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sheep Dips

Dame Elaine Kellett-Bowman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the outcome of the review of organophosphorus sheep dips carried out by the Veterinary Products Committee; and if he will make a statement. [16274]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The VPC has carefully and thoroughly examined the effectiveness of the certificate of competence scheme and other issues relating to the use of OP sheep dips. It confirmed earlier advice that, provided that they are used safely and in accordance with the manufacturers' instructions, there is no scientific justification for withdrawing OP sheep dips from the market.

The VPC recommended that the certificate of competence should apply to the use of OP sheep dips as well as their purchase. This objective will be achieved by strengthening measures to secure compliance with existing statutory duties. New guidance will be issued by the Health and Safety Executive which will explain and emphasise the duties placed on farmers under the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988, and the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992 and the linked codes of practice to train and instruct their dippers and to maintain their competence. The guidance will contain information about the certificate of competence scheme operated by the National Proficiency Tests Council and will commend certification as a structured approach to these duties and as valuable evidence that adequate training had been given and competence achieved.

The VPC had found some evidence to suggest that a small minority of veterinarians were occasionally supplying OP sheep dips to clients who did not hold a certificate of competence. We will be asking the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons to make a clear reference to the undesirability of this practice in its guide to professional conduct.

We also accept the VPC's advice that the reclassification of OP sheep dips from pharmacy and merchants list to prescription-only status would be unnecessary as it would not improve the protection of human safety and, if it deterred farmers from using OP dips prophylactically, it could lead to increased levels of ectoparasitic diseases in sheep.

Officials at the Veterinary Medicines Directorate will examine the current labelling requirements for OP sheep dip products and will submit proposals to the VPC, the objective of which will be to make the information simpler to follow.

The VPC has advised that, in order to improve controls over the disposal of sheep dips, including both OPs and synthetic pyrethroids, there should be a mechanism whereby farmers should notify the water regulators—the environment agencies—that they are using dips and of their proposed methods of disposal. We accept this advice, and the Government are considering what improvements should be made to existing mechanisms for control over the disposal of sheep dips. Any eventual proposals will be subject to public consultation.

The VPC has advised that further basic research into OPs should be carried out, and we accept this advice. We shall be seeking to establish research projects with the further help of the VPC's sub-committee, the medical and scientific panel.

The VPC has suggested that a review of non-OP sheep dips should be conducted to consider whether existing controls on OP dips should be extended to these products. We have asked the VPC to proceed with this review, not least because dips in which the active ingredient is a synthetic pyrethroid are intrinsically hazardous to aquatic life and great care is needed in their use and disposal.

In addition, we have asked the VPC to review the safety of veterinary medicines other than sheep dips which have an organophosphate as the active ingredient.

I would like to thank Professor Aitken, his predecessor Professor Sir James Armour, and the committee for the care and diligence with which they have considered these important issues and all the information put to them, and for their clear advice.

The report setting out the VPC's recommendations to the licensing authority—Agriculture and Health Ministers—is today being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is currently being undertaken or financed by his Department into the treatment of sheep dip waste in the context of its disposal in an environmentally safe manner; what recent representations he has received on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [16007]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry has commissioned no research into the treatment of sheep dip waste and we have received no recent representations on this matter. No veterinary medicine is authorised for use unless it meets stringent statutory criteria of safety, quality and efficacy. Safety includes risk to the environment. Applications for marketing authorisations must be supported by information to satisfy the statutory criteria, including details of relevant research. Product labels include warnings about the safe disposal of sheep dips and guidance is available from the agriculture Departments.

Dairy Products

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to encourage the manufacture of cheese by farmers who process milk from their own herds or flocks into milk products. [14991]

Mr. Baldry: The decision by farmers whether to process milk from their own herds or flocks into milk products is a commercial one. However, by deregulating the milk market, the Government have encouraged conditions for competition and initiative to flourish.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek a modification of the existing milk quota system to encourage the production of specialist and traditional dairy products by means of a producer-processor's milk quota allowance for small producers to allow the first tranche of milk quota to be used at double its face value. [14992]

Mr. Baldry: Substantive discussions on the future of the milk quota regime are due to begin later this year in Brussels. The Government have already signalled their preferred approach. We wish to free the whole of the dairy industry, including specialist and traditional producers, from the restrictions of the quota system. This would be achieved through a combination of progressive price cuts and relaxation of production controls. We do not believe that the introduction of a producer-processor allowance for small producers is a negotiable way forward. It would add to the complexity of administering and enforcing the quota system and increase the costs of the dairy regime.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance he proposes for producer-processors and specialist dairy products to mitigate the compliance costs of the milk and food hygiene directives. [14993]

Mr. Baldry: The compliance cost assessment for the Diary Products (Hygiene) Regulations 1995 was placed in the Libraries of the House on 28 April 1995. It indicated that small businesses would incur minimal extra costs resulting from implementation of the milk hygiene directive. The Compliance Cost Assessment for the Food Safety (General Food Hygiene) Regulations 1995, placed in the Library of the House on 12 July 1995, estimated that the only identifiable cost for businesses arising from implementation of the food hygiene directive related to the new requirement to train and/or instruct food handlers. In the circumstances I have no plans for assistance.

Beef (Intervention Stocks)

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much British beef has been bought into intervention since 1 March 1996; and what has been the total cost to public funds. [15477]

Mr. Baldry: Since 1 March 1996, the amount of beef taken into intervention and paid for in the UK is 70,107 tonnes at a cost to public funds of £128 million. In addition, contracts have been awarded for a further 8,036 tonnes of beef only some of which has been delivered to store and none of which is yet due for payment.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide (a) his Department's budgeted expenditure on (i) advertising, (ii) publicity and (iii) public information campaigns for the period January to March 1997 and (b) the actual expenditure on (1) advertising, (2) publicity and (3) public information campaigns in the period January to March in each of the past five years. [13462]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 13 February 1997]: All expenditure by my Department on publicity is in support of public information campaigns. Advertising forms part of publicity.

Details of estimated expenditure by my Department for the period January to March 1997 are:

	Advertising £	Publications/ exhibitions £	Total publicity £
Violent crime	102,000
Organ donors	42,000
Young driver	20,000
Fire action plan	164,000
Severe weather warning	35,000
Pre-school vouchers	950,000
Total	1,313,000	512,000	1,825,000

Details of actual expenditure for the same period in each of the past five financial years are set out in the table:

	Advertising £	Publications/ exhibitions £	Total publicity £
January to March 1996	291,000	425,500	716,500
January to March 1995	330,500	574,000	904,500
January to March 1994	494,000	[1]379,000	873,000
January to March 1993	297,500	[1]557,500	855,000
January to March 1992	216,000	[1]329,500	545,500

[1] These figures do not include publications/exhibition expenditure by Historic Scotland. Details for these years are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14470]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are four full-time equivalent—23 members of staff—employed in the application of equal opportunities policies in the Scottish Office. The total staff cost is £86,546.

Scots Pines, Loch Fleet

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have taken place between officials from his Department, officials from Scottish Natural Heritage and representatives of the Sutherland estates concerning the proposed felling of Scots pines at Loch Fleet, near Golspie; and if he will make a statement. [14481]

Mr. Kynoch: There have been several discussions involving officials from the Forestry Commission and Scottish Natural Heritage and representatives of the Sutherland estates about the management of Scots pines at Loch Fleet. Scottish Natural Heritage is currently negotiating the terms of a proposed management agreement with the Sutherland estates.

Computer Crime

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions in each of the last five years computer systems have been illegally accessed by computer hackers in his Department. [14546]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The Scottish Office is not aware of any such incidents.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of computer hacking, fraud and theft, including theft of computer chips, his Department has recorded in the last five years. [14547]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The Scottish Office is unaware of any cases of computer hacking or fraud in the last five years. There have been 49 unexplained disappearances of computer equipment recorded during this time, seven of which involved computer chips.

Legal Aid

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the 20 firms earning most from civil and criminal legal aid for the year to 31 March 1996; and if he will indicate the number of fee earners per firm and the fees per fee earner. [15356]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information on payments to firms in respect of advice and assistance and civil and criminal legal aid is set out in the table and includes outlays, payments to advocates and VAT. Information on the number of fee earners and fees per fee earner is not available.

M80 Extension

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will initiate a public local inquiry into his Department's decision on the route of the M80 motorway extension between Stepps and Haggs; and if he will make a statement. [15810]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Drafts of the necessary statutory schemes and orders, including the compulsory purchase order, will be published later this year, and the public response to the proposals will be taken into account in any decision as to the need for a public local inquiry.

Scottish Natural Heritage

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the names and occupations of the executive members of Scottish Natural Heritage, indicating their remuneration and the dates upon which their terms of office will end. [15625]

Mr. Kynoch: The information for SNH board members is set out in the table.

M74

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many entrance and exit junctions there will be on the M74 motorway when it is completed. [16197]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are two junctions on the M74 between the Maryville interchange and the present end of the motorway at Fullarton road interchange. South Lanarkshire and City of Glasgow councils have planning permission to construct an extension to the motorway from Fullarton road interchange to an interchange with the M8 at the Kingston bridge, which would create a total of seven intermediate junctions between Maryville and Kingston bridge.

Nurses

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nurses were employed by each NHS trust in each year from 1994–96; and if he will make a statement. [16016]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information, which is not yet available centrally for 1996, is set out in the tables:

Prison Officers

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prison officers, by grade, there were (a) in Scotland and (b) in each prison in Scotland in each year from 1990–96; and if he will make a statement. [15890]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 17 February 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question regarding the number of prison officers, by grade, in Scotland and in each prison in Scotland in each year from 1990–96.

The Scottish Prison Service introduced a new staffing structure on 1 April 1995. This resulted in the abolition of the previous grading system, and the introduction of new pay bandings covering operational, administrative and support staff. At the same time nursing, works, and administrative functions were civilianised.

An accurate comparison of post-April 1995 figures for "prison officer" numbers with those prior to that date is not possible. The attached table shows in total and for each establishment the total number of Basic Grade Officers, Senior Officers, and Principal Officers at 31 March for each year from 1990–94. A subdivision by grade cannot be obtained from the current database.

The table also shows the current total, with figures for 1995 and 1996, of operational staff posts in those pay bands which from 1 April 1995 are broadly comparable to the grades described above.

It should be noted that the 1990–94 figures include in each year approximately 600 "officers" in the subsequently civilianised nursing, works and administrative functions which are excluded from the 1995, 1996 and 1997 figures.

Toll Bridges (Revenue)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was raised (a) by each toll bridge and (b) in total from toll bridges in Scotland in each year from 1990 to 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15894]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on toll revenue, to the most recent year for which comprehensive figures are available, is set out in the table:

Tolls levied

[2] This figure covers the period from the opening of the bridge on 16 October 1995 to 31 December 1995.

Prisoners

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners there were in (a) Scotland and (b) each prison in Scotland in each year from 1990–96; and if he will make a statement. [16005]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of this question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 17 February 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the average daily prison population in each establishment from 1990.

I enclose a table which provides the information requested for the calendar years 1990–96.

General Practitioner Practices

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many general practitioner practices there were in (a) each constituency in Scotland, (b) each region of Scotland and (c) Scotland as a whole in each year from 1990 to 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15891]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is not possible to show the information requested by constituency, as individual practices may have surgeries in more than one constituency. The available information is shown in the table. Region has been defined as health board.

Hospitals

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospitals there were in each region of Scotland in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987, (d) 1992 and (e) 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15895]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is in the table.

The changes in the number of hospitals since 1979 reflect changes in the pattern of service provision. There has been substantial investment in new and redeveloped hospitals over this period, and in some cases a single new large hospital has replaced several smaller and old hospitals. Concentration of services on a single site enables better use to be made of expensive diagnostic and treatment facilities, and offers patients access to a better standard of care and treatment.

Sewerage Charges

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will grant relief to domestic customers in respect of sewerage charges in 1997–98. [16607]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Yes. I have set aside £59.7 million for this purpose. This sum represents a saving to an average band D household of around £36 in 1997–98. This relief, first introduced in 1996, is a transitional arrangement which will be phased out by April 1999. We shall pay grant to water authorities to compensate for the charge income they will forgo in 1997–98. Of this, £18.2 million will be available to the East authority, £14.9 million to the North authority and £26.6 million to the West authority. The necessary order is being laid before Parliament.

TREASURY

Treasury Building (Development)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances in the Treasury building which might be affected by its planned development with Exchequer Partnership plc; and what plans he has for (i) energy efficiency and (ii) waste management schemes in the development of the building. [13637]

Mrs. Angela Knight: All known asbestos is recorded in an Asbestos Register and Control of Substances Hazardous to Health—COSHH—registers are also held. Regular health and safety inspections, audit and tours are carried out. All halon fire extinguishers have been replaced and regular checks for CFC leakage detection are carried out on relevant departmental equipment. This information is available to Exchequer Partnership plc.

So far as the redevelopment project is concerned, Exchequer Partnership will be contractually obliged to ensure that an "excellent" rating under the BREEAM system is obtained. In addition, design and construction will be carried out in accordance with all statutory authority regulations and requirements, including European legislation, statute or subordinate legislation relevant to new building and refurbishment. Exchequer Partnership plc must adhere to the Government's environmental policies.

Data Collection (Postcodes)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what use his Department and its agencies make of postcode areas for the collection of data and in formulas for the distribution of grants and awards; and when such usages were last reviewed. [14797]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Postcodes are used extensively by the Office for National Statistics. The Treasury and the Chancellor's other departments and agencies make no use of postcode areas.

Personal Savings

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number and proportion of households with personal equity plan savings of a value (a) less than £10,000, (b) £10,000 to £20,000, (c) £20,000 to £30,000 and (d) over £30,000. [16018]

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not available.

Investment Income

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average amount of income tax paid by adult (a) pensioner and (b) non-pensioner taxpayers with annual investment income of (i) less than £50, (ii) £50 to £75, (iii) £75 to £100, (iv) £100 to £125, (v) £125 to £150, (vi) £150 to £175, (vii) £175 to £200, (viii) £200 to £250, (ix) £250 to £300, (x) £300 to £400, (xi) £400 to £500 and (xii) over £500 for the most recent year for which information is available. [15989]

Mr. Jack: Available estimates for 1997–98 based on projections from a mixture of statistical sources are given in the table. It is not possible to provide reliable estimates for all of the specified bands of investment income.

Range of taxable investment income for 1997–98 £	Average amount of income tax paid[1] Taxpayers aged under 64 £	Taxpayers aged 65 or over £
1–49	2,350	900
50–99	2,450	950
100–499	3,500	1,050
Over 500	6,100	2,600

[1] Includes income tax paid on all types of income such as earned income, self employment and investment income.

British Agrochemicals Association

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings he has had with the British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the last 12 months; what was the subject of the meetings; and if he will make a statement. [16291]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have had no meetings with it in the last 12 months.

Personal Pensions (Tax Relief)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the net present cost in 1996 prices of tax relief on contributions made to appropriate personal pensions since 1988–89 assuming the social discount rate used by his Department. [13840]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 4 February 1997]: The net present cost of income tax relief for the years 1988–89 to 1995–96[1] in respect of contributions to appropriate personal pensions is given in the table, split between national insurance fund contributions and contributions above this minimum made by employees and employers. The figures are in 1996–97 prices rounded to the nearest £0.1 billion, and have been calculated using the GDP deflator and a real discount rate of 3.75 per cent. in line with that underlying the Government Actuary's report on occupational and personal pension schemes, Cm 3221.

	NIF contributions £ billion	Employee/employer contributions £ billion	Total contributions £ billion
Net present cost of income tax relief paid	2.0	2.3	4.3

[1] The cost of income tax relief for 1995–96 is provisional.

Financial Advice (Complaints)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the delay in the investigation by the investment ombudsman and the Investment Management Regulatory Organisation of a complaint by Mr. Alan Holmes of Gullane, East Lothian, concerning compliance with IMRO rules and the terms of the Financial Services Act 1986 in relation to independent financial advice given to him by IMRO-regulated companies. [15112]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 13 February 1997]: The investment ombudsman's office has been set up by IMRO for the independent investigation of complaints about investment business brought by investors against firms regulated by IMRO. Consistent with the independent status of the ombudsman, his investigations are not subject to Government direction or supervision. The service is provided free to complainants. Before the ombudsman can investigate a complaint, he must be satisfied that it falls within his jurisdiction, and this can take time to determine with complex cases. The case to which the hon. Member refers is complicated, but the ombudsman is dealing with it as quickly as is possible.

Income Tax

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals are paid by English-based employers and work in Scotland and whose income tax is collected from their English employer. [15992]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The information is not available.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much income tax was collected by the Inland Revenue from Scottish-based employers in each of the last five years. [15932]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: During each of the years from 1992–93 onwards the following amounts of income tax and national insurance contributions have been collected under PAYE from Scottish-based employers. It is not possible to identify separately amounts of income tax and national insurance contributions.

1992–93: £6,448,442,000

1994–95: £7,466,284,000

1995–96: £7,984,301,000

1996–97 (to January 1997): £5,835,077,000.

Additionally, some employers will have paid income tax on the profits of their business but separate totals are not held for Scottish-based employers.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the time it would take to introduce an income tax regime to tax people where they live instead of at their employer's pay office. [15933]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The estimate sought could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of setting up an income tax regime to tax people where they live instead of at their employer's pay office. [15934]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: None.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals are paid by Scottish-based employers and work outside of Scotland and whose income tax is collected from a Scottish employer. [15991]

Mr. Jack: The information is not available.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what correspondence Her Majesty's Treasury has had with (a) the British Rail Board vendor unit and (b) bidders for subsidiary companies of the British Rail Board in respect of the surplus on the British Rail pension fund and the privatisation of subsidiary companies; and if he will make a statement. [16040]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 17 February 1997]: None.

Savings

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average amount of savings held per household in (a) Post Office accounts, (b) tax-exempt special savings accounts, (c) building society accounts, (d) bank accounts, (e) other accounts, (f) gilts, (g) unit trusts, ((h) stocks and shares, (i) personal equity plans, (j) national savings bonds, (k) save-as-you-earn and (l) premium bonds broken down by gross weekly household income divided into £100 bands. [16017]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available.

ENVIRONMENT

Wild Boar

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in the number of wild boar in England. [15646]

Mr. Clappison: There are no figures available on the numerical trends in wild boar in England. Licences to keep wild boar are issued by local authorities, who maintain central records.

While there have been sporadic sightings of wild boar in the wild, many of these have not been substantiated and there is no confirmed evidence of the animal breeding in the wild.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government intend to apply the London convention's ban on sea disposal of radioactive wastes to radioactive scale on redundant oil installations; what criteria they will apply in assessing the best practicable environmental option for disposal of radioactive material from oil and gas installations; and how those criteria will differ from the criteria applied to wastes from the civil nuclear industry and radioactive military waste. [15672]

Mr. Clappison: The London convention does not prohibit the dumping at sea of wastes or other materials containing "de minimis"—exempt—levels of radioactivity.

Authorisations for the disposal of radioactive wastes are issued by the environment agencies under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993. Policy on determining authorisations is set out in the White Paper "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy—Final Conclusions", Cm 2919.

Packaging Waste

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he is taking to help to minimise the effect on small businesses of the producer responsibility for packaging waste directive. [15703]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Following extensive consultation with industry on the draft packaging waste regulations, my rt hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 18 December, Official Report, columns 614–16, the modifications that we propose to make in the light of the comments and proposals received.

Among the changes announced were measures to help small businesses. We are proposing a staged approach to the new system, bringing in the largest businesses first, and we have introduced a turnover element to the cut-off threshold which should assist smaller businesses in establishing whether they will be obligated under the regulations. Businesses with a turnover of £5 million or less, and who handle 50 tonnes of packaging or less, will not be obligated in the years 1997 to 1999. With effect from 1 January 2000, the small business threshold applies to those with turnover of £1 million or less or who handle 50 tonnes of packaging or less. In addition, the provision that wholesalers take the selling obligation for small retailers will take effect from 1 January 2000. These changes will mean that the number of businesses obligated in the first few years will be in the region of 4,000 rising to around 9,000 by the year 2000. This compares with a total of over 250,000 businesses who handle packaged goods.

A further measure which will help small businesses is the development of a ready reckoner or packaging catalogue to ease the collection of data and my Department has now commissioned contractors to this end.

Local Authority Receipts

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total usable receipts held by each local authority in each year since 1990. [15729]

Sir Paul Beresford: A list of the usable capital receipts held by each English local authority on 31 March of each year from 1990 to 1996 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15913]

Sir Paul Beresford: Specific measures to protect the health and safety of young people and the relevant minimum age requirements are listed in annex 3 of the Health and Safety Commission's consultative document, "The Health and Safety (Young Persons) Regulations 1996: Proposals to implement the health and safety provisions of the EC Directive on the protection of young people at work". Copies of this document have been placed in the House of Commons Library. No other part of my Department is responsible for enforcing minimum age requirements.

Outstanding Charges (Northamptonshire)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the arrears of outstanding uncollected (a) domestic rates, (b) business rates, (c) community charge and (d) council tax for each collecting authority in Northamptonshire. [15728]

Sir Paul Beresford: Estimates of the levels of business rates, community charge and council tax arrears for individual authorities are published regularly by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy.

The latest information relates to the position at 31 March 1995 and is available in the "Revenue Collection Statistics 1994–95" publication in the Library. Information on the arrears of domestic rates is not available. The latest available figures for the Northamptonshire authorities and the dates to which they relate are as follow:

£000

	Estimated arrears of:
	Business rates	Community charges	Council taxes

— No information has been published by CIPFA for East Northamptonshire or Northampton since community charge was abolished.

Council Tax

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which 10 local councils in England have the highest amounts of uncollected council tax; [16156]

(2) which local council in (a) the north-west of England and (b) England as a whole has the highest amount of uncollected council tax; [16163]

(3) which local council in (a) the north-west of England and (b) England as a whole has the lowest amount of uncollected council tax. [16167]

Sir Paul Beresford: Estimates of the levels of council tax arrears for individual authorities are published regularly by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy. The latest information relates to the position at 31 March 1995 and is available in the "Revenue Collection Statistics 1994–95" publication in the Library.

The authorities with the highest amounts of uncollected council tax in England at 31 March 1995 are as follows:

	Council tax arrears (£ million)
Lambeth	40.2
Birmingham	25.9
Manchester	[1] 21.6
Liverpool	19.3
Bristol	18.5
Camden	12.4
Newham	12.1
Leeds	11.2
Southwark	10.8
Sheffield	9.9

[1] Highest in north-west of England.

Wyre has the lowest amount of council tax arrears in the north-west of England, with a total of £0.6 million uncollected as at 31 March 1995. The Isles of Scilly has the lowest uncollected council tax in England, with a total of £6,000 uncollected as at 31 March 1995. CIPFA does not publish data for all authorities, so the figures above represent only those authorities which have supplied data.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which local council has (a) the north-west of England and (b) England has the lowest council tax rates; [16164]

(2) which local council in (a) the north-west of England and (b) England as a whole has the highest council tax rates. [16165]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is a follows:

Willenhall Shopping Precinct

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress with the development of the Willenhall shopping precinct. [15597]

Sir Paul Beresford: I understand that Bellways Homes Ltd. and English Partnerships are likely to reach agreement this month on the amount of grant required to enable the redevelopment of the Willenhall shopping precinct to proceed.

Household Growth

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has received as part of the consultative process on his Department's Green paper, "Household Growth; Where will we Live," in respect of the imposition of time limits on the period of time for which a developer may retain derelict urban land. [16043]

Mr. Clappison: The consultation period on the Green Paper ends on 17 March. None of the responses received to date has specifically covered this issue.

Mr. Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of new households formed between the current date and 2016 will be occupied by people living alone. [16044]

Mr. Clappison: The projected number of households in England at mid-year in 2016 is 23,598,000 a net increase of 3,421,000 on the projected number at mid year 1996. Of this net increase 2,753,000 households or 80 per cent. are projected to be one-person households where a one-person household is defined as someone living alone who does not share either housekeeping or a living room with anyone else.

Mr. Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of new housing was built on urban or brown field sites in (a) the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available and (b) the previous 12-month period. [16045]

Sir Paul Beresford: The latest year for which figures are available is 1993. In that year 49 per cent. of new residential development in England was on land that had been previously developed for urban uses. In the previous year the proportion was 47 per cent. These figures were published in the Department's "Land Use Change in England Statistical Bulletin" last year. A new edition of this bulletin, with figures for 1994, will be published in May this year.

Mr. Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of cohabiting new households, expressed as a percentage of total new projected households, his Department predicts for the years (a) 2000, (b) 2008 and (c) 2016, respectively. [16330]

Mr. Clappison: The net increases in the number of households headed by a cohabiting couple in England at mid-year 2001, 2006, 2011 and 2016 are projected to be 70,000, 122,000, 172,000 and 202,000 higher respectively than those at mid-year 1996, representing 8 per cent., 7 per cent., 7 per cent. and 6 per cent respectively of the net total new households projections on the same basis for these years.

Show Houses (Taxation)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what recent representations he has received concerning the taxation of show houses for local government purposes; what response he has made; and if he will make a statement; [16204]

(2) what is his policy on the taxation of show houses; and if he will make a statement. [16205]

Sir Paul Beresford: Show houses are liable for non-domestic rates. We have received representations from the House Builders Federation and the Manufacturing and Construction Alliance that show houses should, instead, be subject to the council tax. We have agreed to meet both organisations to discuss this matter.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) at which meetings of the Building Research Establishment management board, held (a) prior to 8 December 1996, (b) between 8 and 20 December 1996 and (c) since 20 December 1996, members of his Department's BRE privatisation team were present; [16490]

(2) at which meetings of the Building Research Establishment management board held (a) prior to 8 December 1996, (b) between 8 and 20 December 1996 and (c) since 20 December 1996 members of the in-house bid team were present; [16491]

(3) which members of the Building Research Establishment management board are also members of the in-house bid team; [16492]

(4) if he will list the meetings of the Building Research Establishment management board which were attended by members of his Department's BRE privatisation team at which members of the BRE management board who were also involved in the BRE in-house bid team were present. [16541]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: All members of the BRE management board are members of the management bid team. Since the management bid team was authorised to enter the competition for the purchase of BRE, a member of the team of officials established by the Department to transfer BRE to the private sector has attended each meeting of the BRE management board. The meetings were held on 25 November 1996, 20 December 1996 and 27 January 1997.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the occasions during the past three years on which Ministers have met members of the staff of the Building Research Establishment, the names of all those who attended the meetings and the subjects discussed on each occasion. [16493]

Mr. Jones: In the past three years, Ministers have visited the Building Research Establishment for the following occasions:

Minister for Housing and Planning, 16 May 1994, to open the Conseil International de Bâtiment international conference on the environment.

Minister for Construction and Planning, 5 February 1996, to see the first use of recycled aggregate in the foundations of the new energy efficiency building.

Minister for Construction and Planning, 12 June 1996, to seal a time capsule in the new building and to open the new Burn hall.

Ministers have paid routine visits to BRE, to see at first hand the work BRE does, as follows:

Secretary of State for the Environment, 17 June 1994

Minister for Construction and Planning, 30 March 1995

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison), 13 September 1996.

The Secretary of State for the Environment and the Minister for Construction and Planning attended opening events to mark the BRE's 75th anniversary in London on 13 May 1996, and the Under-Secretary of State, Scottish Office, the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson), attended the closing events in Glasgow on 3 October 1996.

On these occasions the Ministers took the opportunity to discuss operations across the establishment with a range of staff. Additionally, Ministers meet members of staff from time to time in the course of normal departmental business, and at meetings, seminars and other functions organised by the construction industry and other interests.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has received about the possibility of the Building Research Establishment in-house bid team (a) having access to more information than the external bidders and (b) being treated in a different way to the external bidder in relation to meetings with other interested parties. [16489]

Mr. Jones: None. The Department has taken all reasonable steps to ensure a level playing field between all bidders.

Environment Agency (Prosecutions)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the prosecutions carried out in England and Wales by the Environment Agency for water quality and integrated pollution control offences, in each month since October 1996 indicating (a) the person or company prosecuted, (b) the date and outcome of the prosecution, (c) the nature of the offence and (d) the penalty imposed. [15670]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 17 February 1997]: I have arranged for the relevant details of prosecutions carried out by the Environment Agency for water pollution and integrated pollution control offences for the period October 1996 to January 1997 to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Beef Waste

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 101, if he will list the locations of the (a) incinerators and (b) tyre-burning plant tested for emissions in respect of the burning of cattle carcases; and if he will reconcile the figures for the total number of incineration plants set out in his answer and in the answer from the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food of 11 February, Official Report, column 145–46. [16249]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The incinerators are: Rechem, Fawley, Hampshire; Rechem, Pontypool, Gwent; Yorkshire Environmental, Knostrop, Leeds; Yorkshire Environmental, Ashford, Kent; Vetspeed, Royston, Herts. The tyre burning plant is Elm Energy, Wolverhampton.

The answers given by me and by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture on 11 February related to the questions asked. The Prosper de Mulder rendering plant at Widnes is the subject of an air pollution authorisation from the local authority, Halton borough council. Emissions testing has taken place. The incinerator at Vetspeed, Royston, burns cattle carcases, not rendered remains. The trial incineration of tannery waste at Pontypool, Knostrop, Ashford and Wolverhampton was listed in my reply for completeness, although rendering of tannery waste is not a process which meets the definition of rendering in the Animal By-Products Order 1992 and these incinerators were not, therefore, included in my hon. Friend's reply.

Waste Disposal at Sea

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what discussions and on what dates have taken place between his Department, MAFF and the DTI regarding (a) a common definition of bulky waste and (b) a policy for its disposal at sea; [15629]

(2) what is his Department's definition of bulky waste in respect of disposal of waste at sea; [15628]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of potential disposal sites for bulky wastes at sea; and if he will place in the Library copies of (a) studies evaluated by his Department and (b) correspondence between his Department and other bodies on this subject. [15647]

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

The London convention of 1972 on dumping of waste at sea refers to containers, scrap metal and other bulky wastes liable to sink to the sea bottom which may present a serious obstacle to fishing or navigation.

The protocol to the London convention, agreed in November last year, describes bulky wastes as items primarily comprising iron, steel, concrete and similarly unharmful materials for which the primary concern is physical impact.

The Ospar convention, which will shortly supersede the Oslo convention and whose more stringent controls on dumping at sea are already applied to UK waters, does not refer to bulky wastes. Under Ospar the dumping of all wastes or other matter is prohibited except for specified categories which include inert materials of natural origin—for example, rock—and vessels and aircraft until 2004; offshore installations and pipelines may also be considered for disposal. Each case is considered on its merits and it is UK policy to license disposal at sea only when there is no safe and practicable alternative. The only assessment so far undertaken of potential disposal sites at sea for a bulky waste was conducted by the Scottish Office in relation to the Brent Spar. All the studies included in that assessment have already been placed in the Library.

Details of the interdepartmental discussions on this topic could be derived only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what procedure his Department follows in determining best practicable environmental options; and what criteria govern the disposal of bulky wastes at sea, in the case of (a) redundant oil and gas installations, (b) radioactive wastes and (c) other wastes; [15649]

(2) what are the interdepartmental co-ordination and consultation mechanisms used in determining the best practicable environmental options for disposing of bulky wastes at sea, in the case of (a) redundant oil and gas installations, (b) radioactive wastes and (c) other wastes; and by what means public opinion is taken into account. [15653]

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

The dumping of waste at sea is subject to the provisions of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 and the UK has agreed to abide by guidelines and assessment procedures adopted under relevant international conventions.

In particular, we apply annex 11 to the recently agreed protocol to the London convention which sets out the considerations that need to be taken into account when conducting an assessment of wastes that may be considered for dumping at sea. These include whether appropriate opportunities exist to re-use, recycle or treat the waste without undue risks to human health or the environment or disproportionate costs; the chemical, physical and biological properties of the waste; the suitability of the proposed dump site; and potential effects on the environment.

Other Departments and the conservation agencies are consulted on such assessments as appropriate on a case by case basis. In relation to the decommissioning of oil and gas installations, which is the responsibility the Department of Trade and Industry, a wide range of fisheries, amenity and environmental interests are consulted.

WALES

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) for each unitary council and (b) for Wales in 1997 prices for the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 the (a) standard spending assessment, (b) capping limit for spending and (c) spending on care in the community, indicating the percentage change in each case. [15339]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Table 1 gives the standard spending assessments and table 2 the capping limits on spending for 1996–97 and 1997–98 at constant 1997–98 prices. No adjustments have been made for changes in local authority funding arrangements between 1996–97 and 1997–98.

Outturn expenditure figures for care in the community are not centrally available. Identified allocations for care in the community within authorities standard spending assessments for 1996–97 and 1997–98, at constant 1997–98 prices, are shown in table 3.

Teachers (Redundancy)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to introduce to reduce the number of teacher redundancies. [15834]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Local education authorities and schools are responsible for decisions relating to the employment and deployment of individual schools teachers. The local authority settlement announced recently should enable those local authorities who attach the same high priority to education as my right hon. Friend and I to have sufficient resources to meet the needs of schools.

Health Authorities (Allocation of Resources)

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has reached a decision concerning the allocation of resources to health authorities in Wales for 1997–98. [16854]

Mr. Hague: I announced on 12 December 1996, Official Report, columns 405–09, that I shall be providing an additional £94 million for the NHS in Wales in 1997–98. This will bring total spending to £2,368 million; £1,658 million of this will fund the hospital, community and family health service.

Within this amount, the five health authorities, general practitioners and general practitioner fundholders will receive revenue funding of £1,505 million, £52 million or 3.5 per cent. more than in 1996–97 plans. In real terms, this is an overall increase of 1.5 per cent. Within these resources, I have been able to give health authorities £49 million, which represents a 3.5 per cent. cash increase on discretionary purchasing power, and £3 million to cash limited general medical services, which is a 5.6 per cent. cash increase.

I am expecting health authorities and trusts to continue to generate efficiency savings and in 1997–98 these should amount to at least 2.7 per cent. This will release some £40 million which, together with the new money, will be available to meet inflationary and other pressures, and to increase investment in patient care.

Health authorities and trusts will also receive £105 million to fund capital development. Included with this is some £9 million of new provision in order to fund the package of urgently needed capital development that I set out in my budget statement. The rationalisation of services between the Cardiff royal infirmary and the university hospital of Wales, the new link road to the hospital site and work on the new cancer centre in north Wales can now begin next year. These developments complement the capital schemes worth £40 million that are currently subject to the private finance initiative and I fully expect to see some successful outcomes in 1997–98. The private finance initiative offers a unique opportunity to bring forward capital developments which are funded outside public expenditure.

Officials have today informed health authorities and trusts of the provisional allocations to health authorities and trusts' external financing limits. I have placed a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Primary Schools (Hillingdon)

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the relationship between the level of funding and education standards in maintained primary schools in the London borough of Hillingdon. [16235]

Mr. Dicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the relationship between the level of funding and education standards in maintained primary schools in the London borough of Hillingdon. [16237]

Mr. Robin Squire: There is no simple relationship between levels of funding and education standards.

Further Education

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will take steps to assist further education colleges running operating deficits to restore their financial health without jeopardising the quality and scope of the education offered. [16102]

Mr. Paice: Colleges are independent, autonomous bodies and are responsible for managing their own financial affairs. The Further Education Funding Council has effective arrangements in place for identifying colleges in financial difficulty and for working with them to recover their financial health.

School Computers

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the ratio of computers to secondary school pupils in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the United States of America and (c) Japan in the last five years for which figures are available. [16143]

Mr. Robin Squire: Comparative data are not readily available. A recent international report by Research Machines on information technology provision in schools, covering countries in the group of 7, indicated that in 1996 the ratio of computers to secondary school pupils in the United Kingdom was one per 8.5 pupils, in the United States of America one per 12 pupils and in Japan about one per 25 pupils.

School Inspections

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools by local education authority have been deemed by Office for Standards in Education inspectors to be failing to provide a satisfactory standard of education. [16171]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested on the 243 failing schools, as at 31 January 1997, is given in the following table. In addition, I have placed in the Library a coloured map containing the same information.

For completeness, I should add that 18 schools have already been restored to health as a result of the special measures policy and 12 have closed.

Special Needs

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children of school age, who are the subjects of statements of special educational needs, are being educated in (a) private schools specialising in such children, (b) maintained special schools, (c) special units within maintained schools and (d) mainstream classes in maintained schools. [16438]

Mrs. Gillan: Schools' returns to the Department showed that in January 1996, 4,992 pupils with statements were educated in non-maintained special schools, 5,810 in independent schools, 87,458 in maintained special schools, 1,826 in pupil referral units, and 127,238 in maintained nursery, primary or secondary schools. Information on whether pupils with statements in mainstream schools are taught in general classes or separately is not collected centrally.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) boys and (b) girls of school age are the subjects of statements of special educational needs; and how many of these have (i) special learning difficulties and (ii) behavioural problems. [16435]

Mrs. Gillan: Schools' returns to the Department showed that in January 1996 a total of 227,324 pupils had statements. Information by gender, or by type of special educational need, is not collected centrally.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the number and the proportion of eligible parents who have (a) received a voucher application form and (b) returned a voucher application from, in respect of provision for their four-year-old in the summer term 1997. [15958]

Mr. Robin Squire: The parents/carers of 653,746 eligible children have been sent an application form. Of those, as of 12 February 1997, a total of 511,780—more than 78 per cent.—had returned their forms to the nursery voucher centre.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from providers in the four areas piloting the nursery voucher scheme, regarding the impact of the voucher scheme on provision for three-year-olds. [15960]

Mr. Squire: My right hon. Friend has received representations on a number of aspects of the nursery voucher scheme, including the desirability of extending the scheme to three-year-olds. As the deduction from each local education authority's standard spending assessment is only in respect of existing places for four-year-olds, it should not impact on the provision for three-year-olds.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places for voucher-bearing four-year-olds were provided in (a) the maintained sector, (b) the voluntary sector, (c) the private sector and (d) overall in (i) the first term and (ii) the second term of the nursery voucher pilot scheme. [15955]

Mr. Squire: The table provides a breakdown of the number of places provided under the voucher scheme by type of provider for each of the phase 1 local education authority areas in the summer and autumn terms of 1996.

Number of places provided in the summer and autumn terms

	Norfolk	Kensington and Chelsea	Wandsworth	Westminster	Total
Summer term
Private and voluntary sectors	3,656	248	448	168	4,520
Independent schools	222	148	197	92	659
Grant-maintained schools	158	40	71	0	269
Local authority day nurseries	0	40	35	49	124
Special schools	21	0	4	0	25
LEA-maintained schools	4,274	600	2,043	832	7,749
Total	8,331	1,076	2,798	1,141	13,346
Autumn term
Private and voluntary sectors	773	123	127	120	1,143

Grant-maintained schools	344	45	232	0	621
Local authority day nurseries	0	23	6	29	58
Special schools	18	0	8	0	26
LEA-maintained schools	7,548	621	2,040	886	11,095
Total	8,889	1,081	2,760	1,148	13,878

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when parents of four-year-olds will receive a nursery voucher in respect of provision in the summer term 1997. [15957]

Mr. Squire: The first tranche of nursery education vouchers will arrive with parents from 24 February 1997. Thereafter vouchers will be issued to parents on receipt of a correctly completed application form.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish the chief inspector's report on the findings of the inspections carried out up to the end of November, in the pilot phase of the nursery voucher scheme. [15959]

Mr. Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has published today the chief inspector's overview report on the findings of inspections carried out in the local authority areas participating in phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her current estimate of the number and percentage of parents in the four areas piloting the nursery voucher scheme who have seen or heard advertising for the scheme. [15953]

Mr. Squire: Research undertaken in March 1996 among a sample of the 16,000 eligible parents in the four phase 1 participating authorities showed that, overall, some 38 per cent. claimed to have seen or heard some advertising for the nursery education voucher scheme. The figure rose to 48 per cent. in Norfolk. Given that publicity had to be contained within the participating authorities, this is a very respectable figure.

No subsequent research of this nature has been undertaken, but it seems reasonable to conclude that with the advent of national advertising for phase 2 a greater proportion of parents in the four phase 1 areas are now aware of the scheme.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many vouchers have been (a) issued and (b) redeemed in respect of (i) term one and (ii) term two of the nursery voucher scheme; and what is the cash value of unredeemed vouchers; [15954]

(2) in respect of each of the four nursery voucher pilot areas (a) what is the number of eligible four-year-olds, (b) how many applied for a voucher and (c) how many redeemed a voucher in (i) the first term and (ii) the second term, of the pilot phase. [15956]

Mr. Squire: The following table provides a breakdown of the estimated number of children eligible for a voucher, and the number of vouchers issued and redeemed for each of the phase 1 local education authority areas in the summer and autumn terms 1996. Unredeemed vouchers do not have a cash value; they represent the potential grant that would have been paid had they been redeemed.

Voucher redemption in summer and autumn terms

	Norfolk	Kensington and Chelsea	Wandsworth	Westminster
Summer term 1996
Estimated children	9,300	1,650	3,300	1,900
Vouchers issued	8,914	1,140	3,123	1,395
Vouchers redeemed (full or part)	8,331	1,076	2,798	1,141
Nominal value of unredeemed voucher parts	£526,251	£28,859	£141,913	£107,589
Autumn term 1996
Estimated children	9,300	1,650	3,300	1,900
Vouchers issued	9,128	1,142	3,147	1,469
Vouchers redeemed (full or part)	8,889	1,081	2,760	1,148
Nominal value of unredeemed vouchers parts	£177,960	£35,570	£174,403	£142,463

Grant-maintained Status Applications

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the timetable which governs the process of application for grant-maintained status if a board of school governors recommends that such status should be sought. [16252]

Mr. Forth: If the governing body of a school passes a resolution to ballot parents on grant-maintained status, or if it receives a valid petition from parents, it must hold a ballot within 10 weeks. If a majority of those parents who vote are in favour of GM status, the governing body must publish, within four months of the ballot result, statutory proposals for acquiring GM status. There is then a period of two months during which objections to those proposals may be made. My right hon. Friend decides the proposals, taking account of any objections, as soon as possible thereafter.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of schools likely to apply for grant-maintained status within the next six months; and if she will make a statement. [16254]

Mr. Forth: There are currently some 50 schools which have published statutory proposals to become grant maintained following a yes vote in parental ballots, and nine more are in the process of balloting parents. Beyond that, the number of schools applying for grant-maintained status depends on parental choice and we do not try to predict it.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools have begun the process of seeking grant-maintained status; in how many of those cases parents voted by a sufficient majority in favour of acquiring such status; in how many of the cases of such affirmative votes applications have so far been received by his Department; in how many of those cases of applications received such status (i) was approved, (ii) was denied and (iii) is still pending; and if she will make a statement. [16251]

Mr. Forth: The GM process starts when a school decides to ballot parents on applying for GM status. If parents vote yes, the school publishes statutory proposals to become a grant-maintained school. These are considered by the Secretary of State, who may approve or reject them. The following table gives details of ballots and their outcomes in England since GM legislation was first introduced in 1988.

	(a) Primary	(b) Secondary
Number of schools holding ballots	764	944
Yes votes by parents	566	702
Statutory proposals published	561	701
Statutory proposals approved by Secretary of State	494	654
Statutory proposals rejected by Secretary of State	50	39
Statutory proposals under consideration	17	8

Figures exclude special schools and schools established by promoters. Where schools have held more than one ballot, only the outcome of the latest has been included. Where schools have published proposals more than once, only the latest decision has been counted.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the grounds upon which an application by a school for grant-maintained status could be refused by the Secretary of State; and in what circumstances under the relevant Act the Secretary of State could defer a decision. [16253]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend considers each application for grant-maintained status on its merits and in the light of the relevant circumstances. The reasons for any decision not to approve GM statutory proposals therefore vary from case to case. The legislation does not make provision for the deferral of decisions on GM applications.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people after claiming jobseeker's allowance for a period of 13 weeks have taken (a) part-time employment of less than 25 hours, (b) temporary employment of less than (i) six months and (ii) 12 months and (c) employment paying less than £3 per hour in each month since 7 October 1996. [16125]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding the number of people who, after claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for a period of 13 weeks, have taken (a) part-time employment of less than 25 hours, (b) temporary employment of less than (i) 6 months and (ii) 12 months and (c) employment paying less than £3 per hour in each month since 7th October 1996.

Unfortunately, I cannot provide the information you request as it is not available. The reasons for this are:

- the Employment Service records employment details where jobseekers have been placed into vacancies advertised through Jobcentres, but no details are available for jobseekers finding employment through alternative means. Therefore I cannot identify total numbers for any of the categories you have requested;
- when details of vacancies are taken by the Jobcentre, an indicator is set if the vacancy is temporary but the period of temporary work is not specified;
- vacancies taken by the Jobcentre are classified as part time if the vacancy offers up to 30 hours work per week, but no differentiation is made between part time vacancies on the basis of the number of hours;
- in general, Jobcentres record the average weekly earnings rather than the hourly rate.

Although the information you have requested is not available, you may find it useful to refer to the Labour Market Trends publication produced by the Office for National Statistics, which provides further Labour Market analysis.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many people have been subject to benefit disqualification as a result of (a) breaking the labour market conditions, (b) failing to complete the jobseeker's allowance agreement, (c) refusing to attend mandatory training courses and (d) failing to act on the jobseeker's direction in each month since 7 October 1996; [16126]

(2) how many people have been subject to benefit disqualification for refusing to accept a job offer notified by the Employment Service in each month since October 1996. [16127]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Ms Roseanna Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about how many people in each month since October 1996 have been subjected to benefit disqualification as a result of breaking the labour market conditions, failing to complete the jobseeker's allowance agreement, refusing to attend mandatory training courses, failing to act on the jobseeker's direction, and refusing to accept a job offer notified by the Employment Service. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Unfortunately information is not available in the form you have requested. The information is not available on a monthly basis but statistics are compiled quarterly. Information about decisions on questions arising on claims for unemployment benefit is contained in a document entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officer's Decisions", which is published quarterly, and includes information on all the main entitlement questions arising on claims.

The publication for the quarter ending 31 December 1996 will also include decisions given on questions arising on claims for Jobseeker's Allowance. All the main questions will be shown separately, including those relating to the areas referred to above. I expect to publish this analysis by the end of March 1997 and copies will be placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 466, what level of TEC reserves is available for discretionary expenditure. [16856]

Mr. Paice: The information provided by training and enterprise councils in England about the level of reserves shown in their statutory accounts for 1995–96 show that the total of £260 million comprised £51 million for investment in capital assets, £86 million for working capital and £123 million for discretionary expenditure. Of the sum available for discretionary expenditure, £102 million was earmarked for planned expenditure in 1996–97 and beyond for economic regeneration and other purposes in line with their corporate and business plans.

Unemployment

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and which United Kingdom constituencies have higher unemployment rates than (a) Germany and (b) France. [15673]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the chief executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dennis Roberts to Mr. Peter Bottomley dated 18 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked the director of the Office for National Statistics to reply to your recent question on those parliamentary constituencies with a higher rate of unemployment than Germany and France. The Director has asked me to reply in his absence.

Unemployment rates by Parliamentary Constituency are not available for either the claimant count or the internationally comparable ILO measure of unemployment derived from the Labour Force Survey.

DEFENCE

Publicity Material (Languages)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many items of publicity material are produced by his Department in the Urdu language. [14850]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 10 February, Official Report, column 5. Details of any other material produced by my Department in the Urdu language are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14954]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Information is not available in the form requested by my hon. Friend. However, my Department publishes data on the destination of MOD equipment expenditure on an annual basis in "UK Defence Statistics". Table 1.9 shows expenditure in each of the standard UK regions. A copy of the latest "UK Defence Statistics" is in the Library of the House. Data are not available at a lower level than that published. My hon. Friend may wish to know, however, that my Department has placed over 550 contracts in the Bournemouth area over the last 12 months worth in total in the region of £40 million.

Suicides (Armed Services)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many suicides there have been in each of the armed services in each year since 1990. [15387]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 12 February 1997]: The number of coroner verdicts of suicide in each of the armed services, including Gurkhas[1], for each year since 1990 are:

Year	Navy	Army[1]	RAF	Total
1990	8	20	14	42
1991	5	22	7	34
1992	6	19	5	30
1993	1	18	4	23
1994	6	18	5	29
1995	1	15	2	18
1996	2	3	0	5
1997	0	0	0	0

Information in the table as at 10 February 1997.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of (a) energy use and (b) waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16423]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This answer can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Royal Yacht

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the role of (a) the Department of Trade and Industry, (b) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (c) the Department of Education and Employment in the design consultations on the replacement for the royal yacht Britannia. [15736]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In view of the trade promotion and representational roles of the royal yacht, officials from the Department of Trade and Industry and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will assist the Ministry of Defence in developing the specification for the new vessel. No Department for Education and Employment participation is currently planned.

Sensorineural Hearing Loss

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations his Department has had with the Department of Social Security in relation to replies to parliamentary questions from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, on the subject of sensorineural hearing loss and war pensions. [15860]

Mr. Soames: The administration of the war pension scheme is a matter for the Department of Social Security. On medical matters, the legislation governing that scheme requires the War Pensions Agency to take the advice of a medical advisor appointed by the Secretary of State for that Department. My Department has no part to play in this process; consequently, there has been no need for consultation.

Eskmeals and Shoeburyness Ranges

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps have been taken in recent years to reduce the fixed costs of the ranges at (a) Eskmeals and (b) Shoeburyness; [16479]

(2) what are the fixed costs to the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency of providing the ranges at (a) Eskmeals and (b) Shoeburyness. [16480]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the fixed costs of running the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, and the steps which have been taken to reduce them, since as Chief Executive of DERA, this is a matter for which I am responsible. I will reply to both questions in this letter.

The fixed costs of providing accommodation, estate management, security, communications infrastructure and site management, during 1997/8, are expected to be:

Shoeburyness: £6,397,000

Eskmeals: £2,138,000

This cost is before the provision of any staff or costs directly associated with the provision of any staff or costs directly associated with the provision or support of trials capabilities.

Both ranges have taken steps to reduce their fixed costs. At Eskmeals, savings have been achieved by reducing the numbers of staff, rationalising working practices and reviewing property and estate practices. Similarly, staffing levels and maintenance programmes have been reduced at Shoeburyness. Changes have also been made to the way in which work is done, including the contractorisation of works services.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the test and evaluation work of (a) Eskmeals range and (b) Shoeburyness range is devoted to (i) new weapon procurement and (ii) equipment improvement programmes to enhance existing defence systems. [16481]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the nature of the work done in support of the Ministry of Defence's equipment procurement programme at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, since as Chief Executive of DERA, this is a matter for which I am responsible.

Work on the Eskmeals range is divided in broadly equal parts between new equipment procurement and equipment improvement programmes. At Shoeburyness, typically half of the tasks undertaken involves the proof testing of weapons and munitions. The remainder of the work is in support of new equipment procurement or improvement programmes, but on both ranges the precise balance varies from year to year.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the staff complements of (a) Eskmeals range and (b) Shoeburyness range in each of the past five years in each of the categories (i) contractors, (ii) civil servants and (iii) military staff. [16478]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the staff complements of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, since as Chief Executive of DERA, this is a matter for which I am responsible.

The number of staff working on the ranges, as at 1 April in each of the last 5 years was as follows:

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Eskmeals
Civil servants	65	65	63	56	56
Military	12	12	11	9	8
Contractors	174	173	170	148	140
Shoeburyness
Civil servants	83	83	79	77	68
Military	24	24	21	21	18
Contractors	400	388	399	380	343

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what facilities are available at the Eskmeals range that are not available at other ranges of his Department; [16488]

(2) what proportion of the work of the Shoeburyness range involves overwater recovery; and at what other range facilities in the United Kingdom or overseas this work could take place. [16477]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the facilities and capabilities at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness and their availability at other ranges, since as Chief Executive of DERA, this is a matter for which I am responsible. I will respond to both of these questions in this letter.

Although none of the facilities currently available at Eskmeals is directly replicated elsewhere, it would technically be feasible to provide all but one of the capabilities offered by the range on other sites. The firing of ammunition incorporating Depleted Uranium in a contained environment cannot be conducted on any other Ministry of Defence range in the United Kingdom.

During the current year, over water recovery is forecast to account for some 5% by value of all work undertaken at Shoeburyness. I am only aware of one other facility, in Australia, at which it is possible to carry out comparable over water recovery.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the charges for the use of the Eskmeals and Shoeburyness ranges are set at a level commensurate with recovering the costs of operating those facilities; [16482]

(2) what increases in the level of charges were set in each of the last five years for the use of (a) Eskmeals and (b) Shoeburyness ranges. [16483]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your questions about the levels of charges and operating costs and increases in charges of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, since as Chief Executive of DERA, this is a matter for which I am responsible. I will cover both questions in this letter.

Charges for the use of the ranges are set at a level which should enable the full cost of operating the facilities to be recovered, based upon a predicted level of demand. In the event, a significant reduction in the level of customer demand for the facilities on both ranges has resulted in income falling well short of that required to cover the cost of operating them.

Information on the level of charges is only available from when DTEO began trading, as part of DERA in 1995. At Eskmeals, the average increase in rates from 1995/6 to 1996/7 was 1.5%. However the basis of charging for the use of facilities at Shoeburyness changed between 1995/6 when, for example, there were five different rates for static trials, and 1996/7 when there were 15. Direct comparisons are not therefore possible.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from members of the public regarding the safety of (a) the Eskmeals and (b) the Shoeburyness ranges. [16476]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. John Cunningham, dated 18 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the numbers of representations that have been received from members of the public regarding safety at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) ranges at Eskmeals and Shoeburyness, since as Chief Executive of DERA, this is a matter for which I am responsible.

I am not aware of any concerns expressed by members of the public about the safety of operations at either of the ranges since they became part of DERA in 1995.

I hope this is helpful.

Army Manning

Mr. Lamont: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further initiatives he is taking to improve manning in the Army. [16743]

Mr. Soames: I am determined to reverse the current levels of undermanning in the armed forces. We shall accelerate our recruiting efforts, which already show a marked improvement in results over previous years. The Army alone will need up to 17,000 recruits per annum over the next few years.

Numbers are not the only issue, however. Equally important is the need to attract recruits of the right quality to cope with the complexities of modern warfare, and to provide the highest standards of leadership, for which our forces are rightly renowned and which were previously provided under the junior leaders scheme.

To obtain suitable high quality recruits in sufficient numbers, we propose to supplement our current recruiting methods with a new approach designed to attract school leavers of 16 years and over interested in gaining qualifications and enhanced career opportunities as well as guaranteed employment.

I have decided, therefore, to open a new Army foundation college in September 1998. It will offer a 42-week Army foundation course for soldiers destined for front line roles, combining military and leadership training with vocational education. It will develop key skills in numeracy, communications, information technology, personal skills and problem solving, needed for access to national vocational qualifications.

When fully established the college will accommodate up to 1,300 students. Its graduates will therefore contribute significantly to resolving the Army's manning difficulties. We are confident that many of them will rise to fill key positions, providing the Army with high quality leadership into the future.

Following the example of other successful defence projects, such as the recent competition for the new joint services command and staff college, we intend to seek private finance for the college. There is a possible site available at the former army apprentices college at Harrogate, which we shall draw to the attention of bidders, but it would not be appropriate to take a firm decision on location at this stage.

The new Army foundation college will ensure that the Army is well placed to attract the best young men and women into its ranks. It will offer ambitious young people valuable qualifications and one of the most challenging and worthwhile careers in the country today.

Publicity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what promotional and public information campaigns his Department is (a) currently running and (b) planning to run during the next six months; and for each campaign (i) how much it will cost, (1) in total and (2) to his Department, (ii) what agencies or bodies are undertaking the work and (iii) what is its planned duration. [7414]

Mr. Soames: In addition to service recruiting campaigns, which continue throughout the year, my Department sponsors, organises and controls centrally activities aimed at promoting understanding of Defence policy and the armed forces. These have taken the form, principally, of a touring Defence policy exhibition which for a number of years has followed a programme of displays at public events across the country; and in the work of the single service presentation teams which operate throughout the year. During the next six months, it is planned to mount the Defence policy exhibition at the Birmingham international boat and caravan show over nine days in February.

Excluding manpower, the overall cost of the Defence policy exhibition in 1996–97 is expected to be £453,000, of which the display costs at Birmingham amount to £38,000.

The costs of the single service presentation teams, primarily service manpower, in 1996–97 are expected to be £1.785 million.

The costs of service recruitment campaigns in 1996–97 are expected to amount to £33.51 million.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on promotional or public information campaigns in each of the last five years; and how much he estimates will be spent on these campaigns during the (i) current and (ii) next financial years. [7532]

Mr. Soames: Expenditure on the Defence policy exhibition—excluding manpower—service presentation teams and service recruitment advertising in each of the last five years for which information is available was as follows:

	1991–92 £	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £	[1]1996–97 £

SCOTLAND

Hospital Beds

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many beds there were in each NHS trust in Scotland in each year from 1994 to 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15896]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table shows the average daily number of beds staffed and available for the reception of in-patients and day cases.

Changes in the number of available staffed beds between 1994 and 1996 reflect several developments, including shorter lengths of stay for patients receiving treatment in acute specialties, greater use of day case surgery, and the increase in the number of patients being cared for in the community rather than in hospital.

Timber Products

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action has been taken to implement the recommendations of the Forest Stewardship Council in respect of standards for the sustainability of timber products. [15485]

Mr. Kynoch: The Forestry Commission is consulting widely on a draft UK forestry standard and will take account of the Forest Stewardship Council's views.

Sinclair Gardens, Bishopbriggs

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the date for the public inquiry into the pathway closure at Sinclair gardens in Bishopbriggs, Glasgow. [15698]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has not been asked to confirm an order extinguishing the right of way over a path at Sinclair gardens in Bishopbriggs, Glasgow. If such a request is made by East Dunbartonshire council consideration will be given to the need for a public inquiry.

BSE (Cattle Cull)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of his Department's search for cattle associated with BSE cases to be culled under the terms of the Florence agreement; how many cattle have been identified so far; what is his latest estimate of the likely total; how many farms are involved; and what is his estimate of the time scale for completing this search and concluding the accelerated cull. [16318]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: On-farm visits to natal herds, in which a confirmed case of BSE was born, started in the week beginning 27 January. So far, the total number of Scottish cattle that have been identified through these visits as having been exposed to the same feed as BSE cases is 286. Of this number, 49 animals have so far been confirmed as exposed by the central veterinary unit, all of which have moved out of the natal herd and need to be traced further. The latest estimate of the number of cattle affected in Great Britain is 90,000 to 100,000, of which around 4,300 may be in Scotland. However, the true number of animals affected can be determined only by on-farm visits.

Around 300 farms in Scotland have herds in which a confirmed case of BSE was born. Farms which have bought in exposed animals will also be affected. Again, the number of such farms can only be established through the visits to the natal herds, and subsequent tracing visits.

It is very difficult at this early stage to estimate the length of time it will take to conclude the cull.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Kashmir

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to and what reports he has received from the authorities in (a) Kashmir and (b) India concerning the hostage Paul Wells. [16226]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Mr right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised the kidnapping of Paul Wells and Keith Mangan with his Indian and Pakistani counterparts during his January visits. We remain deeply troubled that there has been no confirmed news of the two men since August 1995. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made our concern clear and obtained assurances of all possible assistance in finding out what has happened to the men. He has since written to their families. The Foreign Office consular division will keep them fully informed of any developments.

We are in touch with the Indian authorities, and with the Chief Minister of Kashmir. The diplomatic missions of the UK, USA, Germany and Norway also follow closely the investigation undertaken by the Jammu and Kashmir police.

Israel

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mechanisms of scrutiny the Government propose to put forward to (a) the European Commission and (b) other EU bodies in relation to article 2 of the EU–Israel association agreement; and if he will take steps to ensure these mechanisms are sufficiently transparent to allow assessment of the operation and effect of the human rights clause in the association agreement. [16191]

Mr. Hanley: Heads of diplomatic missions of EU member states in Israel and the occupied territories, as in other countries, continually monitor the human rights situation and send regular reports to the EU Presidency, which are seen by all Member State governments. This includes reporting in connection with the association agreements. The EU–Israel association agreement will establish a political dialogue which will allow the EU to raise human rights issues more effectively with the Israeli Government. The association council set up under the agreement will examine any major issues arising under the agreement.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of Israel's compliance with articles 1 and 38 of the EU-Israel interim agreement on trade and trade-related matters. [16325]

Mr. Hanley: Article 1 of the agreement concerns respect for human rights and democratic principles. We and the EU regularly raise these important matters with the Israeli Government. Article 38 is about the territories to which the agreement applies: as it applies to the territory of the state of Israel, it would not include the occupied territories. The question of whether Israel would be in breach of the agreement by certifying goods produced in the occupied territories as produced in Israel is a matter for the Commission.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assurances he has received from Israel in respect of its compliance with articles 1 and 38 of the EU-Israel association agreement once Parliament has ratified that agreement. [16326]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer. Articles 1 and 38 in the interim agreement are equivalent to articles 2 and 83 in the association agreement. We have received no assurances bilaterally from Israel on this agreement, which is between Israel and the EU.

South Africa

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what travel advice his Department provides for travellers visiting South Africa. [15898]

Dr Liam Fox: The current travel advice for South Africa, issued on 7 February 1997, states:

> Incidents of armed attack, mugging and car hijacking are common, both during daylight hours and at night. The level of violent crime is high, particularly in the Johannesburg area. The murder rate is high and victims in recent months have included a number of foreigners. Care is required in all major cities. Isolated areas should be avoided. Drivers should park in well-lit areas and never pick up strangers. It is inadvisable to wear expensive jewellery or carry cameras when walking in urban areas. The minimum of cash should be carried. Townships and surrounding areas should be avoided.
> If staying in an hotel, seek the advice of the management about which areas should be avoided. Visitors should contact the British High Commission/Consulate for further guidance. British High Commission Pretoria; (012) 342 2200; British Consulate General Johannesburg; (011) 327 0015; British Consulate Cape Town; (021) 253 670; British Consulate Durban; (031) 305 2929; British Consulate East London; (0431) 54 430; British Consulate Port Elizabeth; (041) 55 2423.

China

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese Government concerning the treatment of political prisoners. [16327]

Mr. Hanley: We regularly raise our concerns on human rights, including the treatment of political prisoners, with the Chinese authorities, both bilaterally and through the European Union. My right hon. and learned Friend and Foreign Secretary did so most recently during his talks with Qian Qichen in Singapore on 14 February.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese Government concerning Ngawang Choephel's imprisonment in Sangyip. [16328]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 3 February 1997, Official Report, column 504.

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Chinese Government concerning conditions at Sangyip. [16329]

Mr. Hanley: We have not made any specific representations to the Chinese Government concerning conditions at Sangyip prison. However, my right hon. and learned Friend and the Foreign Secretary raised our concerns about Tibet with the Chinese Foreign Minister when they met in Singapore on 14 February.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 18 February. [15113]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 18 February. [15114]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Residential Properties

Mr. Meale: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the residential properties which are within his gift. [15709]

The Prime Minister: Chevening, Dorneywood and the three flats in Admiralty house.

Manpower Information Service

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he had made of the national on-line manpower information service report from the university of Durham; and if he will make a statement. [16307]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

NOMIS—national on-line manpower information system—is the Office for National Statistics on-line labour market statistics database run under contract by the university of Durham. It enables users to access electronically via a modem link, a wide range of official labour market statistics.

NOMIS does not produce reports, but the information that it makes available is widely used for research purposes and under crown copyright is quoted as the source of information.

There are currently 800 subscribers to NOMIS, including local authorities, academics, research bodies, central Government and the commercial sector.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Belize

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when a final decision will be taken by the Overseas Development Administration over

Britain's contribution to the building of the Belize southern highway project; and what criteria will govern the appraisal of this project. [16194]

Dr. Liam Fox: We expect to take a decision by June 1997. Project appraisal will be undertaken in accordance with established procedures, which require rigorous examination of economic, environmental, social and technical aspects.

Regional Political Conference (Great Lakes Region)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions the British Government have recently held with (a) the Secretary-General of the United Nations, (b) the United States Government, (c) the Canadian Government and (d) regional Governments regarding the holding of a regional political conference in the great lakes region. [16324]

Dr. Liam Fox: The UK is in close contact with EU partners, the UN, and with regional states, regarding a regional political conference on the Great Lakes. We fully supported recent statements by the European Union and UN Security Council endorsing such a conference. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development raised the issue during bilateral meetings this year with the Presidents of Uganda and Kenya.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to facilitate the holding of a regional political conference in the great lakes region. [16323]

Dr. Fox: We believe that regional states must take a leading role in efforts to hold an international conference on the great lakes, and have regularly encouraged them to do so. We fully support the appointment of the Special Envoy of the UN Secretary-General and the Organisation for African Unity, Mohamed Sahnoun, who will co-ordinate international and regional efforts towards such a conference, which should be held under UN and OAU auspices. He is planning to visit London soon. The UK will continue to play an active role in the preparations for the conference.

Rwanda

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the United Nations inspector-general contained in his report on the international genocide trials in Rwanda. [16322]

Dr. Liam Fox: I welcome the recent report by the UN office of internal oversight services into the international tribunal, which has identified areas of serious concern in the management of the tribunal. I commend Secretary-General Annan's announcement that he intends to reform the management of the tribunal.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) representations he has received and (b) discussions he has participated in regarding the management of the international genocide trials in Rwanda. [16321]

Dr. Fox: We have received no representations regarding the international criminal tribunal. We fully support UN Secretary-General Annan's intention to address vigorously the reported problems in the management of the tribunal.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

The Buying Agency

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what targets he has set for The Buying Agency. [16683]

Mr. Freeman: I have set the agency the following targets for 1997:

Financial

to generate a return on capital employed of 8 per cent.

to increase sales of the core business by 20 per cent.

to increase customers of the fuel and energy business by 5 per cent.

Productivity

to reduce the cost per £ of savings from the core business to 4.4p.

to reduce the cost per £ of core business sales to 2.6p.

Customer satisfaction to resolve 95 per cent. of customer complaints in one month.

to deliver 94 per cent. of direct orders by the due date.

Internal quality to improve the quality of the agency's workplace by achieving the health at work award.

Environmental

to set up an environmental management system as described in ISO 14001 standard.

Ministerial Travel Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what were the (a) total costs and (b) costs to each Department of (i) ministerial travel expenses (ii) foreign visits and (iii) accommodation costs in respect of (1) foreign visits and (2) other travel associated with ministerial duties in each year since 1992. [16256]

Mr. Freeman: The information required is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Privatised Utilities (Information)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidance he has issued to the privatised utility regulators concerning the disclosure of information by the companies which they regulate. [15345]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The right of domestic and smaller commercial consumers of electricity and gas to change supplier can be exercised with a minimum of bureaucracy only if certain specified information about customers can be passed between licensed suppliers. In October, at the request of The Office of Electricity

Regulation, my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Energy made the Electricity Act 1989 (Disclosure of Information) (Licence Holders) Order 1996 to facilitate this. The Office of Gas Supply has had access to technical advice given by my Department to British Gas about the requirements of section 42 of the Gas Act 1986, as amended. The provisions in the new order and the Gas Act are subject to the normal requirements of the Data Protection Act 1984, which is administered by the Data Protection Registrar.

Brent Spar

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date his Department was first notified of Shell UK's proposals to dispose of the Brent Spar at sea. [15648]

Mr. Page: Consideration of Shell UK's proposals to dispose of the Brent Spar was spread over a period running form August 1991 to December 1994.

Trade Fair Support Scheme

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations the Government have received from trade associations about the proposed changes to the trade fair support scheme. [15719]

Mr. Nelson: As at 14 February 1997 officials and Ministers in my Department had received letters from 40 trade associations on this topic.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons the Government are withdrawing financial support for the trade fair support scheme. [15718]

Mr. Nelson: The Government will continue to support a substantial number of trade fairs.

The Government will be supporting core events under trade fair support scheme rules until March 1999. Support will be increasingly available for other fairs through the sector challenge. This will allow industry to propose more flexible and longer-term projects for exploiting the export opportunities that overseas trade fairs offer.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the level of financial support by the Government to the trade fair support scheme in the last three financial years. [15717]

Mr. Nelson: The amounts are:

Year	£ million
1994–95	17.1
1995–96	19.9
1996–97	[1]18.9

[1] Estimate.

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the board of Trade if he will meet the British Ceramic Plant and Machinery Manufacturers Association to discuss the changes to the trade fair support scheme. [15720]

Mr. Nelson: My Department has met a number of trade associations to discuss the changes and is willing to meet the British Ceramic Plant and Machinery Manufacturers Association.

Coal

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the prices per tonne in sterling of coal (a) imports and (b) exports for each month from October 1996 to date. [15879]

Mr. Page: Import and export data are available to November 1996.

	Average monthly price £ per tonne
	Import	Export
October 1996	36.48	48.92
November 1996	34.13	51.54

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the tonnage of coal (a) imports and (b) exports for each month from October 1996 to date. [15878]

Mr. Page: Import and export data are available to November 1996.

Thousand tonnes

	Imports	Exports
October 1996	1,206	100
November 1996	1,941	115

Domestic Utility Prices

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which of the past 25 years the domestic prices of (a) electricity, (b) gas and (c) telephone calls fell in (i) real and (ii) nominal prices. [15835]

Mr. Page: The years when a fall in prices have occurred relative to the preceding year are shown in the table. All prices include VAT where appropriate.

Energy Research Budget

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the research budget for (a) coal, (b) nuclear, (c) gas and oil and (d) renewable energy sources in 1996; and in each case what was the figure as a percentage of his Department's total budget. [15881]

Mr. Page: The Department's expenditure plans for these programmes for 1996–97 may be found on page 34 of "Trade and Industry: The Government's Expenditure Plans 1996–97 to 1998–99", Cm 3205, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The Department's overall expenditure plans are summarised on page 8 of the same publication.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will estimate the number of persons employed through private employment agencies for the last five years for which figures are available. [16240]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The labour force survey historical supplement published last year gives the following figures for those working through agencies on a temporary basis.

Spring 1992: 81,000
Spring 1993: 91,000
Spring 1994: 114,000
Spring 1995: 161,000
Spring 1996: 201,000

In addition, employment agencies find permanent fixed period contract, seasonal and other forms of employment for workers which are not included in the above figures.

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the number of employment agencies that were officially registered for each year that it was a statutory requirement to register. [16239]

Mr. Taylor: The licensing of employment agencies under the Employment Agencies Act 1973 commenced in June 1976. The number licensed at the end of each year ending 31 March until licensing ceased on 3 January 1995 is as follows:

1976–77: 3,991
1977–78: 5,336
1978–79: 6,000
1979–80: 6,760
1980–81: 6,787
1981–82: 6,579
1982–83: 6,618
1983–84: 7,019
1984–85: 7,830
1985–86: 9,000
1986–87: 10,352
1987–88: 11,769
1988–89: 14,137
1989–90: 16,537
1990–91: 17,193
1991–92: 15,644
1992–93: 14,422
1993–94: 14,808
1994–95: 15,202

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will estimate the number of employment agencies operating in the United Kingdom for each year since deregulation. [16241]

Mr. Taylor: Agencies in Great Britain continue to be regulated under the provisions of the Employment Agencies Act 1973 and associated regulations. Similar arrangements apply in Northern Ireland. The licensing requirements were replaced by a power of prohibition on 3 January 1995. Since then there has been no requirement for employment agencies to notify either this Department, or the Department of Economic Development in Northern Ireland, of their existence or closure.

Electricity Cables

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many miles of the National Grid's overhead electricity distribution cables have been relaid underground in each of the past 10 years. [15790]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the company.

Mink Pelts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many mink pelts were imported into the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [16413]

Mr. Nelson: In 1995 the UK imported 753,000 mink fur skins.

Employment Protection

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the employment protection legislation which does not apply to people employed by an employment agency rather than the company for which they work. [16472]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Employment protection legislation applies in the same way to all employees, whether they are employed by an employment business or by a company.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings which his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16276]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department is committed to complying with the requirements of all health and safety legislation relating to the identification and control of hazardous materials in the workplace, and replacing ozone depleting substances with environmentally friendly alternatives. My Department occupies some 220 sites: assessments of the amount of hazardous materials and ozone-depleting substances are held locally. These assessments have not been collated centrally.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16420]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My departmental policy has been to concentrate on larger sites in implementing environmental audits. My Department uses the Building Research Establishment environmental assessment method—BREEAM—when undertaking large building refurbishments. Following refurbishment of the No.1 Victoria street headquarters building a BREEAM assessment rating of "very good" was achieved.

Wherever possible, my Department uses the DIY environmental performance checklist, produced for premises managers by the Environment Agency and within the DTI headquarters estate. My Department has implemented an environmental management audit system, which is aimed at assessing and recording the estates impact on the environment. By 1998, my Department will have reduced its impact on the external environment by moving from 25 per cent. to 75 per cent. waste recycling.

Airbus

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total expenditure to date on launch aid for the Airbus A330/340 aircraft; and when he expects repayments to begin. [15855]

Mr. Greg Knight: Total launch aid of £447.1 million has been granted for the Airbus A330/340 aircraft. Based on current estimates of aircraft sales, I expect repayments to begin in early 1998.

Nuclear Contamination

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the claims against (i) his Department and (ii) the nuclear generating companies for nuclear contamination for each year since 1980; what is the value of each (a) claim and (b) settlement; and how many are currently outstanding. [15951]

Mr. Page [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Claims for compensation against alleged nuclear contamination have to be lodged in accordance with the terms of the Nuclear Installations Act 1965. Three claims have been made against the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under section 16(3), all in 1991–92. None was successful and no cases are currently outstanding.

The nuclear industry operate a voluntary compensation scheme for radiation linked diseases, an industry/trade union "no fault" voluntary scheme, which covers the entire industry—both civilian and, more recently, military—rather than just the power generators themselves. Between its inception in 1982 and the end of 1996, this scheme paid out £3.25 million in compensation in a total of 73 cases out of around 650 claims.

To protect the identity of individual claimants, more detailed data on these claims and settlements cannot be made available.

Nuclear Waste Transport

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the costs of security for, and escorting of, the transport of nuclear waste by (a) rail and (b) road for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [15950]

Mr. Page [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Ensuring the safety and security of nuclear materials, including nuclear waste, during transportation whether by rail or road is the top priority for the owners of this material and the carriers. It is not possible to separate out the security costs from the overall costs of transportation, which are a matter for the owners.

There are no costs specifically incurred in the escorting of nuclear waste.

Digital Broadcasting

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what extra resources will be made available to the Office of Telecommunications as a direct result of its responsibility for regulating access to digital broadcasting networks; what plans he has to meet the additional costs involved by a levy on broadcasters; and if he will make a statement. [16028]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The level of resources available to Office of Telecommunications is a matter for the Treasury. However, Oftel's cash limit increased to £10.4 million for 1997–98, compared to £9.1 million for 1996–97. This increase was partly in recognition of increasing enforcement responsibilities, including in relation to digital broadcasting. The allocation of resources within this total is a matter for the director general and I have asked him to write to the hon. Member. Oftel is funded by licence fees paid to the Government. The supply of conditional access to digital televisions is regulated by Oftel through a class licence granted by the Secretary of State under section 7 of the Telecommunications Act 1994. The licence contains provisions to allow the Director General of Telecommunications to set licence fees payable by operators of conditional access systems authorised by the licence. The director general will set fees for any licensee to reflect the level of enforcement activity required by the general nature of the activity involved and by any particular licensee. Accordingly, the costs of enforcement will be borne by the conditional access operators and there are no plans for a general levy on broadcasters for this purpose.

Engineering Policy Unit

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the aims and objectives of his Department's engineering policy unit; and if he will make a statement. [16114]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The mission of my Department's engineering policy unit is to promote the better development and use of engineering skills to improve the competitiveness of UK industry. It has strategic responsibility for stimulating innovation and encouraging best management practice in the selection, education, training, recruitment, employment and development of engineers and technicians. It is the single point of contact for matters pertaining to all the engineering institutions and is responsible for transdepartmental engineering human resource policy matters.

The engineering policy unit has developed, enabled and supported the hugely successful "action for engineering" initiative, which has brought together some 125 representatives from industry, business, the professional institutions, academia, Government and charities in a steering group and six task forces to take co-ordinated action to increase substantially the influence, involvement and achievement of professional engineers and technicians for the benefit of British industry. With my Department's support, action for engineering has implemented or developed 32 projects for members of the engineering community to take forward.

The engineering policy unit has also supported the strategic development of the Year of Engineering Success.

The unit has been instrumental in fostering a new spirit of collaboration and cooperation within the engineering community and seeks to maintain a dynamic dialogue between the educators and trainers of engineers on the one hand and employers of engineers on the other. It ensures that the needs of industry are reflected in Government policy and supply side initiatives on engineering education and training.

Chemical Weapons Advisory Committee

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will make an announcement on the composition of the Chemical Weapons Advisory Committee. [16111]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 17 February 1997]: We expect soon to be in a position to make an announcement about the appointment of the chairman of the Chemical Weapons Advisory Committee. A subsequent announcement will be made about the other members of the committee, who will be selected following consultations with the newly appointed chairman. The committee will be in place before the chemical weapons convention comes into effect on 29 April 1997.

TRANSPORT

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special references to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14948]

Mr. Watts: Since 1994–95, my Department has provided more than £2 million of funding for the Bournemouth and Poole transport packages, which consist of junction improvements, park and ride, road safety schemes, and improved cycling and walking facilities. In 1997–98, Bournemouth will receive £200,000 for its share of the package funding. As from 1 April when Bournemouth becomes a unitary authority, total Department of Transport funding for 1997–98 will be £564,000.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) of 27 November 1996, Official Report, columns 273–76, what is his current estimate of the (a) gross and (b) net proceeds of sale of companies previously owned by British Rail. [15402]

Mr. Watts: Total gross proceeds of those companies, which were previously owned by British Rail and which have been sold pursuant to the Railways Act 1993, are £5.35 billion. This includes dividends of some £800 million and £50 million paid before the sales of rolling stock leasing companies and BR infrastructure companies; proceeds still to be realised from the sale of Railtrack plc; and gross proceeds of sales completed after 27 November 1996. Vendors' costs of sales up to 31 March 1996 are estimated to be £51.66 million. As completion accounts and costs of sales for a number of sales in the current year have yet to be finalised, an estimate of net proceeds is not available.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his current estimate of the cost of departmental staff working on rail privatisation; and what sums his Department has spent on bought in services in this connection. [15401]

Mr. Watts: My current estimate of the cost of departmental staff working on rail privatisation in 1996–97 is £2.1 million; the cost of services bought in in connection with rail privatisation in 1996–97 is £5.8 million, exclusive of VAT.

Rail Services (Punctuality and Reliability)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the number and (b) the percentage of trains, which arrived more than five minutes later during peak hours on each of the former Network SouthEast lines in each four week period since December 1995. [15962]

Mr. Watts: Information for the number of franchised services which arrived more than five minutes late during the peaks is not currently available. Available information for British Rail services and for the percentage of franchised services which arrived more than five minutes late during the peaks is in the tables.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the terms of the passengers charter which apply to all train operating companies. [15966]

Mr. Watts: The British Rail passengers charter applies to train operating companies while they remain under the control of the British Railways Board. All franchise operators must publish their own passengers charters which must include provisions at least as favourable to passengers as those provided under British Rail's charter.

Franchise operators' passengers charters are annexed to the franchise agreement, and copies are in the Library of the House.

Freight Facilities Grants

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the total budget for the current year allocated to freight facilities grants, (b) the amount spent so far and (c) the estimated year-end spending. [16231]

Mr. Watts: The information is as follows:

(a) £5,423,000

(b) £923,528

(c) £3,604,700.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what virement there was of the unspent budgets for freight facilities grants for the years 1994–95 and 1995–96; and what this surplus was spent on. [16457]

Mr. Watts: Unspent freight facilities grant provision in 1994–95 and 1995–96 served to offset spending pressures generally elsewhere on the administration and transport services vote. An overall surplus arising on the vote in each year was surrendered to the Consolidated Fund.

Trans-Pennine Road

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from business and commercial organisations concerning the possibility of a second major trans-Pennine road supplementing the M62. [16224]

Mr. Watts: I am not aware of any recent business or commercial representations concerning the possibility of a second major trans-Pennine road supplementing the M62.

Road Lighting

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice and guidance he has issued to local authorities concerning their road lighting policies, with particular reference to the effect of those policies on the countryside and tranquil areas. [16229]

Mr. Watts: The Highways Agency publishes road lighting standards and advice, including measures for the limitation of environmental intrusion, for use on motorway and all-purpose trunk roads. In particular the booklet "Road Lighting and the Environment", held in the House of Commons Library, describes how the environmental impacts of road lighting can be reduced and problems resolved. It is for local highway authorities to decide the extent to which they use this advice.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of (a) energy use and (b) waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16425]

Mr. Bowis: My Department sets targets to improve energy and waste management efficiency and cost effectiveness by environmental audit and other means. Progress is reported in the annual working environment report.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings which his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16282]

Mr. Bowis: My Department publishes an assessment in its annual working environment report. A copy is in the House of Commons Library and on the Department's Internet site—http://www.open.gov.uk/dot/dothome.htm.

Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to consult (a) local authorities, (b) industry bodies and (c) representatives of the unemployed about the impact upon regeneration projects of those aspects of the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill which are supported by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [16013]

Mr. Watts: We have made it clear that, in deciding whether to set traffic reduction targets, local authorities would need the flexibility to take into account traffic growth consequent on regeneration projects, so that these objectives do not conflict, and that the Bill would need to be amended to this effect in order to secure our support. We would want to consult a wide range of bodies in drawing up guidance to local authorities on this point.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the administrative and operational impact upon local authorities of the responsibility for implementing those provisions of the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill which are supported by his Department. [16011]

Mr. Watts: We shall be discussing detailed implementation of the Bill's requirements with local authorities. The approach we support would result in little if any additional administrative or operational impact above the activities local authorities should already undertake in compiling their transport capital investment strategies.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications for planning policy and procedure of the implementation of those provisions of the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill which are supported by his Department. [16012]

Mr. Watts: The process of setting traffic targets would need to dovetail with local land use plans, which in turn would need to reflect local authorities' traffic forecasts. We would intend to issue guidance on this area.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to undertake a compliance cost assessment of the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill; and if he will make a statement. [16009]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill will not impose a cost on business; there is no need, therefore, for a compliance cost assessment.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from (a) the Confederation of British Industry, (b) the British Roads Federation and (c) other industry bodies, in connection with the impact on the economy of acceptance of the principles of the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill; what was the thrust of those representations; what response he intends to make to them; and what plans he has to consult with industry bodies prior to proceeding with, or facilitating the progress of, any legislation to impose restrictions on road traffic. [16010]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 17 February 1997]: We have received representations from the CBI, BRF, other bodies and a large number of individuals. The vast majority of these representations have been in support of the principle underlying the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill: that local authorities should have a clear vision of the pattern of road traffic growth in their areas, and establish targets as part of their strategy for addressing that growth. Our response to these representations is to indicate the Government's position, which I explained in my speech on the Bill's Second Reading. Subject to the Bill completing its remaining stages we plan to consult a wide range of bodies on the mechanics and process of its implementation.

Marine Pollution (Sea Empress Incident)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will place in the Library (a) a copy of the plans and inventories of equipment and (b) a list of the expertise which is currently available to the marine pollution control unit and the Coastguard Agency; and if he will indicate how the availability of equipment and expertise to those bodies has changed in the past five years; [16258]

(2) what advice or guidance was given by the marine pollution control unit to Milford Haven Port Authority on its contingency plans for dealing with oil tanker casualties and major oil spillages prior to the Sea Empress disaster on 15 February 1996; [16257]

(3) what (a) arrangements and (b) memoranda of understanding exist between the marine pollution control unit and other departments or public bodies in Wales; and if he will place copies in the Library; [16259]

(4) how many staff were employed by the marine pollution control unit in each year from 1986 to 1996. [16261]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Nick Ainger, dated 18 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the Marine Pollution Control Unit.

(16258)

A broad outline of the expertise that can be called upon is contained in the National Contingency Plan for Marine Pollution from Shipping (NCP), a copy of which is in the House of Commons library. The NCP also contains summaries of the counter pollution equipment owned by the Marine Pollution Control Unit (MPCU), listed in an appendix. The equipment and expertise available to the MPCU is under continuous review and is frequently augmented. For example, in the last five years the Chemical Strike Team has been strengthened, new equipment has been purchased for at-sea and shoreline clean-up operations, a new aerial contract has come into operation, a new operations room in the Agency's headquarters in Southampton has been commissioned and call off contracts and framework agreements have been set up to facilitate speedy access to supplementary expertise and equipment during a major incident. A database of available equipment has also been set up and is regularly updated.

(16257)

Under the current voluntary arrangements, Milford Haven Port Authority sent the MPCU a copy of their 'Anti-oil Pollution Plan' revised in June 1992. The MPCU suggested a number of changes to the document. Following the grounding of the oil tanker BORGA at the entrance to Milford Haven in October 1995, the MPCU held a meeting with the Port Authority and suggested further amendments to the contingency plans.

(16259)

The current arrangements with public bodies in Wales are fully covered in the National Contingency Plan for Marine Pollution from Shipping. The MPCU and Environment Agency are currently discussing a Memorandum of Understanding to replace the present one which was agreed between the MPCU and the National Rivers Authority. The environmental agencies, including the Countryside Council for Wales, are involved in these discussions.

(16261)

Staff in Post figures for MPCU from 1986 to 1996 are as follows:

1986 to 1994: 13

1994: 9.5

1994: 10.5

1996: 12.5.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if inspectors of the marine accident investigation branch have interviewed the staff of Smit Tak who were involved in or associated with the Sea Empress salvage operation. [16262]

Mr. Bowis: Yes.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the marine accidents investigation branch inquiry report into the Sea Empress. [16260]

Mr. Bowis: Subject to the completion of the consultation process required by the accident investigation regulations, the chief inspector expects to submit his final report to the Secretary of State next month. The report will then be published as soon as possible.

Trunk Roads (Land Use Planning)

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he has made on the proposal in the Transport Green Paper "Transport: The Way Forward," to integrate trunk road and land use planning. [16783]

Sir George Young: Following consultation with local authorities, business groups and environmental groups, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and I have decided together that trunk road planning in England will now be subject to review under the regional planning guidance—RPG—system, which sets out strategic policies for land use and development and gives guidance on the transport strategy and priorities for each region. Our Departments are publishing today a consultation draft of the planning policy guidance which will bring the new system into effect. Copies have been placed in the Library.

There was strong support for our proposal. It is clear that increased regional input and local consultation at the outset of planning trunk roads will encourage a more focused approach and help to promote an agreed way forward. The proposed new guidance will allow local authorities, for the first time, to include trunk roads in their review of the transport strategy and priorities for their region when advising on RPG.

My right hon. Friend and I shall expect the local authorities to consult widely in preparing their advice to us on RPG. This will give an opportunity for local authorities, business, transport industries, environmental groups and the general public to make fuller contributions to the development of the regional transport strategy, in keeping with our policy on sustainable development. The aim is to obtain as much consensus as possible.

Through this process, the local authorities will be able to propose changes to the broad priorities for trunk road schemes, comment on the need for individual schemes and propose that alternatives be considered, for example traffic management measures or public transport improvements.

Trunk roads are an essential part of the country's infrastructure and final decisions on the DOT road programme will remain my responsibility. I shall continue to take account of vital national, commercial and economic interests alongside the regional advice.

Buses (Wheelchair Access)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new buses have been licensed in each of the last five years; and how many of these were imported. [16487]

Mr. Bowis: Investment by the bus industry in new vehicles has increased substantially in each of the last five years. The figures for newly registered buses and coaches[1] taxed for use as public service vehicles for the years in question are as follows:

1992: 3,051

1993: 3,643

1994: 4,202

1995: 5,214

1996: 6,477.

[1]Figures up to June 1995 are for all class 35—Hackney—vehicles with more than eight seats. Since June 1995 they are for all vehicles in class 34—buses.

The figure for 1996 includes 3,411 imported vehicles. Information cannot be supplied on the number of imported vehicles in the figures for 1992–95 as the statistics available on registration of imported vehicles in those years do not distinguish between buses and taxis and hire cars for public use, which were also included in class 35—Hackney vehicles.

Mr. Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many new buses, licensed in each of the last five years, have allowed wheelchair users access in safety and without too much difficulty; [16485]

(2) what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) proportion of buses currently being used by bus operators meet the criteria set out in the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to ensure that public buses enable a wheelchair user to alight in safety and without too much difficulty; [16484]

(3) which designs of buses currently under construction he has approved as providing access for disabled people such that a wheelchair user can get on a bus in safety and without too much difficulty. [16486]

Mr. Bowis: Information about the accessibility of vehicles is not currently recorded.

The detailed specification for the bus accessibility regulations that we are bringing forward under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 is under discussion with the bus industry and our statutory advisers the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee. We intend to consult on our proposals shortly.

A growing number of operators are already investing in low floor buses which provide much easier access to all passengers, including those with disabilities. Some are also fitting the buses with ramps to enable wheelchair users to gain easy access.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended, indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16568]

Sir George Young: No Ministers or officials from my Department have attended meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994.

Bedford–Bletchley–Bicester Railway Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions have been held with Oxfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Bedfordshire city councils on the upgrading and passenger use of the Bedford–Bletchley–Bicester line; and if he will make a statement. [15994]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 14 February 1997]: Officials from the Government offices for the eastern region and the south-east are represented on the steering group running the feasibility study into the reopening of the Oxford–Bletchley–Bedford–Cambridge route to passenger traffic. My Department held discussions with the consultants advising the consortium of local authorities concerned in December 1996.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the volume of freight traffic on the Bletchley to Bicester line in each year since 1993; and if he will make a statement. [15995]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 14 February 1997]: Statistical records are not kept of the tonnages of freight traffic over individual sections of railway.

The Bicester to Claydon Junction stretch of this line is currently used for the carriage of waste to a landfill site. Five trains a week operate in each direction on this section of the line.

The Claydon Junction to Bletchley stretch of the line has not been used since before 1993.

North London Railway Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received on breaches of the service agreement on the Barking to Gospel Oak branch of the North London line; and if he will make a statement. [15996]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 14 February 1997]: None. Services between Gospel Oak and Barking are provided by North London Railways Ltd. The Franchising Director announced on 7 February 1997 that he had awarded the NLR franchise to National Express Group plc but it has not yet started. Franchised services are expected to start soon, following which any breach of the franchise agreement would be a matter for the Franchising Director.

Nuclear Waste Transport

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much nuclear waste was transported by (a) road and (b) rail in (i) 1993, (ii) 1994, (iii) 1995 and (iv) 1996; and what estimate he has made of the amount in each case to be transported in 1997. [15948]

Mr. Watts [holing answer 17 February 1997]: Information of the kind requested is not routinely held within the Department and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Vaccine Damage (Compensation)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have received lump sum payments due to vaccine damage in each of the last 10 years. [15331]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is only available to the UK as a whole. The number of persons who have received lump sum payments due to vaccine damage for each of the last 10 years is as follows:

1986–87: 17

1987–88: 10

1988–89: 3

1989–90: 3

1990–91: 1

1991–92: 7

1992–93: 13

1993–94: 4

1994–95: 6

1995–96: 6.

Queen's University (Student Intake)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the students beginning courses at Queen's University from Northern Ireland were perceived to be (a) Protestant, (b) Roman Catholic and (c) of other religions in each of the last three years. [15475]

Mr. Ancram: Reliable information is not available owing to the high level of non-response to the community background question.

Livestock (Notifiable Diseases)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of cases of each notifiable disease in livestock reported in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years. [15493]

Mr. Ancram: The table lists the number of cases of each notifiable disease in livestock reported in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years:

Disease	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996

[1] Only became notifiable in Northern Ireland in February 1993.

Union Flag

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Union flag was not flown on 6 February at the offices of the Southern area health board, the Mall, Armagh city; what proposals there are to provide a new Union flag for this building; if the schedule of dates for flying the Union flag has been advised to the staff; if the person responsible was prepared to carry out this duty; and if he will make a statement. [15571]

Sir John Wheeler: The Armagh and Dungannon health and social services trust has advised that failure to fly the Union flag on 6 February was an oversight on its part. Action has been taken to purchase a new Union flag. The schedule of the dates for flying the Union flag has been advised to staff and the person responsible for carrying out this duty has no difficulty in fulfilling it. However, there is no requirement for the trusts to fly the Union flag on these dates, and it is at the discretion of each organisation whether the flag should be flown on those buildings occupied by their staff.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the Union flag was not flown on 6 February at the headquarters of the Southern area health board, Tower hill, Armagh city; if a Union flag has been provided for this public building; if the schedule of dates for flying the Union flag has been advised to the staff; if the person responsible was prepared to carry out this duty; and if he will make a statement. [15570]

Mr. Moss: A letter was sent to all health and social services boards on 18 November 1966 advising them of the days in 1997 on which the Union flag should be flown on central Government buildings. There is, however no requirement for the boards to fly the Union flag on these dates. It is at the discretion of each organisation whether the flag should be flown on those buildings occupied by their staff. A Union flag has been provided for the headquarters for the Southern health and social services board, Tower hill, Armagh. However, the Southern health and social services board decided to use its discretion and not fly the Union flag on its headquarters building at Tower hill on 6 February 1997.

Integrated Schools

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will list the integrated schools in Northern Ireland, with the pupil numbers and percentages of those pupils who are Roman Catholic and Protestant. [15820]

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

School name	Enrolment (1995–96)	Roman Catholic per cent.	Protestant per cent.

[1] Percentages may not sum to 100 per cent. as the total enrolment includes pupils in other categories, ie "other Christian"; "Non-Christian" or "No Religion".

[2] These schools opened in 1996–97 and school census data for that year is not yet available.

Civil Service

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of (i) Northern Ireland civil service and (ii) general service posts (a) requiring and (b) not requiring a degree were filled in each of the last five years. [15818]

Sir John Wheeler: The proportions of permanent, non-industrial posts filled in the Northern Ireland civil service and in the general service in each of the last five years, for which a degree was required, and for which a degree was not required, are set out in the following table:

Year	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
(i) Northern Ireland civil service
(a) Posts filled requiring a degree	132 (8.5 per cent.)	36 (5.7 per cent.)	40 (7.4 per cent.)	117 (15.4 per cent.)	110 (12.5 per cent.)
(b) Posts filled not requiring a degree	1,422 (91.5 per cent.)	597 (94.3 per cent.)	500 (92.6 per cent.)	643 (84.6 per cent.)	768 (87.5 per cent.)

Planning Applications

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list those planning applications, by type, which have been granted for building on green belt sites in the Lisburn district council area since 1 January 1990 and the reasons for the permissions; and if he will make a statement about his policy on residential development in the Aghanahough townland. [15822]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 18 February 1997:

Mr Moss has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of planning permissions granted on green belt sites in the Lisburn Borough Council area since 1990, and the Department's policy on residential development in the Aghanahough townland.

A total of 750 planning permissions have been granted on green belt sites in the Lisburn Borough Council area since 1990. I hope you will appreciate that to, categorise these permissions by type and provide reasons for approval on each case, would involve a manual retrieval and scrutiny of each of the planning files involved and could only be carried out at disproportionate cost. If, however, there are any specific cases on which you require detailed reasons for approval, I would, of course, be happy to have these investigated.

The townland of Aghanahough lies partly within the development limits of Lisburn, and partly within the green belt. As regards the Department's policy for residential development within the development limit, this is set out in the Lisburn Area Plan 1982–1997, adopted in 1985, and the Lisburn Area Plan Preliminary Proposals, published in March 1996. Detailed planning policies for housing development within the green belt, are set out in the area plans referred to, and also, in the Department's publication "A Planning Strategy for Rural Northern Ireland" published in September 1993. A copy of each publication is available in the House of Commons Library.

I do hope this is helpful.

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of his Department's search for cattle associated with BSE cases to be culled under the terms of the Florence agreement; how many cattle have been identified so far; what is his latest estimate of the likely total; how many farms are involved; and what is his estimate of the time scale for completing this search and concluding the accelerated cull. [16319]

Mr. Ancram: At 7 February 1997 Department of Agriculture veterinary service staff had visited 121 natal herds, in which a confirmed case of BSE was born, and identified 721 animals to be culled. A further two natal herds remain to be visited. Approximately 700 animals born in the same cohort groups have moved out of the natal herds and at 10 February, 507 of these animals in 410 herds had been traced. It is anticipated that tracing and valuation of all such animals will be completed in four to six weeks. In total approximately 1,400 Northern Ireland cattle on 670 farms will be traced and identified under the selective cull. Slaughtering is expected to start at the beginning of March and it should take around six to eight weeks to complete the cull of home-bred cattle.

There are about 5,400 cattle imported from Great Britain, some of which may have to be slaughtered under the cull. While these animals are separately identified on the Northern Ireland animal health computer, and their herds of origin known, manual tracing of their movements in Great Britain will be necessary.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the statutory basis of the statement in leaflet NI 246 that an appellant who has not opted for an oral hearing of a social security appeal within 10 days of being asked to decide has a right to change his or her mind at any time. [11088]

Mr. Roger Evans: Regulation 22(1) of the adjudication regulations provides for the clerk to direct an appellant to notify him if he wishes an oral hearing of that appeal to be held. Regulation 22(1A) requires the appellant to provide his reply to this direction in writing within 10 days or such other period as the clerk or tribunal chairman may decide. Regulation 22(1B) requires an oral hearing to be held if the appellant has replied in accordance with Regulation 22(1A). Regulation 22(1C) allows the chairman to hold an oral hearing, whether the appellant or any other party to the appeal has so requested or not, if he is satisfied that an oral hearing is necessary to enable the tribunal to reach a decision.

Regulation 22(1A) and 22(1B) therefore provide for an oral hearing in all cases where the appellant has requested one within 10 days. The clerk or the chairman may allow longer than 10 days. No end date is specified by the regulations and I am advised that this period may extend up to the point that the decision on the appeal is issued by the tribunal. Therefore, if an appellant has not elected in the first instance for an oral hearing, or opted to have his appeal heard on the papers, he may still request an oral hearing at any time up to the point that the decision is issued. In those circumstances, the chairman may order an oral hearing.

Departmental leaflets, including the NI 246, are not a complete and authoritative statement of the law. They are written in plain English and are intended to provide sufficient information and advice in language that will be understood by the majority of the population. Some representations have been received about the content and format of the new NI 246, and these will be taken into account before the leaflet is next reprinted. Current plans are for a reprint during April 1997.

Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the mean and (b) the median income for (i) single men aged 65 to 74, (ii) single men aged 75 and over, (iii) single women aged 65 to 74, (iv) single women aged 75 and over, (v) pensioner couples aged 65 to 74 and (vi) pensioner couples aged 75 years and over, (1) for 1979 in 1994–95 prices and (2) for 1994–95. [12991]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

	Mean income £	Median income £
Single men aged 65 to 74
1979	93.20	76.90
1994–95	125.50	103.40

1994–95	217.00	169.00

Notes:

1. All figures are given in 1994–95 prices and rounded to the nearest 10p.

2. A pensioner couple is defined as a couple where the man, defined as the head, is over the state pension age. The age ranges quoted for pensioner couples are for the age of the head of the couple.

Benefit Upratings

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the cost in 1997–98 of uprating (1) the £3,000 lower capital limit for income support for (a) pensioners and (b) all recipients of income support to (i) £8,000 and (ii) £16,000 and (2) the £8,000 upper capital limit for income support for (A) pensioners, (B) all recipients of income support to (x) £16,000 and (y) £20,000; [14288]

(2) if he will estimate the number of pensioners who would become eligible for income support if (a) the £3,000 capital limit was increased to (i) £8,000, (ii) £16,000 and (iii) £10,000 and (b) the £8,000 upper capital limit was increased to (i) £16,000 and (ii) £20,000. [14290]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table. The table also shows the number of pensioners who would become eligible for income support if these changes were made.

		Cost in 1997–98 £ million		Number of claimants aged 60 or over becoming entitled to income support

16,000	20,000	310	260	210,000

1. Estimated using the 1994–95 family resources survey, uprated to 1997–98 case loads and benefit levels.

2. Estimates assume that the combinations will include an upper and lower capital limit.

3. Estimates exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes.

4. Estimates include consequential costs in housing benefit and council tax benefit from new income support claimants being "passported" onto these benefits.

5. Estimates for all claimants include the costs of introducing the same capital limits in jobseeker's allowance.

6. Adjustments to these estimates are made using the May 1995 income support quarterly statistical inquiry and the May 1995 housing benefit–council tax benefit management information system.

7. Cost estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million, claimants to the nearest 5,000.

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost in 1997–98 of reducing the assumed income from savings for (a) pensioners and (b) all recipients of income support, with savings between £3,000 and £8,000, to (i) £1 a week for every £500 over £3,000 and (ii) £1 a week for every £1,000 over £3,000. [14289]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Tariff income rule	Cost in income support and jobseeker's allowance in 1997–98 (£ million): Pensioners	Cost in income support and jobseeker's allowance in 1997–98 (£ million): All claimants
£1 for every £500 above the lower capital limit	20	30
£1 for every £1,000 above the lower capital limit	40	50

1. Estimated using the 1994–95 family resources survey, uprated to 1997–98 case loads and benefit levels.

2. Estimates exclude cases in residential care and nursing homes.

3. Estimates include consequential costs in housing benefit and council tax benefit from new income support claimants being "passported" onto these benefits.

4. Estimates for all claimants include the costs of introducing the same capital limits in jobseeker's allowance.

5. Adjustments to these estimates are made using the May 1995 income support quarterly statistical inquiry and the May 1995 housing benefit–council tax benefit management information system.

6. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the cost in 1997–98 of increasing all capital limits for income-related benefits for pensioner couples to one and a half times their current limits. [14291]

Mr. Evans: The estimated cost if all capital limits for income-related benefits for pensioner couples are increased to one and a half times their current limits is £30 million in 1997–98.

Notes:

1. This is estimated using the 1994–95 family resources survey, uprated to 1997–98 case loads and benefit levels.
2. The estimate excludes cases in residential care and nursing homes.
3. The estimate covers income support, housing benefit, council tax benefit and family credit.
4. Adjustments to this estimate are made using the May 1995 income support quarterly statistical inquiry and the May 1995 housing benefit—council tax benefit management information system.
5. The estimate is rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of benefit fraud in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what estimate he has made of the likely savings which will accrue from the initiative "Spotlight on Benefit Cheats". [14696]

Mr. Heald: The overall annual level of detected and undetected benefit fraud is currently estimated at approximately £4 billion.

Phase I of the spotlight campaigns, which ran from April to September 1996, generated more than £44 million in benefit savings. Phase II, which ran during November 1996, has generated £40.4 million. Phase III began on 3 February 1997.

Earnings Top-up

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of the earnings top-up during its piloting stage; and if he will estimate the annual costs of a national scheme. [15073]

Mr. Roger Evans: The earnings top-up pilot is expected to cost a total of £65 million over three years. Two benefit rates—scheme A and scheme B—will test how different amounts of earnings top-up influence the decision to take up and remain in work. Present estimates indicate that the annual cost of a national scheme will be £265 million—scheme A—and £595 million—scheme B—at 1996–97 prices. These estimates would be subject to review as information on the effects of the benefit are collected and analysed during the pilot.

Earnings Disregards

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the numbers gaining and (b) the cost of assessing, earnings and earnings limits over a quarterly period in respect of (i) the weekly disregards in income-related benefits, and (ii) the weekly earnings limits applicable to contributory and non-contributory benefits. [15076]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available.

Student Loans

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the numbers gaining and (b) the cost of treating a student loan as capital in claims for (i) income support and (ii) jobseeker's allowance. [15080]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons the Child Support Agency has reduced the range of statistical information it makes available. [15120]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Miss Liz Lynne, dated 17 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the provision by the Child Support Agency of statistical information.

I am unclear why you should have the impression that the range of statistical information available has been reduced. If anything, the reverse is true, with more statistical information on the Agency's work now available than was previously the case, and with enhancements to the Child Support Computer System making more specific data available.

Although now published quarterly rather than monthly, the House of Commons Library Report produced by the Agency carries the same data as before, The Quarterly Statistical Summary produced by the Analytical Services Department now draws information from a larger sample, thereby improving the quality of the results, and contains more information than earlier editions. Monthly statistics on the Agency's performance against Charter Standards are to be displayed in our offices.

As you will be aware, the Government has published a code of practice on access to Government information. The Agency is committed to the principles of this code, and will make information readily available whenever this is possible.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what procedures are in place at the Child Support Agency to ensure that all complaints by clients are counted; and what instructions are given to staff regarding the definition, recognition, registration and counting of complaints. [15086]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Miss Liz Lynne, dated 17 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about complaints tot he Child Support Agency.

The new CSA Charter advises clients how to complain if they are dissatisfied with the service they have received from the Agency. Each of our offices has a Customer Service Manager to whom clients can speak or write to about a complaint.

Systems are in place for defining, recording, recognising, registering and counting client's complaints across the Agency and the information is collated and monitored on a monthly basis. Where there have been vexatious complaint campaigns orchestrated by organisations who oppose the implementation of Child Support legislation, staff have been instructed not to register these as bona fide complaints.

Improving the handling of client's complaints is one of the key priorities for the Child Support Agency. During 1996, the Agency set up a review of its internal procedures for dealing with complaints in order to bring them into line with the Citizen's Charter Complaints Taskforce recommendations.

As a result, a number of improvements have been identified including the revision of training for all staff involved in dealing with client's complaints and the introduction of a new Complaints Guide which sets out the Agency's policy and procedures for the speedy and effective handling of client's complaints. The revised arrangements are currently being piloted in one of our Agency business units and will be fully evaluated prior to adoption Agency-Wide.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefits (Expenditure)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of annual social security expenditure on each benefit. [15074]

Mr. Burt: Detailed breakdowns of total expenditure figures are made available in the Social Security departmental report. This will be published in March 1997.

Income Support

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the number gaining and (b) the cost of extending payments of income support to those under age 19 years who qualify by virtue of being in relevant education to a period beyond their 19th birthday which is (i) the date of the end of the course and (ii) the terminal date. [15078]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available.

Income Support (Child Maintenance)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have lost entitlement to income support benefit as a result of child maintenance payments to them resulting from action taken by the Child Support Agency as recorded by form 646 during the months of October, November and December 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15942]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mrs. Margaret Beckett, dated 17 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security regarding cessation of Income Support as a result of Child Support Agency action on form 646.

The form used to notify the Benefits Agency of the amount and the commencement date of regular child maintenance is form CSA 676(A). This form has a tear-off facility to allow the Benefits Agency to inform the Child Support Agency of the outcome of the reassessment of Income Support, including cases where Income Support ceases.

In such cases, where the absent parent is to make payments of maintenance via the Child Support Agency, the Benefits Agency contacts the Agency to ensure that maintenance payments have started before payments of Income Support cease. In cases where the absent parent is to pay maintenance directly to the parent with care any failure to pay the agreed amount of maintenance is reported to the Benefits Agency and the Child Support Agency.

The number of cases where the Benefits Agency has notified the Agency that Income Support has ceased is as follows:

October 1996: 147

November 1996: 153

December 1996: 95

I hope this is helpful.

War Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, (1) pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, columns 635–36, what steps he has taken to investigate the reasons for his Department's medical advisers' delay in providing advice relating to the additive nature of age-related hearing loss; and when sensorineural hearing loss was introduced for war pension purposes; [15857]

(2) on what date the medical opinion on which his Department based its policy relating to sensorineural hearing loss for the purposes of war pensions prior to March 1996 was received; and from whom. [15862]

Mr. Heald: The war pensions scheme has no list of prescribed conditions. It has always been possible for a claim to be made for any disablement, including noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss.

Prior to 1996, the assessment of noise-induced hearing loss claims was based on advice from departmental medical officers given in December 1992. The approach taken following that advice was investigated during 1995 and 1996. The medical adviser who undertook the investigation concluded that, from 1 March 1996, there could no longer be any doubt that the general medical opinion was that age and noise-related hearing loss were no more than additive.

The 1995–96 investigation did not include an examination of whether the advice given by previous medical advisers in 1992 was reasonable at the time it was given. This question was investigated following the statement by the Royal National Institute for the Deaf's and the Royal British Legion's medical experts that the fact that noise and age-related hearing loss were no more than additive had been known for 30 years. That investigation has revealed that the advice given in 1992 was not scientifically based.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what medical conditions, in respect of which war pensions are payable, are not recompensed for deterioration; and what assessment he has made of the methods of evaluation of deterioration in respect of each such condition. [15858]

Mr. Heald: A war pension may be awarded for any condition which is attributable to or aggravated by service. Any subsequent deterioration of that condition may also be compensated, providing the deterioration is due to service. Deterioration wholly unconnected with service cannot be compensated for under the war pensions scheme. Each case is considered on its individual circumstances and merits.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the changes in medical opinion of which his Department's advisers informed Ministers relating to noise-induced hearing loss in the last five years. [15859]

Mr. Heald: The only occasion in the past five years on which Ministers have been advised of a change in medical opinion on noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss was in October 1996 when Ministers were advised that it had been shown beyond reasonable doubt that the effects of noise and age-related hearing loss were no more than additive.

Mr. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 635, on the open letter sent to the Minister of State, Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish, on sensorineural hearing loss and war pensions, what reply he has sent to the letter; if he will publish that reply; and if he will make a statement. [15861]

Mr. Heald: In response to the letter from Professors Lutman and Davies, my right hon. and noble Friend Lord Mackay of Ardbrecknish the Minister of State, has arranged to meet the Royal British Legion and its medical advisors on 12 March to discuss any remaining differences.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to disregard income from a personal pension for people with reserved rights who have a spouse living in the family home. [16741]

Mr. Roger Evans: Regulations are being amended with effect from 7 April 1997 so that 50 per cent. of the income from a personal pension or retirement annuity contract will be disregarded where a resident of a residential care or nursing home with preserved rights to income support, or income-based jobseeker's allowance, passes at least half of their pension or annuity income to a spouse living at home. A similar disregard for occupational pensions was introduced in April 1996.

Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the implementation of the recommendations by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council concerning chronic bronchitis and emphysema. [16742]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced in November 1996 that the Government would implement, in full, the recommendations made by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council to change the qualifying conditions for the award of disablement benefit for chronic bronchitis and emphysema—Cm 3240. Good progress has been made in the meantime, and I can now announce that we will be able to bring the changes into operation from 9 April. These changes will make it more straightforward for coal miners who are disabled by these diseases to qualify for benefit, and easier to administer the scheme.

The Benefits Agency has undertaken extensive planning to implement these changes efficiently and as soon as practicable. Arrangements are in hand to publicise the change locally in a way that will target the communities most affected and use the means most likely to reach the people concerned.

People making claims under the new arrangements are advised to do so from the beginning of April, but not before. We expect a relatively small number of Benefits Agency offices to receive a large number of claims over a short period of time. Inevitably, this work will take some time to process, however, arrangements will be put in place to inform people who claim of progress from written acknowledgment of the claim through to decision and, where appropriate, payment. Successful claims made at the right time will be paid with effect from 9 April.

A new edition of leaflet N17 "People who have worked underground in a coal mine for 20 years" will be available in English and Welsh in social security offices from April. Revised claim forms will also be available.

The Benefits Agency is contacting mining organisations, GPs and citizen advice bureaux in mining areas to ensure that everyone is informed. Administration of claims will be simplified wherever possible.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Tenancies

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of farm business tenancies entered into to date. [15491]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department is currently analysing data on the uptake of farm business tenancies under a new annual survey of tenanted land. This survey was launched in October last year and the results are expected to be published in March 1997.

BSE

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total cost to public funds of the BSE crisis in Britain since 20 March 1996 broken down by category; and what proportion of this total he estimates will be recovered from the European Community. [15489]

Mrs. Browning: For details of the cost of the BSE crisis, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 3 February 1997, Official Report, column 513. The proportion of this cost to be recovered from the EU is estimated at approximately 45 per cent.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total amount paid in compensation to the beef industry in Britain for price damage since 20 March 1996. [15488]

Mr. Baldry: Compensation is not paid to the beef industry for price damage. For details of expenditure on BSE eradication and compensation schemes, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Palriamentary Secretary on 3 February 1997, Official Report, column 513.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been slaughtered to date under the over-30 months scheme; and what is the average amount per cow paid in compensation to farmers. [15486]

Mr. Baldry: More than 1.25 million cattle have now been slaughtered under the over-30-months scheme. For an average cull cow weighing 560 kg, the amount paid to producers, depending on the date on which the animal was slaughtered, is:

3 May 1996 to 30 June 1996	479.64
1 July 1996 to 20 October 1996	466.93
21 October 1996 to 31 October 1996	420.22
1 November 1996 to 31 January 1997	408.18
1 February 1997 to	387.18

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) farmers' incomes and (b) the economy of rural areas of the European ban on beef exports. [15478]

Mr. Boswell: The European Union ban on exports of UK beef, together with the fall in consumption on the UK market, is estimated to have reduced the value of UK cattle sales by approximately £800 million in 1996. However, this reduction in revenue has been largely offset by measures put in place by the Government to assist the industry.

The Ministry is commissioning an independent study to provide a comprehensive assessment of the economic impact of BSE across the whole UK economy and within particular regions.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for a further selective cull based on the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee's report on maternal transmission. [15882]

Mr. Baldry: SEAC has asked for more work to be done regarding the study on maternal transmission before making final recommendations to the Government. We shall consider the implications for the selective cull once we have SEAC's advice.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of confirmed cases of BSE in each month in 1995 to 1996. [15873]

Mrs. Browning: The following table shows the monthly breakdown of confirmed BSE cases for 1995 to 1996:

	1995	1996
January	1,720	920
February	2,035	1,192
March	1,629	847
April	1,173	592
May	1,403	629
June	1,232	1,026
July	1,266	801
August	1,094	541
September	956	655
October	1,054	673
November	1,107	594
December	784	268

Ms Walley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the number of carcases of slaughtered cattle currently in container ships awaiting disposal. [16529]

Mr. Baldry: None.

Rabies

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the reliability of blood tests for rabies antibodies subsequent to vaccination. [15639]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) Order 1974, as amended in particular by the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) (Amendment) Order 1994, dogs and cats which are the subject of a commercial transaction may be imported into the United Kingdom from another EU member state provided that they have, inter alia, been tested for antibodies using a

"serological test carried out in accordance with World Health Organisation specifications".

The test commonly used by laboratories throughout the EU is the rapid fluorescent focus inhibition test. This test is based on a World Health Organisation specification, but has undergone a number of modifications over the years in different laboratories. A revised protocol which should overcome problems with test result variability has now been submitted for ratification following a detailed collaborative study between a number of EU laboratories.

Waste Disposal at Sea

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's definition of bulky waste in respect of disposal at sea. [15627]

Mr. Boswell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him today in response to his question to the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Newcastle Disease

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 43, when he expects the information on birds involved in outbreaks of Newcastle disease and the total amount of compensation paid to be available. [15724]

Mrs Browning: The total amount of compensation to be paid as a result of the recent outbreaks of Newcastle disease is dependant on information to be supplied by the claimants involved and our consideration of their claims. The claims will be processed as quickly as possible.

Sheep Annual Premium

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations his Department has received since 1 January 1996, relating to application forms allegedly completed and sent, but not received by his Department for (a) sheep annual premium and (b) other grants administered by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [16168]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested is not held centrally and could be extracted locally only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Escort Services

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what procedures exist to monitor the number of hours worked in one session of work by drivers employed by firms contracted to carry out prison escort services; [15153]

(2) what checks are carried out on the (a) health and (b) character of drivers employed by firms contracted to carry out prison escort services; and what procedures are used to monitor these factors; [15151]

(3) what limits are placed on the number of hours worked per shift by drivers employed by firms contracted to carry out prison escort services. [15150]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about drivers employed by private sector companies who are responsible for escorting prisoners.

Most prisoner movements under escort are to and from court and are now virtually all undertaken by specialist court escort contractors.

The contracts require full compliance with the provisions of relevant Road Traffic and Road Safety legislation. Each company is required to hold an Operator's Licence and its procedures and records are subject to inspection by the Department of Transport. There is no additional routine inspection by court escort monitors of the hours worked by drivers or of their shift patterns although such records must be made available on request.

The health of drivers is primarily a matter for the contractor, both on recruitment and subsequently, although again there is an overriding requirement to comply with all relevant legislation. Drivers of the larger vehicles must hold Passenger Carrying Vehicle Licences (PCVs).

Drivers employed by companies contracted to provide a court escort service must be certificated as Prisoner Custody Officers under the Criminal Justice Act 1991. This involves such enquiries as are deemed necessary into the background and character of each applicant. Without such certification employment cannot commence. The provisions of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act do not apply.

There are also contracts issued for the provision of vehicles and drivers for the transportation of prisoners for other purposes. These too reflect the need to comply with all appropriate legislation.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each current contract for prison escort services indicating (a) the company, (b) the value of the contract, (c) its area of operation and (d) its duration. [15152]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the costs and duration of contracts for prison escort services.

The information requested is shown in the table attached. This relates only to those contracts for the movement of prisoners to and from court. Contracts for the provision of vehicles and drivers for other prisoner movements under the escort of prison officers are let locally by each establishment and details could only be collected at disproportionate cost.

Notes:
[1] This is the end date for the contract, however, all contracts include options for an extension up to a maximum duration of 14 years.
[2] The value is the estimated total value for the initial duration of the contract based on first year prices.
[3] The value of the Securicor contract for area 3 takes account of a re-resourcing activity which took place before the end of phase 1.
[4] The area 7 contract was not phased in, full operation commenced on the start date.
[5] Area 7 was the first contract and included a facility for the resource levels to be reassessed after implementation. The value takes account of this re-resourcing exercise.
[6] The area 8 contract includes a non mandatory option for establishments to utilise the contract for external movements. The value detailed above includes an estimated cost for external movements.

Criminal Records

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the voluntary sector regarding proposals in the Police Bill [Lords] to charge volunteers for access to criminal record checks; and if he will make a statement. [15149]

Mr. Maclean: We have received many representations from the voluntary sector about the charging of fees for criminal record checks.

In response to these representations, my right hon. and learned Friend announced to the House, during Second Reading of the Police Bill [Lords] on 12 February, that we shall seek to amend the Bill to introduce an order-making power to enable free checks to be provided for specific groups, such as volunteers, when the money could be made available to cover the costs.

Prison Medical Service

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the expenditure on the prison medical service from each year since 1990 (a) in cash terms, (b) in standard price terms based on the current year and (c) in cash and standard prices per head of the prison population; and what is the planned expenditure for future years under the same headings. [15234]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about expenditure on the prison medical service each year since 1990 and how much we plan to spend in future years.

Expenditure on health care has been devolved to prison establishments. Governors allocate appropriate resources from within their establishment budgets, to ensure that health care is delivered to prisoners in accordance with set standards. For this reason it is not possible accurately to differentiate health care staff costs from the overall Prison Service budget nor to forecast precise future expenditure. Estimated expenditure for health care for the years 1990/91–1994/95 (the last year for which such an estimate was made) are set out in the attached table. The figures given are at 1994/95 prices.

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Estimated expenditure £ million (1994–95 prices)	54.764	58.217	58.403	58.215	59.269
Average per inmate	0.00123	0.00129	0.00133	0.00127	0.00120

Prison Deaths

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many self-inflicted deaths occurred in HM prisons in each year from 1990 to 1993 (a) in total and (b) per head of the prison population. [15393]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter form Richard Tilt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of self inflicted deaths at prison establishments in each year from 1990 to 1993.

The figures on self inflicted deaths are given below. Self inflicted deaths do not necessarily conclude with a verdict of suicide.

Calendar year	Total self inflicted deaths	Average population	Rate of self inflicted deaths per 100,000 population
1990	50	44,975	111
1991	42	44,809	94
1992	41	44,719	92
1993	47	44,552	105

Surveillance Equipment

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for warrants for the interception of telephone calls have been (a) submitted, (b) approved by officials in the Home Office, (c) signed by the Secretary of State and (d) cancelled or revoked after issue for each year since the introduction of the Interception of Communications Act 1985; and what other information he collects to assess (i) the extent and need for warrants and (ii) the time taken by officials and the Secretary of State to carry out these functions. [15436]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the annexes to the reports of the interception of communications commissioner for 1989 and 1995 Cm 1063 and 3254, copies of which are in the Library. Together, these provide figures for the number of warrants issued by the Secretary of State during each of the years from 1985 to 1995 and the number in force at the end of each year. Warrants are cancelled when they are no longer considered necessary. None have been quashed under section 7(5) of the Act. The information requested at (a) and (b) is not available.

The extent and need for warrants is manifest in the detailed cases which are presented in support of the applications. One grade 7, one higher executive officer, two executive officers, one administrative officer and one typist are engaged on case work under the 1985 Act. Member of the senior civil service are also involved in the consideration of applications and I, or in my absence another Secretary of State, personally consider and decide upon applications submitted to my office.

Belmarsh Prison

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about conditions in the special secure unit at Her Majesty's prison, Belmarsh; and if he will make a statement.[15242]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Chris Mullin, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what representations have been received about conditions in the Special Secure Unit (SSU) at Belmarsh.

The Prison Service answers many queries from Members of Parliament, prisoners and the general public about conditions in the SSU at Belmarsh prison. The four main issues raised relate to time out of cell, alleged discrimination, visiting arrangements and medical treatment.

Learmont Inquiry

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the implementation of the outstanding recommendations made in the report of the Learmont inquiry. [15970]

Miss Widdecombe: On 24 July 1996, I published an interim progress report which contained details of the conclusions reached and actions taken or planned by the Director General of the Prison Service in response to 100 of Sir John Learmont's recommendations.

On 15 January 1997, the director general announced the implementation of a further 11 recommendations. Details were given in a report which was placed in the Library.

Of the remaining 16 recommendations, 11 are the subject of a cost-benefit analysis to determine their operational effectiveness and value for money, and five are subject to further review or evaluation of pilot schemes.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) unconvicted remand prisoners and (b) convicted but unsentenced remand prisoners had been held for (i) less than six months; (ii) between six and 12 months, (iii) between one year and three years and (iv) over three years since first reception into the Prison Service for each month since January 1995. [15984]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) unconvicted remand prisoners and (b) convicted but unsentenced remand prisoners had been held for (i) less than six months; (ii) between six and twelve months; (iii) between one year and three years and (iv) over three years since first reception into the Prison Service for each month since January 1995.

The information requested is not available on a monthly basis, nor at the level of detail requested and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average amount of time spent in prison by (a) unconvicted remand prisoners and (b) convicted but unsentenced prisoners in each month since January 1995. [15985]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what was the average amount of time spent in prison by (a) unconvicted remand prisoners and (b) convicted unsentenced prisoners in each month since January 1995.

The information requested is contained in the attached table.

Closed Circuit Television

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of CCTV schemes in each city in South Yorkshire which are currently in operation; and what assessment he has made of the effect of each scheme on crime rates. [15704]

Mr. Maclean: In the two Home Office closed circuit television challenge competitions which have so far been held, six schemes in South Yorkshire have been awarded grants. They are:

Grimethorpe village, Barnsley (awarded £116,000);

Scawsby community centre, Brodsworth (£4,250);

The community and educational campus, Dinnington (£72,500);

Balby Street school, Doncaster (£5,000);

Clifton Comprehensive and Coleridge junior and infant schools, Rotherham (£37,850); and Lower Don industrial area, Sheffield (£53,000).

Grimethorpe village and the community and educational campus are not yet operational. The local police report that the other four schemes have all had a significant impact on crime.

Although information about CCTV systems in which the Home Office has no involvement is not collected systematically, we are aware that town centre CCTV systems are operational in Barnsley, Doncaster, Rotherham and Sheffield. The local police report that these schemes have also resulted in significant reductions in crime.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the timetable of events, with dates, connected with the successful application for funding the installation of CCTV in Dartford town centre, by the Dartford borough council; what sums were awarded to the borough council; and when the project was completed. [15864]

Mr. Maclean: A bid from a partnership led by Dartford borough council for funds to install closed circuit television in Dartford town centre was submitted in the first CCTV challenge competition in January 1995. Some £50,000 was awarded in March 1995. The first phase of the system—12 cameras—became operational in July 1996. The second phase—a further nine cameras—became operational in September 1996.

Court Adjournments

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve liaison between the police, the Crown Prosecution Service, defence solicitors, the courts and the probation service, with particular reference to reducing the number of court adjournments. [15788]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have taken many steps to improve liaison between all agencies within the criminal justice system, both nationally and locally. The work of the inter-agency trials issues group includes considering specific criminal justice system matters involving relations between the police, prosecution, courts and others. A total of 42 local inter-agency groups support the work of TIG.

The Criminal Justice Consultative Council, chaired by Lord Justice Rose and comprising members of all criminal justice agencies and the legal professions, also promotes better understanding, co-operation and co-ordination in the criminal justice system. Its work is underpinned at local level by 23 area criminal justice liaison committees.

Following discussion at a recent CJCC meeting, the Magistrates Association and the Justices Clerks Society issued a joint statement on speedier sentencing of young offenders. It deals specifically with multiple offending and guides that courts should sentence for the offences before it rather than wait for all further alleged offences to come to trial.

Prison Population

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average yearly prison population since 1987. [15982]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to HM Prison Service dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what was the average yearly population since 1987.

The average prison population in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for each year since 1987 was as follows:

1987: 48,426
1988: 48,872
1989: 48,500
1990: 44,975
1991: 44,809
1992: 44,719
1993: 44,552
1994: 48,621
1995: 50,962
1996: 55,281.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the prison population for each month since January 1995; [15981]

(2) how many (a) unconvicted remand prisoners and (b) convicted but unsentenced remand prisoners there were in each month since January 1995. [15983]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr George Howarth, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions asking if he will list the prison population for each month since January 1995; and also, how many (a) unconvicted remand prisoners and (b) convicted but unsentenced remand prisoners there were in each months since January 1995.

The information requested is contained in the attached table.

Fire Service (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were working in the fire service in Lancashire in (a) 1996 and (b) 1979. [16155]

Mr. Sackville: Information on the staffing of fire brigades is published in the annual reports of Her Majesty's chief inspector of fire services. The reports in question are for 1978 (Cm 7605, page 55) and 1995–96 (Cm 3493, page 14)—copies of which are in the Library.

Police Computer Systems

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to harmonise computer systems throughout police forces in England and Wales. [15786]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend launched the national strategy for police information systems—NSPIS—in November 1994. A principal aim of this blueprint agreed with the police service is the development of common, compatible computer systems for use by all police forces. Such systems will make a significant contribution to operational effectiveness, reduce police paperwork and provide better value for money. The first NSPIS application—vehicle procedures—is now available. Other systems currently being developed within the strategy are for:

Custody
Case preparation
Command and control
Crime reporting
Management information
Large major inquiries (HOLMES)
National legal database.

Mandatory Drug Tests

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mandatory drug tests were carried out on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays; and how many tests were performed in total in each month since weekend testing began. [15975]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of mandatory drug tests carried out on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

Mandatory drug testing (MDT) data are not held in a form which allows us readily to provide the information requested.

In addition, a number of errors have come to light concerning the MDT data. Independent research has been commissioned to investigate these errors and it may take a little while before we are able to provide detailed figures, in which we have full confidence.

However, I should like to stress that we do not anticipate the effect of these errors to be particularly large on the overall statistics. Bearing in mind these commetns we can give an estimate for random mandatory drug tests carried out on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. Around 6,100 such tests were conducted in the period between 1 April 1996 and 31 October 1996, out of an estimated total of 32,000 random tests undertaken.

Court Cases (Bail)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that if a person appears before a court in England or Wales (a) the police and (b) the court will be made aware of outstanding (i) bail and (ii) breaches of bail in another court. [15785]

Mr. Maclean: The Government recognise the importance of accurate and timely information about bail to enable the police and the courts to make appropriate decisions. The inter-agency bail issues steering group, which we reconvened last summer, is examining what practical steps can be taken to improve information flows. Under the group's direction, work is nearing completion on an assessment of the impact of the changes made by the bail process project, which we set up to assess and enhance the flow of information between the criminal justice agencies. The results will be published in due course.

A30–A303 Roadworks

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the costs to date to (a) the Devon and Cornwall police and (b) other police authorities of policing the road construction on the A30–A303 between Exeter and Honiton. [15927]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the chief constable that Devon and Cornwall constabulary's costs to date are estimated to be in the region of £750,000. No costs have been incurred by other police authorities.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received reporting trespass on (a) privately owned land and (b) publicly owned land in the vicinity of the A30–A303 Exeter–Honiton road works. [15929]

Mr. Maclean: None.

Police (Information Technology)

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve the efficiency of the police through the use of information technology. [15787]

Mr. Maclean: Part IV of the Police Bill contains provisions to establish the police information technology organisation as an executive non-departmental public body. This new independent tripartite framework will lead to the improved delivery of cost-effective, responsive and timely information technology services to the police.

PITO is responsible for promoting the delivery of national police information services and taking forward the national strategy for police information systems—NSPIS—by co-ordinating the development of local information technology systems. Local computer applications being developed under NSPIS, enhancements to the police national computer and major projects to provide the next generation of automated fingerprint identification and radio systems are amongst the PITO programmes which will improve efficiency and ensure that information technology is fully harnessed in the fight against crime.

Serious Criminal Offences

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current estimate of the average number of people each week involved for the first time in a serious criminal offence; and what was the equivalent figure in 1987. [15839]

Mr. Maclean: Information routinely available centrally relates to the number convicted of a standard list offence for the first time.

The latest available figures are for 1994, when the estimated weekly average for such convictions was 2,300. The equivalent figure for 1987 was 2,900.

Offences included in the "standard list" are given in appendices 4 and 5 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1995" (Cm 3421).

These include all indictable and some of the more serious summary offences.

Prisoners (Report and Health)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the report by Sir Donald Acheson on the health of prisoners to be published. [15702]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Chris Smith, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the report by Sir Donald Acheson on the health of prisoners.

The Prison Service asked Sir Donald Acheson to examine what effect, if any, the regime in the Special Secure Units at Belmarsh, Full Sutton and Whitemoor, might have on the health of prisoners held there and to report any findings to the Director of Security. Sir Donald presented his report in June 1996.

The report was commissioned internally and was not intended for publication. We have however provided copies on request and I attach a copy for your information.

The Prison Service has considered the report and taken careful note of its findings and recommendations (which are essentially based on what might result from a prolonged period of detention in an SSU rather than findings of present harm). We have made a number of amendments to procedures and will ensure that the general health of prisoners detained in SSUs is reviewed at regular intervals.

Crime Prevention (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures of crime prevention have been initiated by his Department in Lancashire since 1992. [16148]

Mr. Maclean: Apart from the benefit it has derived from the wide variety of national initiatives designed to promote crime prevention, Lancashire has received £464,000 in specific funding for closed circuit television systems.

Police Numbers (West Yorkshire)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of police officers per thousand people in each of the last two years in West Yorkshire. [16042]

Mr. Maclean: The information, based on police strengths as at 30 September and the latest population figure (June 1995), is as follows:

	Police officers per 1,000 of population
1995	2.43
1996	2.45

Prevention of Terrorism Legislation

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the report from Mr. J. J. Rowe QC on the operation in 1996 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [16841]

Mr. Howard: I have today arranged for copies of Mr. Rowe's report to be placed in the Library. Mr. Rowe recommends that the legislation should be renewed in its entirety for a further 12 months. This is also the Government's view and a draft order to give effect to this is being laid before the House today.

Data Protection

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has in respect of enforced subject access under the Data Protection Act 1984. [16853]

Mr. Sackville: The Government recognise the objections in principle to enforced subject access. However, this problem cannot be resolved through the Police Bill because the practice affects not only police records but many social security records and possibly others. Therefore, we intend to include a general solution in the legislation giving effect to the data protection directive. We will first consult employers' organisations and others likely to be affected.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the number of convictions for (a) violent crime, (b) car crime, (c) serious crime and (d) in total, in each year since 1979 for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [13202]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 January 1997]: The information is given in the table.

[1] Includes the indictable offence groups of violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery and the summary offences of common assault.

[2] Includes the indictable offences of theft from a vehicle, theft or unauthorised taking of a motor vehicle, aggravated vehicle taking and the summary offences of stealing and unauthorised taking of a conveyance and aggravated vehicle taking.

[3] Taken as all indictable offences.

[4] Taken as all indictable, summary non motoring and summary motoring offences.

[5] Includes allowance for known shortfalls in the data. It is not possible to produce estimates for the more detailed offence categories.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers on hunger strike at Her Majesty's prison, Rochester have been detained longer than two months. [15580]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 February 1997]: On 14 February 1997, the total number of detainees taking part in the protest at Rochester was six, of whom five have sought asylum at some stage. All have been detained for longer than two months.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hunger strikers at Her Majesty's prison, Rochester have alleged torture in their applications for asylum; and how many of these have had access to independent medical assessment of their allegations. [15581]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 13 February 1997]: Such information is not readily available but any such allegations would have been considered very carefully by both the Home Office and, if an appeal had been heard, by independent adjudicators. The Prison Service affords detainees at Rochester and their legal advisers the facilities to obtain independent medical assessments and advice.

Prison Service Annual Report

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the annual report of the Prison Service agency for 1995–96. [15507]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the publication date of the Annual Report of the Prison Service Agency 1995–96.

The preparation of the Annual Report is now in its final stages. Arrangements for printing and distributing will be made soon and I expect it to be published shortly.

Prison Service Capacity

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have taken place to the Prison Service agency's month by month forecast of planned (a) in-use certified normal accommodation and (b) operational capacity for 12 months ahead, as it existed in October 1996; and to what extent each such change has been due to (i) cancellations or delays of projects because of difficulties in obtaining planning consents and (ii) other reasons, indicating the reasons in each case. [15509]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question concerning what changes have taken place to the Prison Service Agency's month by month forecast of planned (a) in-use certified normal accommodation (b) operational capacity for 12 months ahead, as it existed in October 1996; and to what extent each such change has been due to (i) cancellations or delays of projects because of difficulties in obtaining planning consents and (ii) other reasons, indicating the reasons in each case.

The Prison Service building and refurbishment programme at existing prisons is running to plan and not being held up by planning delays. We are also looking for sites for temporary prisons to provide about 800 places as a short term measure.

Our preferred option was to use RAF Finningley, near Doncaster. A notice of the proposed development was lodged with Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council but the council has objected to the proposal. I am therefore looking at other possible options.

The Prison Service took possession of a floating prison, which is currently berthed in New York, on 31 January 1997. An application for planning consent was considered by Weymouth and Portland Borough Council on 6 February. The council rejected the application which has now been referred to the Secretary of State for the Environment and it is hoped that a decision will be reached by mid-March.

A proposed development for a former leisure facility at Heysham, was submitted on 20 December 1996 under Environment Circular Instruction 18/84, for a change of use to a prison. The planning application has yet to be determined.

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the outturn or planned (a) in-use certified normal accommodation and (b) operational capacity for the prison estate for each month from October 1996 to September 1997; and if he will list the establishments in which the main changes have occurred or are planned to occur over that period, with the number of places involved in each case. [15508]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question concerning the outturn and planned in-use certified normal accommodation (CNA) and operational capacity for the prison estate, indicating at which establishment main changes have or are expected to occur.

The monthly in-use CNA and operational capacity figures for the whole prison estate are listed in the attached table 1. The figures from October 1996 to January 1997 are recorded actuals with subsequent months being forecasted figures.

The reasons for the main changes to in-use CNA and operational capacity are detailed in the attached table 2.

Table 1: In use CNA and operation capacity for the prison estate

Prison Service Funding

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the overall target reduction in operating costs for the Prison Service agency per baseline certified normal accommodation place over the four years 1995–96 to 1999–2000 implicit in the November 1996 announcements on funding for the Prison Service (a) excluding extra funds for implementing the Woodcock report and for mandatory drug testing and (b) including such funds. [15510]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question asking about target reductions in cost per place.

The figures are in real terms, i.e. adjusted for inflation and are also adjusted to ensure like for like comparison over a period of years, by stripping out the funds transferred to the Prison Service previously held elsewhere (e.g. payments to local authorities under Section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act) and also by stripping out both the cost and the places associated with design, construct, manage and finance (DCMF) contract prisons (because payments to contractors include a capital element, and they are therefore not comparable with the current cost per place of public sector prisons).

On this basis, the reduction in real terms of cost per place, comparing provision for 1999–2000 and outturn for 1995–96, is 5.5% excluding new money to complete implementation of the Woodcock proposals. Including this money the comparison becomes 5.9%.

The figures for the period 1996–97 to 1999–2000 are the ones which we will now be using in our future plans. Comparing provision for 1999–2000 with provision for 1996–97, the reduction is 4.9% or excluding new money for Woodcock, 5.3%.

Absconding Prisoners

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the numbers of (a) absconds from open conditions and (b) temporary leave failures for the Prison Service for 1992–93, and for each subsequent year. [15512]

Miss Widdeombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what were the numbers of (a) absconds from open conditions and (b) temporary leave failures for the Prison Service for 1992–93, and for each subsequent year.

The information requested is attached.

Absconds from open conditions[1]

	Number
1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	1,432
1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994	1,403
1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995	1,192
1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996	947
1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997	886

[1] The above figures include absconds from establishments which have both an open and closed element.

Temporary release failures[1]

	Number
1 April 1992 to 31 March 1993	3,378
1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994	2,740
1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995	1,825
1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996	438
1 April 1996 to 31 January 1997	220

[1] The above are prisoners who failed to return and were reported to the police as unlawfully at large.

Prison Service (Early Retirement)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons are now expected to leave the Prison Service as a result of the voluntary early retirement and severance scheme. [15513]

Miss Widdecome [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Prison Service voluntary early retirement and severance scheme.

1090 members of staff have accepted offers of early retirement or severance. We are awaiting replies to offers that have been made to a further 57 staff.

Prisons (Staffing Levels)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the staff to inmate ratio for the Prison Service in 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985, 1990 and in each subsequent year. [15514]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Prison Service staff: prisoner ratios.

The ratios are as follows:

Year	Staff	Prisoner
1970	1	2.47
1975	1	2.02
1980	1	2.30
1985	1	2.02
1990'	1	1.40
1991	1	1.40
1992	1	1.31
1993	1	1.17
1994	1	1.24
1995	1	1.26
1996	1	1.33

' The fall reflects the change in prison officer working practices and the reduction in their hours worked.

Prison Officer Kettleborough (Injuries)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Prison Officer Kettleborough has applied to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board for compensation in respect of injuries during the Whitemoor escape. [15594]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 February 1997]: It is not the practice of either the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board or the new Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority to disclose details about individual applications.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the nature of the gunshot wound suffered by Prison Officer Kettleborough at the time of the Whitemoor escape; and for how long he remained in hospital. [15595]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 18 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the gun shot wound suffered by a prison officer during the escape from Whitemoor in September 1994.

The officer received a graze and severe bruising to his lower abdomen. He was treated at hospital, but not admitted.

Crime Clear-up Rates

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the crime clear-up rates for each police force in England in the most recent year for which figures are available. [16220]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The latest information relates to 1995 and is published in table 2.11 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1995" (Cm 3421), a copy of which is available in the Library.

Policing (London)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much an average band D council tax payer in London paid towards policing costs in 1996–97; and if he will estimate (a) the cost for 1997–98 and (b) the percentage change. [16218]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 February 1997]: For 1996–97, the receiver for the Metropolitan police district issued a precept of £49.84 per property in council tax band D for Metropolitan police purposes. The budget proposals for 1997–98, which the receiver has submitted to my right hon. and learned Friend for approval, would require a precept of £57.00 per property in council tax band D. This would be an increase of 14.4 per cent.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police constables there were in London in each division and area in each of the years from 1992 to 1997. [16219]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The information requested is given in the following two tables. Owing to restructuring in the Metropolitan police in 1994, when the number of areas was reduced from eight to five, valid comparisons of area police strength cannot be made between the two tables. Figures for January 1995 appear in both tables as some officers were still in the process of being transferred from the old to the new restructured areas.

The number of constables in the Metropolitan police will increase during 1997 as a result of the 3.4 per cent. funding increase for the Metropolitan police for 1997–98 over their 1996–97 allocation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Travel and Accommodation Expenses

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Lord President of the Council what were the total costs, in respect of hon. members' (i) travel and (ii) accommodation (a) between Parliament and home or constituency, (b) on approved visits to the European Parliament, (c) on Select Committee visits and (d) on visits associated with other parliamentary duties in each year since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [16255]

Mr. Newton: This information as provided by the Fees Office is set out in the table below. There is no specific provision for accommodation costs when travelling between Parliament and home or constituency. Costs of visits to the European Parliament are recorded in total, and are not differentiated as between travel and subsistence. Information in respect of Select Committees, parliamentary delegations, and other Committee costs, is a matter for the right hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed (Mr. Beith) on behalf of the House of Commons Commission.

Year	Cost of travel between Parliament, home, and constituency (a)	Cost of approved visits to European Parliament (b)	Visits associated with other parliamentary duties (d)

1996–97[1]	5,796,850	38,147	195,828

[1] Part-year—April to December inclusive.

Written Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Lord President of the Council, of the written parliamentary questions in the past 12 years for which the costs of answering have already been calculated, which were the 10 questions which cost most to answer; and which hon. Members asked those questions. [16250]

Mr. Newton: Records are not kept in a form which makes it practicable to provide the information requested.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many people are employed by his Department to provide advice on the application of equal opportunities; and at what cost in the last year for which figures are available. [14475]

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council Office has a staff of fewer than 40. None is exclusively devoted to personnel management duties, and no meaningful cost figure can be calculated for staff effort devoted to equal opportunities issues.

HEALTH

Private Beds

11. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of private beds currently available in national health trust hospitals. [14737]

Mr. Horam: This information has not been collected since 1991.

Projected Deficits (Cornwall)

12. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the projected deficits of the NHS in Cornwall in the coming financial year. [14738]

Mr. Malone: National health service bodies are currently developing their financial plans for 1997–98 and will submit these to the NHS executive in April.

Worcester District General Hospital

13. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of the private finance initiative scheme to build a new Worcester district general hospital. [14739]

Mr. Horam: Worcester Royal Infirmary NHS trust is currently negotiating with their preferred private sector partner prior to submitting the full business case for the proposed private finance initiative scheme.

New Hospitals

14. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new hospitals have opened in the last three years. [14740]

Mr. Horam: Twenty-five major hospital developments have been completed in the NHS during the last three years at a total cost of nearly £700 million.

New Hospitals and Hospital Extensions

15. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new hospitals or hospital extensions have been considered under the private finance initiative; for how many of these private finance has been forthcoming; and what is his estimate of the average delay caused for those hospitals considered under the private finance initiative but which subsequently go ahead on the basis of public funds alone. [14741]

Mr. Horam: Full business cases recommending the use of private finance have been submitted for the provision of 25 new hospitals or hospital extensions each with a capital value of more than £1 million. Fourteen of these private finance schemes have reached contract signature. None of these 25 new hospitals or hospital extensions has subsequently gone ahead on the basis of public funding alone.

Health Service Administrators

16. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in the number of administrators in the health service since the abolition of the regional health authorities. [14742]

Mr. Malone: This information will not be centrally available until later this year. The Government are determined to tackle unnecessary bureaucracy and to secure maximum improvements in health care. The simplification and streamlining of national health service management through the merger of district health authorities and family health services authorities, the abolition of regional health authorities, the reduction in the running costs of the Department of Health and the measures announced in October 1995 to reduce trust management costs and health authority running costs reflect the Government's determination to achieve this aim. In all these measures will release some £300 million for direct patient care.

Hospital and Community Services (Normanton)

17. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effects of the revised funding formulae for the Wakefield health authority on provision of hospital and community services in 1997–98 in the Normanton constituency. [14743]

Mr. Horam: Wakefield health authority, which includes the hon. Member's constituency, has a net increase in its allocation targets.

Cancelled Operations

18. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints he has received in the last 12 months about operations being cancelled within 24 hours of appointment. [14745]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally.

Social Respite for Carers

19. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to promote the provision of social respite for carers. [14746]

Mr. Burns: Informal carers make a key contribution to the aims of community care by enabling many people to be cared for in their own homes. Promoting effective support for carers is one of our major priorities.

Local authorities receive very substantial resources for community care provision. They are expected to provide an appropriate range of respite and other support services to meet local needs. They have a built-in incentive to do so: failure to support carers in this way would be likely to lead to greater demand for more costly long-term residential care placements.

Our commitment to promoting effective support for carers is underwritten by on-going monitoring and development work, in particular by the social services inspectorate. This has enabled us to provide authorities with informed, practical guidance on assessing and meeting the needs for local respite care services in the most effective way.

Health Service Managers

20. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many managers there were in the NHS (a) in 1989 and (b) at the latest available date. [14747]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Glasgow, Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy) on 3 December 1996, Official Report column 787. Information for 1996 will be centrally available later this year.

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee

21. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next plans to meet the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. [14748]

Mr. Horam: We have no plans to meet the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, but look forward to continuing to receive regular advice from it.

Electro-convulsive Therapy

22. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to modify the rules, regulations and guidelines concerning the use of electro-convulsive therapy in the treatment of persons suffering from mental illness. [14749]

Mr. Burns: There are no current proposals to make any changes to the rules or regulations concerning the use of electro-convulsive therapy. The question of guidelines on the use of ECT is a matter for professional clinicians who administer it. In 1995 the Royal College of Psychiatrists' special committee on ECT published a practical set of guidelines for psychiatrists who prescribe and administer ECT.

Public Appointments

23. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for how many appointments to boards, trusts and other guangos he is responsible. [14751]

Mr. Malone: The Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1996" lists health bodies to which appointments are made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Copies are available in the Library. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State also makes 138 appointments to boards of hospital special trustees.

Cancelled Operations

24. Mr. Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in the South and West region in the past 12 months have had their operations cancelled (a) on the day they were due to go into hospital and (b) after admission. [14752]

Mr. Horam: Information is available in the Library on operations cancelled for non-medical reasons on the day a patient is due to be admitted, or after admission, and who are not given a new date within one month of the cancellation.

Heart Attack Deaths

25. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made towards reaching the "Health of the Nation" target relating to deaths from heart attack. [14753]

Mr. Horam: Progress towards the "Health of the Nation" targets to reduce deaths from coronary heart disease is encouraging. The latest data show that between 1989–90–91 and 1993–94–95, death rates fell by 19.2 per cent. for people aged under 65 and by 12.5 per cent. for people aged 65 to 74.

Health Service Internal Market

26. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the cost of the internal market in the NHS. [14754]

Mr. Horam: The national health service internal market has greatly increased the responsiveness of the NHS, fostering innovation, responsiveness and efficiency. The introduction of the NHS internal market has consequently yielded a substantial net benefit both to patients and to taxpayers.

Prescribable Products

27. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received as a result of his consultation on products prescribable by general practitioners. [14755]

Mr. Malone: We have received about 200 representations in response to consultation on recommended changes to the list of products which general practitioners may not prescribe at national health service expense.

Dental Services

28. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with the British Dental Association concerning (a) the effectiveness of its oversight of the profession and (b) its protection of patients from extensive and unnecessary treatment. [14756]

Mr. Malone: None. These are matters for the General Dental Council.

NHS Staff Salaries

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department issues to NHS trusts about limits on staff salaries. [14736]

Mr. Dorrell: None.

NHS Supplies

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department takes to ensure that the contract price for a specific product or service quoted to an individual hospital trust is the same price as that tendered and successfully accepted for a national contract with NHS Supplies. [15699]

Mr. Horam: Individual national health service trusts make their own purchasing decisions and are responsible for ensuring that they achieve maximum value for money from their procurement. These decisions are not monitored centrally but are subject to audit scrutiny.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures NHS Supplies are required to follow before accepting a tender for contract; and on what grounds they may award a contract to an offer which is not the lowest tendered price. [15700]

Mr. Horam: The procedures followed by National Health Service Supplies staff are laid down in its standing orders and other supplementary guidance. It is also subject to all normal public procurement rules, as well as relevant European Community directives and World Trade Organisation agreements.

NHS supplies aim is to ensure that the NHS receives the best possible value for money from supplies contracts. NHS Supplies awards a contract to the lowest bidder unless this demonstrably offers inferior value for money when compared to other bids.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the cost savings generated by NHS Supplies. [15701]

Mr. Horam: Between October 1992 and April 1996 National Health Service Supplies achieved purchasing savings of some £264 million for the NHS.

Smoking and Conception Terminations

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his current estimate of the average numbers of people each week involved in (a) taking up smoking and (b) contributing to a conception that is terminated; and what were the equivalent figures in 1987. [15840]

Mr. Horam: No returns are made centrally which would provide the information required.

Junior Doctors

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what would be the additional cost of the payment of 100 per cent. rather than 50 per cent. of the basic salary for junior doctors by the regional postgraduate dean. [15906]

Mr. Malone: There would be no additional cost. Junior doctors' basic salaries are paid in full from national health service funds.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the additional cost would be of paying junior doctors on part-time contracts or in flexible training posts the standard hourly rate for the first 40 hours of work in the week, rather than the first 20 hours. [15909]

Mr. Malone: Given the diverse range of working patterns junior doctors on part-time contracts undertake, it is not possible to identify the additional cost that would be incurred by paying the standard hourly rate for additional hours worked.

Arachnoiditis

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to commission research into arachnoiditis; and if he will make a statement. [15979]

Mr. Horam: There are no plans to commission research into arachnoiditis centrally.

Prescription Drugs

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost to the NHS of abolishing charges currently made for prescription drugs used to treat (a) epilepsy and (b) long-term depression. [15791]

Mr. Malone: People suffering from epilepsy who require continuous anti-convulsive therapy are exempt from prescription charges.

On the basis of a charge for a prescription item of £5.50 and the number of prescription items dispensed in 1995 for preparations in the British National Formulary, issue 28, September 1994, therapeutic group 4.3.1–4.3.3, some of which may have been prescribed for conditions other than long-term depression, it is estimated that about £8 million in charges would be lost annually in England to the national health service.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many asylum seekers have been given assistance under the National Assistance Act 1948 or Children Act 1989 by local authorities in each month since October 1996; and how much money has been allocated to local authorities for each month since October 1996 for this assistance. [15805]

Mr. Burns: Information on numbers being supported is not collected centrally.

The 1996–97 special grants for unaccompanied children and families with children will be allocated and paid to individual local authorities by the end of March. A special grant for adults being supported under the National Assistance Act was laid before Parliament on 11 February.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioner fundholders there are in (a) the north-west and (b) England. [16192]

Mr. Malone: There are currently 1,857 general practitioner fundholders in the north-west region and 13,423 in England as a whole, with more preparing to join next year.

Dentures

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the entitlement of denturists and clinical dental technicians to practise legally in the United Kingdom in the direct supply of dentures to patients. [16021]

Mr. Malone: On 12 June last year, I announced in the House the Government's proposal to amend the Dentists Act 1984 following the General Dental Council's recommendation to set up new classes of dental auxiliaries and expand the range of work that they can do, including the legalisation of clinical dental technicians. As a first step it is intended to publish a consultation Bill on amendments to the Dentists Act.

Hospital Wards

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his forecast of when there will be more single-sex than mixed-sex wards; what cost is involved; and if he will make a statement. [15115]

Mr. Horam: Information on the number of single-sex and mixed-sex wards is not collected centrally. As announced last month, we are taking forward a programme of work to ensure that patients charter standards on this issue are fully met. As a first step, we have asked health authorities to agree challenging local targets with trusts for achieving charter objectives on privacy and dignity and to report back to the national health service executive by the end of February.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of research funded by the Government into Alzheimer's disease and on his plans for extending it. [15863]

Mr. Burns: The Government's commitment to the health and well-being of all mentally ill people is set out by the inclusion of mental health as one of five key areas in our Health of the Nation strategy. The Medical Research Council, the Department's policy research programme and the national health service research and development programme are all undertaking work into dementia, including Alzheimer's disease. For example, the policy research programme is contributing almost £1 million to the Medical Research Council's cognitive and aging study. Results of Government-funded research are made freely and widely available.

Bradford Hospitals Trust (Accidents to Patients)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many falls of elderly patients in the care of Bradford Hospitals Trust have been recorded. [16046]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Bradford Hospitals national health service trust.

NHS Funding (Yorkshire)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the allocation that Yorkshire health authorities would have received from the national health service under the previous funding formula; and what is the current allocation. [16041]

Mr. Horam: The national weighted capitation formula is used to provide a calculation of each health authority's fair share of available resources, known as its weighted capitation target. Changes in the calculated target inform the allocations process, they do not direct it. Changes in targets do not lead to immediate and corresponding changes in actual allocations.

The table shows the effect of the new formula on targets for health authorities in Yorkshire in 1997–98.

Health authority	Total formula changes 1997–98 £000s
Bradford	+2,043
Calderdale and Kirklees	+1,234
East Riding	+620
Leeds	+1,597
North Yorkshire	–2,970

Nurses

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses in England were aged (a) between 20 and 30, (b) between 31 and 40, (c) between 41 and 50, and (d) over 50 years in each year from 1987–88 to 1995–96. [12690]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The information is not available in the form requested. The ages of nurses employed by the national health service in England are shown in the table.

NHS Hospital community health services (HCHS) nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff (excluding agency and learners[1]) by age in England as at 30 September 1987 to 1995[2]

Notes:

[1] Learners are nurses on traditional nurse training courses and are directly employed by the NHS HCHS. Project 2000 training was introduced in 1989 and has gradually replaced traditional pre-registration nurse training. Project 2000 students are funded by bursaries, they are supernumary not employees and thus excluded from the count of NHS HCHS nursing staff. There were about 33,000 Project 2000 students in September 1995.

[2] Figures for 1995 are based on a new classification for non-medical staff known as "new occupation codes". These codes replaced the old "payscale" based classification used in earlier years. Figures for 1995 are, therefore, not directly comparable with earlier years.

Figures exclude General Medical Service practice nurses—numbering 9,970 in 1995.

Anaesthetics (Organophosphate Exposure)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the possible dangers arising out of the use of Suxamethonium and similar anaesthetics on patients who have been exposed to orgnaophosphates, with particular reference to (i) agricultural workers, (ii) pet owners and (iii) Gulf war veterans; and if he will make a statement. [14152]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 5 February 1997]: The Department of Health has not commissioned research into the use of Suxamethonium use in agricultural workers, pet owners or Gulf war veterans exposed to organophosphate pesticides.

The available research into the side-effects of Suxamethonium and related anaesthetics, as for all marketed medicines, was assessed at the time of granting the marketing authorisation and continues to be evaluated by the Medicines Control Agency whenever new information emerges.

Suxamethonium and related anaesthetics are contra-indicated for use in patients known to have low serum levels of pseudocholinesterase—the enzyme which breaks down this type of medicine. Most often low levels of pseudocholinesterase are due to an inherited structural abnormality of the enzyme but another cause of low pseudocholinesterase activity is acute organophosphorus insecticide poisoning. There is a specific warning in the product information, produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the licensing authority, which contra-indicates use in those patients who have poisoning with an organophosphorus insecticide.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Births

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what decision has been made about whether, in the event of Roisin McAliskey giving birth while in custody, she will be handcuffed to a birthing partner or prison officer while the child is being delivered; [15636]

(2) if the change in policy whereby a prisoner is not handcuffed or otherwise restrained during labour and birth of her child applies to category A prisoners. [15637]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answers 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 19 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the use of restraints during childbirth.

The Home Secretary in his statement of 18 January 1996 made it clear that no woman admitted to hospital to give birth would be restrained while in hospital.

This includes Roisin McAliskey and any other category A prisoners.

Criminal Record Checks

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in England and Wales, how many criminal record checks were carried out on behalf of (a) local authorities, (b) health bodies, (c) independent schools, (d) grant-maintained schools, (e) further education establishments, (f) voluntary organisations and (g) nursery groups by each police force in England and Wales under the child protection arrangements, pursuant to Home Office circular 47/93 for each year ended 31 March from 1993 to 1996; and in each case how many checks revealed a criminal conviction. [16584]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available centrally in the form requested. The total number of criminal record checks carried out on behalf of local authorities, statutory health bodies, independent schools, grant-maintained schools and further education establishments under the child protection arrangements outlined in Home Office circular 47/93 for the years ended 31 March 1993 to 31 March 1996, and the number of those checks which revealed a criminal conviction, was as follows:

Year	Total number of checks	Number revealing convictions[1]
1993	654,472	33,894
1994	609,434	38,162
1995	607,573	39,679
1996	613,163	38,809

[1] Not all forces were able to provide details of the number of checks which revealed convictions.

No figures are available on the number of criminal record checks carried out for voluntary organisations or on people working in nursery groups.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the frequency of checks on individuals under the child protection arrangements, pursuant to Home Office circular 47/93. [16585]

Mr. Maclean: Home Office circular 47/93 advises that in the case of agency staff employed by a local authority or health authority a check should be regarded as valid for three years. There is no recommendation that other staff should be rechecked at regular intervals.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of enhanced criminal record checks which will be undertaken in the year to 31 March 1999 under the arrangements to be established under the Police Bill [Lords]. [16587]

Mr. Maclean: It was originally estimated that, when the Criminal Records Agency became fully operational, it would issue around 1.3 million enhanced criminal record certificates each year. The Police Bill [Lords], as amended, provides for free checks for volunteers which we expect would increase demand for these certificates.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if payments are made by local education authorities and social services authorities to police forces for criminal record checks. [16590]

Mr. Maclean: No.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the unit costs to (i) police authorities and (ii) local authorities of each criminal record check made in respect of child protection, pursuant to Home Office circular 47/93. [16591]

Mr. Maclean: There are wide variations in the cost of criminal record checks across police forces. It is estimated that, on average, it costs a police force £6.35 to carry out a criminal record check. It is not possible to break the figures down in order to identify the costs of child protection checks, although these will be higher than the average. Information is not available on the costs incurred by local authorities.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are in place for checking employees and volunteers working with people under 19 years who are not eligible for checks under arrangements made pursuant to Home Office circulars 47/93 and 92/117; what categories of individual are not covered by the arrangements under these two circulars; and what is the estimated number of individuals in these categories. [16593]

Mr. Maclean: There are no formal arrangements for checking employees and volunteers working with people under 19 years of age who are not eligible for checks under the arrangements set out in Home Office circulars 47/93 and 42/94. Home Office circular 42/94 replaced 117/92 which has been cancelled. However, in 1993, the Home Office published a code of practice entitled "Safe from Harm" which offers voluntary organisations that work with children, but are not covered by the terms of the Home Office circulars, guidance on good policy and practice in areas such as recruitment, supervision and management of staff. Copies of "Safe from Harm" are in the Library.

The main categories of individual not covered by the arrangements set out in the two circulars are employees and volunteers working for voluntary or private child-care organisations.

It is not known exactly how many individuals are excluded from checking under the current arrangements but it is estimated that about 700,000 extra people would be eligible to apply for the enhanced criminal record certificates proposed in the Police Bill [Lords].

Road Running

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what liaison he has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Secretary of State for National Heritage since 5 December 1996 in respect of ensuring the continued success of road running; and if he will make a statement. [16234]

Mr. Maclean: None. The police's approach towards road running races and other events held on the public highway is an operational matter and one for chief officers of police and the Association of Chief Police Officers. I understand that, because of concerns about the safety of all road users, including race participants, and the inconvenience that can be caused to other road users, the association encourages organisations to undertake such events away from the highway.

Police (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police there were in Lancashire in (a) 1996 and (b) 1979; [16150]

(2) how much was spent by his Department on the police in Lancashire in (a) 1996 and (b) 1979. [16149]

Mr. Maclean: The information available is set out in the table:

Lancashire Constabulary	[1]1979–80	[2]1996–97
Police Numbers	3,089	3,203
Expenditure (£ million)[3]	37.289	163.563

[1] Police numbers as at 31 December 1979.
[2] Police numbers as at 30 September 1996.
[3] Expenditure includes police grant, revenue support grant and locally raised taxes.

Police (London)

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of police officers in London per 10,000 population, by borough using 1991 census data, as at 1 January in each of the last five years. [15968]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in the two following tables. Officers based at headquarters and at Heathrow have not been included.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of police officers as at 1 January in each of the last five years in each police division in London, sub-totalled (a) on an area and (b) on a borough basis and in total. [15967]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in two tables, which reflect the restructuring of the Metropolitan Police in 1994 when the number of areas was reduced from eight to five. Officers based at headquarters and at Heathrow have not been included. Copies of these tables have been placed in the Library.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last three years and for 1979 the total number of police officers in each Metropolitan police area; and if he will make a statement. [15227]

Mr. Maclean: The information is set out in the table:

	Numbers of Police Officers
Forces	May 1979	September 1994	September 1995	September 1996
Greater Manchester	6,440	6,949	7,026	6,961

West Midlands	6,031	6,981	7,078	7,203
West Yorkshire	4,739	5,039	5,122	5,154

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the total cost of public funds of the Metropolitan police in 1997–98; and if he will make a statement. [16950]

Mr. Howard: As police authority for the Metropolitan police district. I have approved estimates which provide for net revenue expenditure of £1,741.437 million in 1997–98.

The receiver for the Metropolitan police district is issuing, with my approval, a precept of £57.00 per property in band D of the council tax valuation band for Metropolitan police purposes.

I have discussed the estimates for the Metropolitan police expenditure in 1997–98 with representatives of the London local authority associations.

Devon and Cornwall Constabulary

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current authorised establishment of the Devon and Cornwall constabulary; and what was it in 1992. [16539]

Mr. Maclean: It is now for individual chief constables and police authorities to determine the number of officers in a force, having regard to the resources available to them. The Devon and Cornwall constabulary had 2,876 police officers in September 1996 compared to 2,898 in March 1992. The chief constable has estimated that the force will have 2,919 officers by the end of March 1997. Since 1992, the number of constables has increased from 2,197 to 2,248.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Written Questions

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many written questions were tabled by each hon. Member in the (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 parliamentary Sessions. [15395]

Mr. Newton: I have written to the hon. Member with the information requested and arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Strangers' Cafeteria

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what is his latest estimate of the cost of refurbishing the Strangers' Cafeteria, including the cost of relocating other facilities in order to make space for the new facilities. [16614]

Mr. Colin Shepherd: The current forecast of the final cost of modernising the former Members' and Strangers' Cafeterias, including the cost of relocating displaced facilities and building a new kitchen to service both the Terrace Cafeteria and the Members' Tea Room—in line with recommendations made by the Committee in its First Report of Session 1993–94, which was approved by the House on 12 July 1994—is £6.6 million. This figure is significantly less than the estimate agreed by the Committee in October 1994.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost to the teachers' superannuation scheme of early retirement on grounds of ill health over the last five years (a) in each local education authority and (b) per teacher in each local education authority. [16100]

Mrs. Gillan: The following table shows the total cost and cost per teacher from 1990–91 to 1995–96. The costs in each financial year are made up of the lump sum and annual pension paid in respect of new awards of ill health retirement only. The figures cover all members of the teachers' superannuation scheme.

[1] Not applicable.
[2] Costs based on less than five people are not shown.
[3] Staff who left teaching prior to the abolition of ILEA and have now retired, may still be recorded to ILEA as the last known LEA of employment.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the private employment agencies used by her Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for her Department, (c) the total cost to her Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16176]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment her

Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings her Department occupies; and if she will make a statement. [16314]

Mr. Robin Squire: The DfEE has, through its facilities management and purchasing organisation, arrangements for assessing the presence of both hazardous and ozone-depleting substances. Assessments are carried out in accordance with current regulations and where appropriate, the Department has taken the necessary action either to eliminate their use or minimise the effects of the substances.

Teachers (Devon Education Authority)

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers are currently employed by the Devon education authority and how many there were in 1992. [16538]

Mr. Forth: The numbers of teachers employed by Devon LEA are shown in the table. Staff in grant-maintained schools are excluded.

Full-time equivalent numbers of teachers in the LEA-maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special education sector.

Home Teaching

Mr. Peter Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) boys and (b) girls of statutory school age are being taught at home; and how many of these have been excluded from maintained schools for behavioural problems. [16434]

Mr. Forth: This information is not available centrally.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of her Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if she will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16565]

Mr. Robin Squire: No Ministers from the Department for Education and Employment have attended a meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee.

Skills Shortages

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the effect of skills shortages on small firms. [15060]

Mr. Paice: In 1994, only 8 per cent. of employers with fewer than 25 employees reported that they had a vacancy which was proving hard to fill. Some 75 per cent. of these employers reported that the vacancies were affecting their business. More recent surveys of larger employers suggest that there has not been any substantial rise in recruitment difficulties since 1994. A shortage of skills is only one of a number of factors which can lead to recruitment difficulties.

Teachers' Pension Fund

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the notional amount of money in the teachers' pension fund; and how much notional interest this generates per annum. [16130]

Mrs. Gillan: The notional balance of the teachers' superannuation account at 31 March 1994 was £26,666 million, and at 31 March 1995 was £28,440 million. The interest of notional investments credited to the account during this period was £2,023 million. More recent figures are not yet available.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what account is taken of revenue generated by the teachers' pension fund when calculating the fund's expenditure against yearly revenue. [16131]

Mrs. Gillan: The teachers' superannuation vote—class IX, vote 2—takes account of expenditure on teachers' pensions and income from employers' and employees' contributions. It does not take account of notional interest generated by the notional investments of the teacher's pension fund. This is recorded in the teachers' superannuation account, which is used by the Government actuary to carry out his quinquennial reviews of the teachers' superannuation scheme.

"Work and the Family"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many responses she has received to the consultation paper, "Work and the Family"; when she expects to publish results of the consultation exercise; and when she expects to announce Government proposals. [16207]

Mrs. Gillan: I have received 343 responses from a total of 305 organisations and individuals. I expect to be able to make a statement on the Government's proposed way forward in the spring.

Bradfield House School

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received relating to care arrangements for boys at Bradfield House school, Cullompton, Devon; and what action she has taken in response. [16348]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department has, over the last year, received representations from a number of sources, including Devon social services department, the police and local residents, over the adequacy of arrangements for the care and behaviour of pupils at Bradfield House school. The issues were taken up with the school, as a result of which an agreement was prepared between the school, Devon social services department and the police, for implementing measures to improve behaviour and care.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what recent assessment she has made of the effectiveness of Bradfield House school, Cullompton, Devon; [16332]

(2) when the Office for Standards in Education next intends to inspect Bradfield House school, Cullompton; and if the report will be made public; [16345]

(3) what measures are being taken to ensure Ofsted and social services reports into Bradfield house school, Cullompton, Devon are made available to those local authorities paying for boys at the school. [16346]

Mrs. Gillan: These are matters for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action was taken by her Department in response to the 1994 Ofsted report into Bradfield House school, Cullompton, Devon. [16349]

Mrs. Gillan: Following the Ofsted inspection in February 1994, the Department wrote to Bradfield House school requesting that attention be given to a number of serious weaknesses which had been identified. HM Inspectors have undertaken a number of follow-up visits to the school since then and discussions are continuing.

Teachers (Criminal Record Checks)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many teachers were subject to criminal record checks in the year to 31 March 1996 in England and Wales. [16586]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is not available centrally.

School Governors (Criminal Record Checks)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements she has put in place to check the criminal records of school governors. [16592]

Mrs. Gillan: School governors are not covered by the present arrangements for criminal record checks because they do not satisfy the criterion of having substantial unsupervised access to children on a regular basis. However, the new arrangements that the Government are proposing in the Police Bill [Lords] will enable criminal record checks to be made on governors and a range of other groups that are not covered at present.

TRANSPORT

Rail Services

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provision he is making for the cost of rail services secured by English passenger transport executives in 1997–98. [16949]

Mr. Watts: A special grant report has been laid before the House for the payment of metropolitan railways passenger services grant in 1997–98 to English passenger transport authorities. The main purpose of the MRPSG is to provide support, in 1997–98, to those PTAs for the local rail services secured by those PTAs' passenger transport executives under the terms of franchise agreements with franchise operators and the Director of Passenger Rail Franchising.

Road Traffic Reduction Measures

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he made of the relative merits of (a) traffic reduction and (b) congestion reduction measures prior to giving backing to some aspects of the Road Traffic (Reduction) Bill; and if he will make a statement. [16014]

Mr. Watts: We believe that any such assessment are for local highway authorities to make, taking local circumstances into account. In practice, strategies for addressing the problems consequent on traffic growth need to encompass a variety of measures to influence demand, improve traffic flow and improve accessibility. The relative balance will depend on specific local circumstances.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made to date by the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment in its examination of the relationship between traffic growth, transport investment and economic growth; when he expects to receive the report of that committee; and if he will make it his policy not to proceed with, or facilitate the progress of, legislation in this area until such time as that report has been received and studied by his Department. [16015]

Mr. Watts: The Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment started its examination of the relationship between traffic growth, transport investment and economic growth at the end of last year and is expected to report its findings at the end of 1998.

Meanwhile, the Government will continue to promote or support such transport legislation as they consider appropriate, taking account of the available evidence.

Driving Instruction

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated relating to the relative effectiveness of a learner driver learning to drive with a professional instructor or a member of the learner driver's family; [16333]

(2) if he will make a statement on the research his Department proposes to commission from Surrey university into teaching methods for learner drivers, indicating the (a) cost and (b) duration of contracts and the objectives of the research. [16344]

Mr. Bowis: We have commissioned the university of Surrey to compare the effects of formal and informal training of learner drivers. The contract was awarded in August 1995 and is due for completion by August 1998. The estimated cost is £269,000.

The objectives of the research are: (a) to compare the experience gained and instruction given in the course of (i) professional driving lessons and (ii) practice with friends and relations; (b) to monitor the progress of drivers engaged in learning to drive using each method in isolation and a mix of the two methods; (c) to identify differences in the level of skill, performance and situational awareness of the different groups and how this changes over time; and (d) to develop recommendations for driver training and practice.

Road Contracts

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the forecast Government expenditure for each of the next three decades for each of the design, build, finance and operate road contracts that have been let or are part of the current trunk roads programme; [15451]

(2) how much is to be paid to the contractor per vehicle or vehicle kilometre in shadow tolls for use of the road for each design, build, finance and operate contract let; [15452]

(3) what are his Department's forecasts for daily vehicle usage for each of the next three decades for each of the roads covered by a current or planned design, build, finance and operate contract. [15453]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 19 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about DBFO road contracts.

The estimated payments for individual contracts are commercially confidential. However the following figures illustrate by each of the three DBFO tranches, the forecast average annual figure of government expenditure over each of the next three decades:

£ million

Tranche	1997–98 to 2006–07	2007–08 to 2016–17	2017–18 to 2026–27
Tranche 1	99	127	94
Tranche 1A	78	102	120
Tranche 2[1]	126	201	205
Totals	303	430	419

[1] Include M6 Carlisle to Guardsmill and A40 West London Approach DBFOs.

Please note these figures which are in cash prices will vary according to the usage of the DBFO road and the performance of the DBFO Company. The figures do not include some additional but relatively minor future lump sum payments covering for example archaeological works. Because of their uncertain nature these are extremely difficult to estimate.

With regard to the other two questions, the amounts paid to the contractor per vehicle or vehicle kilometre and the Department's forecasts for daily vehicle usage over the next three decades, cannot be provided for commercial reasons.

Road Lighting

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria he uses to decide which lengths of motorway are lit. [16228]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 19 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking what criteria he uses to decide which lengths of motorway are lit.

The decision whether to light in a particular case is taken following consideration of a full appraisal of the proposed scheme. This includes an economic assessment of the capital, maintenance and energy costs set against the potential savings as a result of the reduction in night time personal injury accidents, calculated over the life of the lighting scheme. A full assessment of the environmental factors is taken into account.

London Transport Finance

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the total investment and planned investment by London Transport in (a) London Underground core business, (b) London Buses, (c) tendered bus division, (d) docklands light railway, (e) new lines and extensions, and (f) other matters in each year between 1978 and 1999–2000 in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1996–97 prices. [16026]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is set out in the tables[1]:

Air Traffic Control Centre (Swanwick)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role Ministers had in the decision to proceed with the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick; and what involvement they have had with the development since. [16336]

Mr. Bowis: The Secretary of State is accountable to Parliament for ensuring that the financial and other controls of the CAA conform to the requirements both of propriety and good financial management.

Capital investment by the CAA is approved and monitored within the framework set by the White Papers of 1967 (Cmnd 3437) and 1978 (Cmnd 7131). The Department is responsible for, inter alia, ensuring that investment appraisal methods used by the CAA are sound and applied consistently in practice.

The Department also becomes involved in the approval and scrutiny of specific projects, and exercises a general oversight of the authority's financial control and monitoring procedures.

This process has been applied to the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the Civil Aviation Authority's additional expenses from the delays in the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick becoming operational; and what contractual recourse the Civil Aviation Authority has to recoup these costs; [16340]

(2) what compensatory payments the Civil Aviation Authority will be seeking for the late operational completion of the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick and from which companies. [16342]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply of 24 June 1996, Official Report column 29, to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody).

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Civil Aviation Authority (a) originally expected and (b) now expects the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick to be operational. [16337]

Mr. Bowis: The original target date set for the centre to enter operation was the end of 1996. The CAA has announced that, in view of problems that have arisen in integrating the software sub-systems of the air traffic management system, the target date for operation is now March 1998.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what procedure was used by the Civil Aviation Authority in commissioning the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick; what checks were carried out on companies bidding for work under the project; and what advice the CAA took in relation to the drafting of the clauses in the contract for the new centre in relation to penalty payments for delays; [16338]

(2) if he will list the contractors involved in the construction of the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick and the parts of the project which each is responsible for. [16343]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chairman of the CAA to reply direct to the hon. Member on this matter.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what concerns officials from his Department have expressed to the Civil Aviation Authority about (a) delays and (b) additional costs in commissioning the new control centre at Swanwick; [16341]

(2) what discussions officials of his Department have had with the Civil Aviation Authority in relation to the final commissioning of the new air traffic control centre at Swanwick and the contractual arrangements governing the costs incurred by the CAA from delays in the facility becoming operational. [16339]

Mr. Bowis: Officials from the Department have discussed with the CAA the authority's plans to meet forecast capacity requirements despite the delay. They have likewise discussed the financial implications of the delay, bearing in mind that the additional costs required to complete the new en-route centre will be borne entirely by the project contractor.

TREASURY

Income Tax (Scotland)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individual income tax payers paid their tax via a Scottish Inland Revenue office in each of the last five years. [15931]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The information is not available.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Scottish-based income tax payers have their tax affairs handled by tax offices outside Scotland; and what is the location of the tax offices. [15930]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 February 1997]: The information is not available. In particular, taxpayer records of employees are grouped by reference to their employers. All the employees of a particular employer will be dealt with by the same tax office, which might be located anywhere in the UK. It is not immediately possible to distinguish those employees living in Scotland from those living in other parts of the UK.

Commercial Property Rents (Taxation)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to make it his policy to suspend the implementation of the proposed changes to the option to tax provisions in relation to the value added tax treatment of commercial property rents; what consultations he has had with developers and landlords of commercial property before the decision to implement those changes; what further plans he has to consult about the impact of those changes; and if he will make a statement. [15377]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 February 1997]: I made a statement on the range of possible Report stage amendments during the Standing Committee debate on 11 February. Anti-avoidance measures are not normally discussed before the Budget statement, although on this occasion some general discussions took place between customs and a property sector liaison group. There has since been a series of meetings with the major trade and professional bodies representing the industry.

Mr. Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning the decision to close the option to tax provisions in relation to the value added tax treatment of commercial property rents; and if he will make a statement. [15376]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 11 February 1997]: I have received a variety of different representations on clause 37 in the Finance Bill, and I made a statement on the range of possible Report stage amendments during the Standing Committee debate on 11 February.

European Union Finance

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the contributions of the United Kingdom to the general budget of the European Community from 1973 to 1996, at 1996 prices, under the headings agricultural and sugar levies, customs duties, gross VAT and GNP contributions, and (b) UK receipts under the headings of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, European regional development fund, European social fund refunds and/or abatements, (c) annual gross and net contributions and/or receipts together with other items and (d) annual percentage of receipts to contributions with, and without, refunds or rebates. [14327]

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received asserting conflicts of interest in respect of the previous service of the present chairman of the Personal Investment Authority as chief executive of Legal and General Group and in respect of the group's alleged role in mis-selling pensions; and if he will make a statement. [16432]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury has received one such representation recently.

Mr. Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress made by the Securities and Investments Board since 25 October 1994 in its inquiries into sales of personal pensions. [16437]

Mrs. Knight: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham) on 18 December 1996, Official Report, column 635.

British Agrochemicals Association

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had from British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of those representations; and if he will make a statement. [16288]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have received no representations from British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months.

Blind Person's Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) the annual cost and (b) the numbers gaining from the introduction of an additional personal tax allowance to the value of the blind person's allowance for severely disabled people who pay for personal care with the assistance of payments from their local authority or from the independent living fund. [16097]

Mr. Jack: Reliable information is not available.

Treasury Model

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Treasury model of the economy allows simulated falls in both unemployment and inflation. [15843]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury model could predict a positive relationship between inflation and unemployment in some circumstances. For example, a cut in indirect taxes or imported raw material prices would tend temporarily to reduce inflation and unemployment. The model is available to the public and a copy is held in the House of Commons Library.

Financial Services Act Licences

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) individuals and (b) firms have been licensed by each of the regulatory bodies created under the Financial Services Act 1986. [14786]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Details of the number of authorised firms by recognised body which are held on the Securities and Investments Board's central register are reproduced at page 68 of the SIB's annual report 1995–96 which is available in the Library.

General Government Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the range of proportions of the UK GGBR that Scotland has accounted for on the basis of all studies published by Government Departments adopting methodology published in "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1994–95". [16116]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Figures published in the 1996 edition of "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland" show that, excluding North sea taxes and privatisation proceeds, the Scottish deficit was about 18 per cent. of the UK deficit in 1994–95. The 1995 edition of GERS gave the equivalent percentage for 1993–94 at 15 per cent., which the 1996 edition subsequently revised upwards to 16 per cent. The 1992 edition of GERS did not contain an estimate of the Scottish deficit but, had it done so, on the figures available at the time, the equivalent ratio for 1990–91 would have been 51 per cent. The latest available estimate of the ratio in 1990–91 is 54 per cent.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which other EU countries are withdrawing from UNIDO. [16530]

Dr. Liam Fox: No other EU countries have yet announced their intention to withdraw.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British private sector consultancy contracts and how much revenue were received from UNIDO purchases and contracts, in the last year for which figures are available. [16534]

Dr. Fox: In 1996, UNIDO had 22 contracts with UK consultants. The value to the UK from purchases and contracts in that year was £5 million.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations were held with British staff of UNIDO about the decision to withdraw. [16533]

Dr. Fox: None.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has held with EU partners on his decision to withdraw from UNIDO. [16531]

Dr. Fox: No formal consultations took place, but EU partners had been aware for some time of UK concerns about UNIDO.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost of the United Kingdom's subscription to UNIDO, in the last year for which figures are available. [16535]

Dr. Fox: The UK contribution to UNIDO for calendar year 1996 was £4.69 million.

Micro-finance

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Overseas Development Agency's policy towards micro-finance. [16855]

Dr. Liam Fox: Micro-finance—savings as well as credit—can be a powerful tool able to benefit large numbers of poor people in a manner which is financially sustainable. Since 1990, we have provided increasing support for projects and institutions engaged in micro-finance, notably through our bilateral programmes in Africa and Asia. Total commitments to date are approximately $100 million and it is a field where we anticipate continuing to deploy significant resources. But experience shows that it is important to assist micro-finance institutions over time to achieve full financial self-sustainability.

In addition to direct support for micro-finance institutions, the Overseas Development Administration is involved in many other related areas. For example, we are active members of the World bank-based consultative group to assist the poorest; ODA chairs the working group on management information systems and reporting standards for micro-finance institutions. ODA is also the major source of funds for a study by the MicroFinance Network, an association of leading MFIs, on the critical subject of the regulation and supervision of MFI, looking at recent experiences in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

We are concerned to assess the impact of micro-finance. The results of a major research project on finance against poverty was published last year. Currently ODA is supporting a study, in collaboration with 10 leading UK non-governmental organisations, on the degree to which women are empowered through micro-finance.

Albania

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in respect of every United Kingdom overseas aid contribution to Albania since 1990 the date it was approved, the value of the aid, United Kingdom expenditure to date and a description of the nature and purpose of the aid project or programme. [16627]

Dr. Liam Fox: British overseas aid expenditure in Albania since 1991, the first year that the UK disbursed funds there, totals £5,001,619. The funds have been disbursed through the know-how fund and the ODA's emergency aid department. Since the know-how fund set up its programme for Albania it has focused on the following priority sectors: financial services; public administration and good government; agriculture; and health. The fund has also run projects in the media and education sectors.

Development assistance projects vary in size of funding from a few hundred pounds to several hundreds of pounds. There are therefore too many to list in full. The following are the projects on which the fund and the ODA have disbursed over £100,000:

Description	£
The Know How Fund
Farm-land restructuring (November 1992)	113,053
Advice on privatising the Rural Commercial Bank (December 1994)	173,167
Support in setting up the stock exchange and advice on setting up investment funds (November 1995)	191,043
Advice on local Government finance and budgeting (July 1993)	343,329
Attachment of British haematologist to Albanian National Blood Transfusion Service (March 1994)	123,230
Assistance to Albanian National Health Insurance Institute (September 1995)	178,108
Pre-Investment Feasibility Studies since January 1994	139,841
Emergency Aid Department
Feed The Children—Food, medical and educational supplies (September 1991)	580,000
Feed the Children—Emergency supplies Tropjoe District purchase of 10-ton vehicle (March 1994)	300,405
Feed the Children—Food, hygiene materials, clothing and purchase of 2 trucks, 1 Land Rover, bedding and cooking equipment (March 1995)380,227
WHO donation to joint WHO/UNICEF appeal—polio epidemic (October 1996)	100,000
British Red Cross—Purchase, shipment and distribution of wheat flour and miscellaneous relief goods (February 1992)	287,369

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Albania

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by type and funding the know-how fund projects in Albania since 1992. [16411]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The know-how fund set up its programme for Albania in 1993. Since then, it has focused on the following priority sectors: financial services; public administration and good government; agriculture; and health. The fund has also run projects in the media and education sectors.

Projects vary in size of funding from a few hundred pounds to several hundreds of pounds. There are therefore too many to list in full. The following are the projects on which the fund has disbursed over £100,000 since 1993:

Projects	£
Farm-land restructuring	113,053
Advice on privatising the Rural Commercial bank	173,167
Support in setting up the stock exchange and advice on setting up investment funds	191,043
Advice on local government finance and budgeting	343,329
Attachment of British haematologist to Albanian National Blood Transfusion Service	123,230
Assistance to Albanian National Health Insurance Institute	178,108
Pre-investment feasibility studies since January 1994	139,841

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the use of the diplomatic bag to convey party political propaganda to Tirana. [16403]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: None.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the individuals supported by the Westminster Foundation in Albania since 1992. [16409]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The Westminster Foundation, whose board is drawn from all political parties in the House of Commons, is independent of the Government in taking decisions on which projects it supports.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Albanian Government officials made Foreign and Commonwealth Office sponsored visits to the United Kingdom in (a) 1993, (b) 1994, (c) 1995, (d) 1996 and (e) 1997. [16402]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Visits sponsored by the Department to the UK by Albanian Government officials numbered, in financial years—1993–94, 11 (five visit programmes); 1994–95, 13 (three visit programmes); 1995–96, three (two visit programmes); 1996–97, one.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Albanian government in respect of their detention of (a) opposition leaders and (b) journalists. [16400]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have raised with the Albanian Deputy Foreign Minister our deep concern at reports of arrests and intimidation by the authorities in Tirana. We have also pressed in the European Union for EU ambassadors to express their concern collectively.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of (a) energy use and (b) waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16419]

Mr. Hanley: This Department continually strives to reduce the impact of its activities on the environment. We retain the services of consultants who advise on energy efficiency and environmental matters for the UK estate. For example, a recent line analysis of electrical demand in the main building has identified possibilities for additional savings on power consumption. Most recently, a report in the management of waste paper has been prepared which will be used to enhance the existing recycling system.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 19 November 1996, Official Report, columns 643–44, regarding the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through environmental auditing, if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated this within those buildings his Department (a) occupies in the United kingdom and (b) occupies abroad; and if he will make a statement. [16444]

Mr. Hanley: Both diplomatic and overseas development wings of the Department retain the services of consultants to advised on energy efficiency and environmental matters concerning buildings occupied in the United Kingdom. The introduction of energy efficient lighting, modern boiler controls and optimisers have all contributed to cutting energy usage and costs. When maintaining, building or refurbishing properties for occupation overseas, the Department encourages consideration of the issues promoted by the Building Research Establishment/environmental assessment method. The Department also provides guidance to all overseas posts to enable compliance with global environmental issues.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone depleting substances within those buildings which his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16279]

Mr. Hanley: Both wings of this Department maintain registers of hazardous materials—such as asbestos or polychlorinatedbiphenyls—in its buildings in UK and overseas. The chemical treatment programme for legionella is managed by specialists in the field.

We are careful not to endanger the further depletion of the ozone layer, through a responsible procurement and disposal policy at home and abroad. Improvements in insulation levels and building services design and installation are encouraged. New air-conditioning systems operate with non-chlorofluorocarbon refrigerants. Halon fire extinguishers have been withdrawn. Advisory leaflets on CFCs, halon and energy conservation have been issued.

Banaban People

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation of the Banaban population in Fiji; what compensation has been paid to the Banaban people by Her Majesty's Government since 1981; and what part Her Majesty's Government have played in the environmental rehabilitation of the island of Banaba. [14994]

Mr. Hanley: The Banaban community, based principally on the island of Rabi in Fiji, participate fully in Fiji's civil affairs. Its people retain links with their home island, where some still live, which is now part of the Republic of Kiribati. The Banabans enjoy special constitutional safeguards in both Fiji and Kiribati.

No payments have been made since the ex gratia 14.5 million Australian dollars compensation settlement by the British Phosphate Commission in 1981. Her Majesty's Government have played no part in Banaba's environmental rehabilitation since 1981, as this remains the responsibility of the Kiribati Government.

ENVIRONMENT

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to pages 24 and 29, volume 6 of the appropriation accounts 1995–96, class VII, vote 3—HC ii–VI, Session 1996–97—what factors underlay the reductions in expenditure on (a) environmental protection in industry, with particular reference to the reasons for underbidding in the programme for the promotion of positive environmental management and (b) OECD contribution towards the framework convention on climate change. [15660]

Mr. Gummer: The promotion of positive environmental management in industry programme was established in response to a recommendation from the Advisory Committee on Business and Environment. It supports intermediaries working to raise awareness of environmental issues among small and medium firms and helps them improve their environmental performance. The programme primarily supports six pilot local initiatives, and expenditure on these was as planned during 1995–96. A small proportion of the budget was set aside for work with other business support organisations, but fewer suitable projects were identified than originally envisaged, leading to expenditure lower than forecast.

The initial UK allocation for contributions to international climate change organisations was £725,000 for 1995–96. This included an allowance for the UK contribution to the administrative cost of the framework convention on climate change. Negotiations at the first conference of the parties in spring 1995 led to a reduction in the draft convention budget for 1996 and it was also decided that the cost of conference and subsidiary body meetings would be funded form the main UN budget. Hence, actual expenditure in 1995–96 was £224,000 lower than originally estimated.

Packaging Waste Regulations

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to issue the statutory guidance regarding the packaging waste regulations. [15574]

Mr. Gummer: The Advisory Committee on Packaging, chaired by Sir Peter Parker, is currently developing recommendations to the Environment Agency and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency on the preparation of statutory guidance on compliance with the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations, which are before the House. I understand that the advisory committee hopes to make public its recommendations in the very near future. The agencies will be responsible for issuing statutory guidance once the regulations have been made.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which 10 local councils in England have the highest budget deficits. [16158]

Sir Paul Beresford: All local authorities are required to set balanced budgets, taking into account the amount of financial reserves that they estimate they will use in the year to finance expenditure. The following authorities budgeted to draw down the highest amounts from reserves in 1996–97:

Budgeted use of reserves 1996–97

	£000s
City of London	41,343
Hampshire	35,375
Metropolitan Police Authority	26,519
Staffordshire	21,002
Berkshire	18,474
Cheshire	18,000
Birmingham	17,658
Kent	17,088
Hereford and Worcester	16,020
Hertfordshire	15,410

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the total amount of local authority debt and local authority unused capital receipts in (i) 1985, (ii) 1990 and (iii) the latest year for which figures are available. [16162]

Sir Paul Beresford: The amounts outstanding at 31 March each year were:

	Total debt £ billion	Usable capital receipts £ billion
1985	31.6	n/a
1990	41.2	2.4
1996	37.6	1.1

Source:
Debt: DOE borrowing and lending surveys and Public Works Loan Board.
Capital receipts: capital outturn returns.

The total debt figures include both long term and short-term borrowing; £4.5 billion of local authority debt, mainly amounts borrowed from the Public Works Loan Board, was commuted by the Government in 1992.

Figures for the amounts of set-aside capital receipts are not available. These form part of the provision for credit liabilities, which also includes amounts set aside from revenue. It is not possible to give figures for usable capital receipts for years before 1990, when a different capital finance system was in operation.

Business Improvement Districts

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his assessment of business improvement districts; what measures would be required to introduce similar initiatives in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [16211]

Sir Paul Beresford: The research is expected to be completed by late spring. We will consider the results of that research carefully in determining whether this approach could be applied in the UK context.

Glenn and John Howells

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will assist Kirklees metropolitan borough council in meeting the costs of providing secure accommodation for Glenn and John Howells. [16439]

Sir Paul Beresford: Local authorities are responsible for decisions on how to accommodate young persons remanded by the courts to local authority accommodation. Provision for these costs is included within the children's personal social services block of the standard spending assessment. This provision is not identified specifically.

Credit Liabilities

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority the amount set aside as provision for credit liabilities as at 31 March 1996. [16474]

Mr. Curry: A list of the provision for credit liabilities at 31 March 1996 for each English local authority has been placed in the Library of the House.

Planning Policy Guidance (Countryside)

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to publish the revised planning policy guidance note 7 on the countryside; and if he will make a statement. [16899]

Mr. Gummer: I am today publishing revised policy planning guidance note 7 on the countryside.

This new guidance note carries forward our commitment to a living countryside. It will help to ensure that the countryside is increasingly a place in which communities and businesses can thrive, while maintaining the unique qualities which make the English countryside such an attractive place in which to live and work.

The revised note fulfils key commitments in our rural White Paper by giving greater encouragement to business diversification in the countryside while ensuring that necessary development is of a good quality, complementing and respecting the character of the countryside around it.

The majority of the over 400 responses to the consultation draft welcomed the revised PPG7's comprehensive coverage of planning in the countryside and felt that it struck a fair and realistic balance between environmental protection and the need to stimulate rural economic activity. There was particular support for its coverage of sustainable development principles; its recognition of the interdependence between urban and rural policies; its acknowledgement of the value of rural strategies and its increased emphasis on good design.

The new guidance note restates and clarifies policy on protecting from development the best agricultural land as a national resource. This means that we will maintain a stock of the best agricultural land, with its versatility and efficiency for farming, while making it clear that a more flexible approach may be adopted where there is an overriding need for development and any alternative land has a recognised, high environmental value or there is little suitable land of lower agricultural quality available.

In addition, the guidance note clarifies policy on the reuse of rural buildings, allowing greater discrimination in favour of reuse for business rather than residential purposes; it stresses the importance of thoroughly checking the lawfulness of developments to be carried out under agricultural permitted development rights; advises on the possible removal of new buildings which abuse permitted development rights, without placing unnecessary additional burdens on genuine farmers; and advises local planning authorities on the scope for making planning permission conditional on the removal of unused ugly or derelict buildings in certain circumstances.

I am also pleased to announce today that Charles Nunneley, chairman of the National Trust, has agreed to chair a small working group on the possible introduction of a rural business use class. This proposal, also included in the Rural White Paper, is designed to encourage enterprise in rural areas by giving local planning authorities an additional control, where needed, over the intensification of new businesses. The working party will consider how best to achieve the implementation of this proposal, taking account of the various practical issues and difficulties identified during the recent consultation exercise.

Thames Barrage Scheme

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total cost of the Thames barrage scheme; and how much of this cost was met by central Government. [16446]

Mr. Boswell: I have been asked to reply.

The total cost of works under the Thames Barrier and Flood Protection Act 1972 was some £700 million, with the Thames barrier itself costing some £450 million and associated downstream works, including a second barrier at Barking, accounting for the remainder. Government grants made under the Act totalled approximatly £540 million.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Crystal Palace National Sports Centre

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps she plans to take to ensure the future of the Crystal Palace national sports centre as (a) a venue for national and international sporting events and (b) a training centre for British athletes. [15823]

Mr. Sproat: The future of facilities at Crystal Palace national sports centre is, in the first instance, a matter for the London borough of Bromley and the English Sports Council. An independent feasibility study is being undertaken on behalf of the London borough of Bromley and the English Sports Council as one stage in the process to determine the future needs and use of the national sports centre. The English Sports Council has given an assurance that no decisions about long-term investment in the future of the centre will be taken without prior consultation with the relevant sporting governing bodies.

Sports Council Chairmen

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the contract of (a) the chairman of the United Kingdom Sports Council and (b) the chairman of the English Sports Council, indicating their remuneration. [12638]

Mr. Sproat: Lord MacLaurin of Knebworth was appointed chairman-designate of the United Kingdom Sports Council from 1 April 1995. Lord MacLaurin's position as chairman of the United Kingdom Sports Council was formalised from the 19 September 1996 following the issue of letters patent under the great seal granting charters of incorporation to the new council. The appointment will expire in March 1998. Lord MacLaurin has chosen not to draw remuneration for this position.

Sir Rodney Walker was appointed chairman of the Great Britain Sports Council and chairman-designate of English Sports Council from 1 October 1994. Sir Rodney's position as chairman of the English Sports Council was formalised from the 19 September 1996 following the issue of letters patent under the great seal granting charters of incorporation to the new council. This appointment will expire in September 2001. Sir Rodney receives a non-pensionable remuneration of £21,692 per annum.

Television Broadcasting

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the cost of the engineering changes to UK transmitters of allowing the removal of power restrictions at the Clermont Carn transmitter in the Republic of Ireland in order to improve RTE coverage in Northern Ireland; and who will pay the costs of such changes. [15821]

Mr. Sproat: The Irish Minister for the Arts, Culture and the Gaeltacht has given an assurance that RTE has undertaken to bear the engineering costs of UK broadcasters directly attributable to the proposed alterations to the Clermont Carn transmitter. The BBC and Independent Television Commission, which are responsible for television transmission arrangements in the UK, have estimated that the engineering costs of changes to UK transmitters attributable to an increase in the power of transmission from the Clermont Carn transmitter could be in the region of £650,000.

"Success Through Partnership: A Strategy for Tourism"

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much it cost to (a) print and (b) reprint the document, "Success Through Partnership: A Strategy for Tourism". [16193]

Mr. Sproat: The cost of printing "Success through Partnership: A Strategy for Tourism" was £23,040. As originally planned, 1,000 copies were printed and delivered in advance for the launch of the document. A further 28,000 copies were delivered later for subsequent distribution to various organisations.

Public Libraries Review

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she will publish the public libraries review; and if she will make a statement. [17105]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have today published "Reading the Future", the Government's review of public libraries in England.

Public libraries are a great national asset. The Government are committed to ensuring that the public library system is equipped to face the challenges of the future, of which the single most important one will arise from the impact of information technology. Libraries are likely to be a key element in providing access to electronically stored information. Technology is changing so fast that plans for introducing new systems of technology need to be flexible enough to take account of both the changes and their cost and the need for libraries to play the fullest appropriate role in this revolution. The Government have therefore asked a working group set up by the Library and Information Commission to report by the end of July on how public libraries in England should respond effectively to this challenge.

The other main issues addressed by the review are:

- that the core book lending and reference services will remain free of charge;
- public libraries should match opening hours to the needs of their users;
- after 2001, the money that currently goes on millennium projects will go to a new Information and Communication Technology Fund, from which libraries should greatly benefit;
- a £3 million contribution over three years from the Wolfson Foundation to the £6 million challenge fund to improve facilities in English public libraries announced in my Department's budget statement;
- that libraries need to take further advantage of the opportunities offered by private sector partnerships, and a more commercially aware management style, including franchising, voluntary contracting-out of operations, and sponsorship;
- libraries will benefit from the new £300 million information and communication technology fund post-2000;
- to raise standards in public libraries, all English library authorities will be required to produce annually a Public Library Plan which will set out how libraries have performed compared with what they achieved the previous year, the standards they set themselves for the latest year, and the standards achieved by other libraries;
- libraries are the focal point at the heart of many communities and service providers should build on that, for example by being more responsive to what local users want; using local volunteers; offering homework facilities for children; and encouraging appreciation of literature among users through activities such as live readings by authors.

I have today placed copies of the review in the Libraries of both Houses and am arranging for copies to be sent to a wide range of interested parties. Further copies are available on request from my Department.

UK Sports Council

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she intends to announce the filling of vacancies on the UK Sports Council [17102]

Mr. Sproat: Further to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 4 February 1996, Official Report, columns 583–86, I am pleased to announce that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has appointed Mr. Adrian Moorhouse MBE and Mrs. Judy Simpson as members of the United Kingdom sports council. Mr. Moorhouse had a hugely successful swimming career, including an olympic gold medal in the 100 m breaststroke at the Seoul Olympics in 1988. He is now managing director of Lane 4 Management Group. Mrs. Simpson is a former Commonwealth champion in the heptathlon, and is now president of the Women's Sports Foundation. Both appointees are also members of the English Sports Council's national lottery sports panel. I am confident that the skills and experience which Mr. Moorhouse and Mrs. Simpson bring with them will make them a great asset to the new United Kingdom Sports Council.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Civil Service Magazine

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total annual cost of producing, printing and distributing "Overview-The Magazine for the Modern Civil Service"; and if he will make a statement. [16294]

Mr. Freeman: "Overview—The Magazine for the Modern Civil Service" is published by Public Sector Information, a privately owned company.

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15924]

Mr. Bates: The Office of Public Service does not enforce any statutory minimum age requirements.

Engagements

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Friday 31 January. [16335]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I had a number of meetings with ministerial colleagues and others.

Special Educational Needs Tribunals

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for what reasons Her Majesty's Government recommended to Parliament that presidents of special educational needs tribunals or members of a panel of persons appointed to act as chairs or members of such tribunals should be ineligible to become hon. Members. [16621]

Mr. Freeman: The president, chairmen and members of the special educational needs tribunal will be statutorily disqualified from membership of the House of Commons on the ground that these offices require demonstrable political impartiality. This will formalise the current position whereby members of the tribunal are disqualified from holding political office under the terms and conditions governing their appointment.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place in the Library a copy of Sir Peter Levene's letter to all Departments of 27 July 1995 regarding the appointment of consultants. [15842]

Mr. Freeman: The text of Sir Peter Levene's letter of that date, which is concerned primarily with the establishment of ministerial approval limits in the hire of external consultants, has been placed in the Library.

Bletchley Park

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how and when the Government and the Post Office obtained Bletchley Park; [15674]

(2) how much was paid, and to whom, from Bletchley Park. [15838]

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of its framework document to the Property Advisers to the civil Estate under its chief executive, Mr. Neil Borrett. The agency is therefore responding to these questions.

Letter from N. E. Borrett to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 17 February 1997:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to respond to your two Questions on Bletchley Park.

The freehold of the entire site was acquired by the predecessors of the Secretary of State for the Environment (Ministry of Works) assembling a number of parcels of land and buildings by means of nine separate conveyances between the years 1937 and 1964. A substantial portion of the site comprising 26 acres, was sold at privatisation to British Telecom, in 1984 for £2.3 million, leaving a residue of approximately 31.4 acres with the Secretary of State.

Unfortunately the records and deeds in our possession do not go back to the original conveyances. The property now comprises seven registered titles. However, there is mention in the deeds of Ernest Ingram being the vendor for two parcels, together with SS Holdings on a further parcel. The purchase price for the largest of these three areas amounted to £3,300 in 1952, whilst for the smaller one the consideration was £120 in 1949.

My understanding is that the land was originally acquired for the government's Code and Cipher school, which subsequently became part of GCHQ after the war.

Under the "Crichel Down" rules we are not required to offer the land back to former owners where the use has materially changed. Our view is that the use has materially changed and we do not intend to offer back.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Fraud

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list by individual benefit the total amount of money his Department estimates has been saved by detecting fraud in each of the last five years; [14578]

(2) what were the estimated total savings to public funds accruing from the detection of fraud in each of the last five years. [14581]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Year	Savings recorded by DSS £	Savings recorded by Local Authorities[1] £	Total £
1991–92	447m	n/a	447m
1992–93	558m	n/a	558m
1993–94	654m	92m	746m
1994–95	717m	171m	888m
1995–96	1.2bn[2]	224m	1.4bn

Notes:

[1] No central records are kept of any local authority savings achieved prior to April 1993.

[2] Includes savings from initiatives in the Security and Control Programme.

1. Figures have been rounded to the nearest £1 million when under £1 billion and to the nearest £100 million when over.

2. The information is given in terms of Weekly Benefit Savings deriving from activity in the given year, not public expenditure savings which could be accounted for in that year.

Child Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases there were in the most recent year for which figures are available in which benefits were reduced in respect of a parent with care on income support as a result of a pre-Child Support Agency child maintenance agreement. [15609]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available as maintenance which is in payment as a result of a pre-child support arrangement cannot be separately identified.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of severe disablement allowance there are who are aged under 19 years are in education for (a) less than 21 hours per week and (b) more than 21 hours where the extra hours are not suitable for a non-disabled person. [15867]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1996, Official Report, column 66, when information about extended payments of housing benefit will be available. [15872]

Mr. Roger Evans: The figures are currently being processed and will be published in the "Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit Summary Statistics—Update Number 2" in March. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what customer service standards are being discussed with the private sector companies shortlisted for the running of the Benefits Agency medical services. [16498]

Mr. Burt: The contract will specify the customer service standards expected of the service supplier. The successful contractor(s) will have a mandatory requirement to meet, as a minimum, the current agency/departmental service standards and any changes which occur to those standards during the life of the contract.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 75, if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance sent to the private companies shortlisted to run the Benefits Agency medical services. [16495]

Mr. Burt: The information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements he proposes to make for independent inspection of the quality standards to be operated by the private companies running the Benefits Agency medical services. [16499]

Mr. Burt: The post contract management arrangements set in place by the Department will allow for the involvement of a medical surveillance group which will comprise external experts and acknowledged specialists. The group will participate in monitoring the quality of the medical service provided.

In addition, the successful contractor(s) will have a mandatory contractual requirement to allow the National Audit Office appropriate access to it(s) records.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Computer Systems (Millennium)

21. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the awareness of business of the millennium compliance of computer systems. [15043]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Those organisations responding to PA Consulting's recent survey appear to have an increased level of awareness of the problem among their senior managers, now at 93 per cent., but only 65 per cent. have carried out a partial audit of their systems and the proportion having completed their audit is 9 per cent.

Firms (South-east)

22. Mr. Dunn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many firms are located in the south-east region. [15044]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The south-east—excluding London—had 238,618 VAT-based enterprises at the end of 1995 as compared with 239,763 at the end of 1994 and 239,838 for 1993.

Business Links (Norfolk)

23. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on business links in Norfolk. [15045]

Mr. Page: Business Link Norfolk and Waveney opened in November 1995 with a hub in Norwich and satellites in King's Lynn and Lowestoft and it has made significant progress in serving the local community. Since November 1995, the BL has handled nearly 20,000 inquiries and its personal business advisers are helping nearly 300 businesses.

Business Support (Rural Areas)

24. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement regarding business support in rural areas. [15046]

Mr. Page: Business support in both rural and urban areas is available through the network of business links in England and equivalent organisations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Telecommunication Services (Suppliers)

26. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the diversity of suppliers of telecommunication services. [15048]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government's policy of progressive liberalisation has led to substantial and growing level of competition in the provision of telecommunications infrastructure, and increased innovation in telecommunication services. As well as having a greater choice than ever before, consumers are also benefiting from better quality of service and lower prices.

Deregulation

27. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new initiatives he has in respect of deregulation. [15049]

Mr. Page: My Department is taking a number of new initiatives. For example, we have recently laid two deregulation orders, bringing the total to 10. Seven of these orders have already become law. We have a further six orders in the pipeline and will continue to bring other candidates forward when we can.

We are striving to remove unnecessary burdens on business through a review of business licences. Consultation is under way on proposals designed to reduce the number of classes of radiocommunication licence from 50 to around 35.

We have four consultation exercises under way on measures which will ease burdens on business. A further 10 such consultations are complete and the results are being considered.

When considering deregulation, it is vital to listen to business. Last year, therefore, I wrote to 130 major trade associations for their views on further measures DTI should take. Over 50 per cent. responded and we are now considering the responses in detail.

Social Chapter

28. Mr. Congdon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals there are for future legislation under the social chapter; and what assessment he has made of the impact which this legislation would have on businesses in the United Kingdom. [15050]

Mr. Page: Issues under discussion include rights for part-time and temporary workers, information and consultation in companies at national level and the reversal of the burden of proof in sex discrimination cases. The Commission is considering future action in other areas, including individual dismissals and sick pay. All these measures would be likely to impose damaging, job-destroying burdens on business if we gave up our opt-out from the social chapter.

Research and Development (Aerospace)

29. Mr. Clapham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received about Government assistance for research and development in the British aerospace industry. [15051]

Mr. Greg Knight: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, I and other ministerial colleagues have received representations in recent months in the form of meetings with the Society of British Aerospace Companies and individual aerospace companies, and letters from Members of Parliament and from aerospace companies.

Petrol Pricing

30. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he last discussed petrol pricing with the Office of Fair Trading; and if he will make a statement. [15053]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Neither I nor my current ministerial colleagues have discussed petrol pricing with the Director General of Fair Trading. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Energy set out the Government's position on petrol retailing to the Trade and Industry Select Committee last year.

Bilateral Trade

31. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the prospects for bilateral trade and capital investment between (a) the UK and the USA and (b) the UK and Australia; and if he will make a statement. [15054]

Mr. Lang: The prospects for bilateral trade and capital investment between the United Kingdom and both overseas markets are excellent. Exports of goods to the United States reached £19.8 billion in 1996 and to Australia £2.5 billion.

The bilateral investment position is very healthy. The United Kingdom and the United States are each the largest direct investor in the other. Australia is the United Kingdom's third largest destination for outward investment and Australia is one of the top five direct investors in the United Kingdom.

European Directives (Social Chapter)

32. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many European directives have been agreed under the social chapter to date. [15055]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Two directives have so far been adopted under the agreement on social policy.

Inward Investment

33. Mr. Spring: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on trends in foreign direct investment into the UK in the past decade. [15056]

Mr. Greg Knight: The stock of inward investment in the UK rose from £44.3 billion in 1985 to £144 billion in 1995—the latest year for which comparable figures are available.

This increase reflects the UK's continuing attractions as a business location, including competitive costs, a skilled and adaptable work force, low corporation tax and an established industrial infrastructure. That is why the UK is the market leader in Europe for investment from the US and Asia Pacific.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what value of inward investment has come to the United Kingdom in each of the past three years; from which principal countries; and if he will make a statement. [15276]

Mr. Knight: The value of flow figures for inward investment are only available on a consistent basis up to 1994. The top three sources for 1992–94 were as follows.

Year	Flows £ million
1992
United States	3,748
Germany	1,261
Netherlands	1,135
Total into United Kingdom	8,850
1993
United States	5,144
Netherlands	1,245
Australia	996
Total into United Kingdom	9,863
1994
United States	1,873
Netherlands	1,691
France	665
Total into United Kingdom	6,110

Trade Deficit

34. Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was (a) the deficit in trade in goods in 1995 and (b) the total deficit in trade in goods for those months of 1996 for which figures are available. [15057]

Mr. Lang: The deficit in trade in goods in 1995 was £11.6 billion. In the first 11 months of 1996, the deficit was £11.7 billion. Overall, the balance of payments current account is close to balance and at its strongest for a decade.

Post Office

35. Miss Hoey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the report on the future of the Post Office recently published by the Communications Workers Union. [15058]

Mr. Page: I understand that the Communications Workers Union report on the future of the Post Office was published only on 17 February and neither my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade nor I have yet had an opportunity to study it.

Business Links (Sheffield)

36. Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on business links in Sheffield. [15059]

Mr. Page: The business link is now in its second year of operation and, together with its partner organisations, continues to provide valuable support services to the business community in Sheffield.

It has dealt with over 6,000 inquiries since opening. Among its staff, it has three personal business advisers and three specialist counsellors advising on exports, design and finance.

Public Sector Research Establishments

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the Government's prior options review of public sector research establishments. [15047]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced the completion of the 1996 programme of prior options reviews on 29 January 1997. The results are designed to ensure that the bodies are managed as efficiently as possible while ensuring a sound scientific base for the future.

Departmental Policies (Bournemouth)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the effect of his Department's policies on the residents of Bournemouth since 1992, with special reference to the effects of changes in the resources provided in real terms. [14946]

Mr. Lang: Bournemouth has benefited from the increased competitiveness of British industry since 1992, which has been brought by maintaining a stable economy, with low burdens on business and a flexible labour market.

Since December 1992, unemployment in Bournemouth has fallen by 44 per cent.—around 8 per cent. more than the national average.

Business Links, Taunton

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment he has made of the financial reports of business links in Taunton, Somerset; and if he will make a statement; [14863]

(2) what action he is currently taking in respect of business links in Taunton, Somerset; and if he will make a statement. [14864]

Mr. Lang [holding answers 10 February 1997]: My officials monitor all 89 business links on a regular basis to ensure that public funds are used for the purposes for which they are intended. Where there are particular concerns, my officials will address them with the business link concerned.

There is currently an audit being undertaken at Business Link Somerset and officials are also discussing some monitoring issues with them.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Dover: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on gross domestic product per head in (a) the UK and (b) other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries. [11787]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 20 January 1997]: In 1995, gross domestic product per head in the UK grew by just over 2 per cent. in real terms, compared with just over 1 per cent. in the OECD as a whole.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of which sectors of the economy private employment agencies primarily operate in. [16473]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The labour force survey of spring 1996 shows that, of people who describe themselves as agency temps, nearly a third are in banking, finance or business services, a quarter are in manufacturing, over a tenth are in public administration, education and health.

Engineering Skills and Training

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the extent of mismatch in skills and training in the United Kingdom engineering sector; and if he will make a statement. [16115]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 17 February 1997]: My Department has drawn on a large number of studies to determine the strategic requirements of British business for engineering skills. It has also had first-hand input from senior representatives of business and industry who were members of the action for engineering steering group and task forces.

Action for engineering brought together, in an action-oriented forum, employers and training providers to better and meet the skill requirements of industry and commerce. The majority of projects implemented and developed for implementation under action for engineering will address skills shortages through action on the selection, education, training and development of professional engineers and technicians. Outputs from the initiative include: a joint venture company, Setnet, which provides a single point of contact for advice to teachers and industry on school-industry links and curriculum support; better co-ordination of efforts to encourage more of our most able young people to consider engineering as a career, the publication and dissemination of best practice guides on the recruitment and development of technicians and on making better use of engineers; the launch of a training challenge for engineering; and the establishment of a master of engineering in business degree aimed at improving the breadth of skills of engineers in, and destined for, the boardroom.

At the postgraduate level, the research councils are responsible for providing support to help to meet the country's needs, and they are in regular contact with industry and other research users on issues of quantity and quality of supply, in order to develop initiatives such as the engineering doctorate, the integrated graduate development scheme and the research masters. The foresight programme, run by the Office of Science and Technology, is providing further valuable information on skills needs in engineering and other disciplines.

University Research (Funding)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has in respect of funding for capital equipment for university research; and if he will make a statement. [15378]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 11 February 1997]: There is to be second round of the joint research equipment initiative involving the research councils, funding councils and the Department of Education for Northern Ireland. In last year's initiative, public funds of around £25 million were matched by funds from industry and other sponsors to yield a total sum for university equipment of £50 million, with 175 projects supported in over 50 institutions.

The details of the second round are currently being finalised, but the aim again is to provide some £50 million for equipment in 1997–98 with the help of industry and other sponsors.

Civil Aviation (Research)

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what projects are currently being funded from CARAD—the civil aviation research and technology programme. [15856]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 18 February 1997]: I regret that the information requested cannot be provided. Some of the projects are supported jointly with the Ministry of Defence and are classified. Release could cause harm in terms of the defence, security and commercial confidence exemptions in the code of practice on access to government information, and would inform competitors about detailed areas of research supported, to the potentially serious detriment of the national research effort. The other projects are carried out by companies whose permission would be required to breach commercial confidentiality. This could be obtained for all projects only at disproportionate cost and would take considerable time. Some projects have been the subject of press publicity. Copies of press releases issued by the Department have been placed in the Library of the House and I have arranged for a copy of the latest CARAD annual report to be placed there.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total expenditure under the CARAD programme in each of the past five years. [15853]

Mr. Knight [holding answer 18 February 1997]: Total expenditure under the CARAD programme in each of the five years financial years 1991–92 to 1995–96 is tabulated below.

£ million

	Financial year
	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Gross	25.6	26.4	23.2	23.9	24.7
Receipts[1]	–0.2	–0.1	–0.2	–0.5	–0.2
Nett	25.4	26.3	23.0	23.4	24.5

[1] Residual levies on pre-CARAD projects, and VAT recoveries.

Albania

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to prevent (a) British citizens, (b) British firms and (c) British-sponsored firms or consultancies from becoming involved in Albanian pyramid selling. [16412]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government cannot prevent people making unwise decisions in other countries. However, the Government have acted vigorously to inform people of the risks of money circulation schemes and to prevent such schemes gaining hold in the United Kingdom. In the past three years, we have successfully applied to the court to wind up over 20 companies where this appears justified in the public interest. We have supported the enactment of the Trading Schemes Act 1996 which brings money circulation schemes within the controls of the Fair Trading Act 1973. We have also made related regulations requiring basic good trading practice in the running of trading schemes.

Industry Acts Payments (Corby)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total amount paid under the Industry Acts and subsequent legislation to companies in the Corby area in each year since 1980. [15730]

Mr. Greg Knight: Records showing the total amount paid to companies in the Corby travel-to-work area under sections 7 and 8 of the Industrial Development Act (1982), by calender year, for the period 1983 to 1996 are as follows:

Year	(£000's)
1983	840
1984	3,037
1985	5,611
1986	2,925
1987	6,561
1988	5,262
1989	7,210
1990	10,404
1991	3,322
1992	1,339
1993	1,991
1994	2,964
1995	669
1996	1,047
Total	53,182

There are no computerised records for the years 1980 to 1982, and the information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Waste Recycling

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many aluminium can recycling sites there were in the United Kingdom at the latest available date; and how many were located at (a) supermarkets, (b) local authority aluminium can banks, (c) local authority drinks can banks and (d) other facilities. [16202]

Mr. Page [holding answer 18 February 1997]: In 1994, there were 4,800 aluminium can collection points in the UK. Reliable data relating to their precise location are not yet available.

Source: Aluminium Can Recycling Association.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the capacity in the United Kingdom for recycling (a) glass, (b) plastics, (c) steel cans, (d) aluminium cans, (e) paper and card, (f) batteries, (g) tyres, (h) vehicles and (i) electrical and electronic equipment, at the latest available date. [16199]

Mr. Page [holding answer 18 February 1997]: Estimated theoretical capacities for post-consumer materials recycling are as follows:

	Tonnes
(a)	900,000
(b)	>112,500
(c)	240,000
(d)	120,000
(e)	>4,000,000
(f)	>100,000
(g)	>200,000
(h)	>975,000
(i)	>400,000

Utilisation of these capacities depends upon a number of technical, logistical and commercial factors. Capacity also exists for recovering energy from some of these materials.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the tonnage of (a) glass, (b) plastics, (c) steel cans, (d) aluminium cans, (e) paper and card, (f) batteries, (g) tyres, (h) vehicles and (i) electrical and electronic equipment, recycled in the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [16200]

Mr. Page [holding answer 18 February 1997]: Tonnages of post-consumer products recycled in 1995 were:

	Tonnes
(a)	501,000
(b)	112,500
(c)	80,000
(d)	30,000
(e)	4,000,000
(f)	100,000
(g)	200,000
(h)	975,000
(i)	300,000[1]

[1] Estimate, for "white goods".

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the recycling rate for (a) glass, (b) plastics, (c) steel cans, (d) aluminium cans, (e) paper and card, (f) batteries, (g) tyres, (h) vehicles and (i) electrical and electronic equipment, in the United Kingdom at the latest available date. [16201]

Mr. Page [holding answer 18 February 1997]: Recycling rates in 1995 for post-consumer waste products were:

	Per cent.
(a)	26.5
(b)	5.5
(c)	16.0
(d)	28.0
(e)	35.0
(f)	(car batteries) 90.0
(g)	51.0
(h)	75.0
(i)	(white goods) 75.0

Waste Disposal at Sea

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what are his Department's current proposals for disposal at sea of (a) bulky radioactive wastes and (b) redundant oil or gas installations; [15652]

(2) what is his Department's role in respect of the disposal of redundant oil and gas installations at sea; and if he will list the current proposals for such disposal under consideration by his Department. [15654]

Mr. Page: Any proposals for the removal and disposal of disused offshore oil and gas installations are subject to the approval of the Secretary of State under the terms of the Petroleum Act 1987. Proposals involving disposal at sea also require approval under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 and my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in English and Welsh waters or from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland in Scottish waters. My Department has no proposals for sea disposal under consideration at the present time.

Questions relating to the disposal of radioactive wastes are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for the Environment, and the Secretary of States for Scotland and for Wales.

Telecommunications

Sir Michael Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the World Trade Organisation talks on telecommunications; and if he will make a statement. [17104]

Mr. Lang: I very much welcome this major success, both for the World Trade Organisation as a promoter of free trade worldwide, and for the United Kingdom, particularly for telecommunications operators, manufacturers and users. The United Kingdom was an active participant in the talks, chairing them throughout the nearly three years they took to complete. My hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology attended earlier EU Telecoms Ministers Council Meetings and the final stages of the discussions last week.

This agreement, which covers 69 countries and over 91 per cent. of the £400 billion world market for telecommunications will create an enormous boost for operators in the United Kingdom, the most open and competitive market for telecommunications in the world, by offering them access to a large number of markets worldwide, and reinforcing the United Kingdom's position as a global telecommunications hub. It will also give added impetus to the spread of liberalisation, which the United Kingdom has pioneered since the early 1980s, within a guaranteed framework of multilateral, enforceable rules. The expected boost to investment, as more countries open their markets to competition, means new orders for equipment and, equally important, software and systems management from which our manufacturers are well placed to benefit. Some estimates point to an additional £20 billion increase in UK telecoms revenues by 2010.

To British consumers, it will mean cheaper telephone charges, as competition in other markets has the same effect as it has had here in bringing charges closer to cost, and British operators pass these on to consumers here. I expect this to bring us closer to the day when ringing New York will cost little more than ringing another town in Britain. This also holds major benefits for the British economy as a whole. World-wide, industry and consumers spend more on telecommunications than on oil products. Low telecommunications charges have already made the United Kingdom an attractive location for people to do business and invest—even lower charges will reinforce this.

Exports (Manufactured Goods)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on trends since the end of the third quarter of 1996 in respect of United Kingdom exports of manufactured goods, with particular reference to (a) electronic equipment, (b) motor parts and components and (c) machine tools. [15178]

Mr. Greg Knight: Information on trade with other EU countries to October 1996 is published by HM Customs and Excise in business monitor MM20A. Information on trade with non-EU members to November 1996 is published in business monitor MM20. There is insufficient data since the end of Q3 1996 to assess trends.

Export Credits Guarantee Department (Debt)

Ms Short: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the debt currently owed to the Export Credits Guarantee Department, indicating (a) arrears and current maturities that have rescheduled, (b) arrears and current maturities that have not been rescheduled and (c) future maturities that have not yet fallen due for payment. [16206]

Mr. Nelson: At the close of ECGD's last financial year on 31 March 1996 the debt currently owed to the Department amounted to £6,721.3 million. Rescheduled amounts totalled £4,819.1 million and unrescheduled amounts £1,902.2 million.

Total future maturities which have not yet fallen due for payment amounted to £17,720.3 million.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Sector Pension Schemes

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the Northern Ireland public sector pension schemes with their (a) current membership, (b) last annual income from employer and employee contributions, (c) annual expenditure in payments of benefit and (d) administration costs. [14839]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is listed:

Pension scheme	Current membership	Last annual employer (£000s)[1]	Income from employee (£000s)[1]	Annual payments in benefits (£000s) per annum[1]	Administration costs (£000s) per annum[1]

Civil Service

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the staffing and overtime costs of the recent special redundancy and early retirement exercise in the Northern Ireland civil service; how many civil servants of which grade and from which department were given payments; what was the average gratuity and pension awarded; and how many posts were declared redundant. [15726]

Sir John Wheeler: Not all of the releases planned under the 1996–97 redundancy and early retirement schemes have yet been processed; therefore the information given relates only to the period 1 April 1996 to 31 January 1997. The number of releases by department and grade are shown in the table.

Most of the administration costs of the exercise have been subsumed within the normal running costs. The staffing costs therefore relate only to those additional costs which it has been possible to ascertain at other than disproportionate cost.

The average gratuity includes scheme lump sum, enhanced lump sum, compensation lump sum and commuted lump sum while the average pension is the average annual amount to be paid until the various officers reach the normal retiring age.

	Cost/figures
Staff costs	£85,000.00
Overtime costs	£39,039.00
Number of redundancy/early retirement cases processed	311
Average gratuity	£50,362.55
Average pension payment (annual amount)	£2,131.26
Number of posts declared redundant (anticipated in period 1 April 1996 to 31 March 1997)	557

Agri-environment Schemes

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funding his Department has allocated in the current year for the operation of agri-environment schemes; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the schemes. [15210]

Mr. Ancram: Total funding for the operation of agri-environment schemes in Northern Ireland is £5.96 million. Of this, £5,092 million is allocated for payment to farmers, £100,000 for monitoring and evaluation costs and £768,000 in respect of operational costs.

The agri-environment schemes are subject to periodic review. Approval has recently been received from the EC to certain minor changes on payment rates and other provisions of the environmentally sensitive area schemes which resulted from a review in 1996. The changes will be introduced shortly. A fundamental review will be carried out in 1998. The organic aid scheme is presently under review.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to produce a rural White Paper for Northern Ireland. [17106]

Mr. Moss: There are no plans at present to produce a rural White Paper for Northern Ireland. Apart from the range of Government policies covering Northern Ireland as a whole, rural areas are specifically addressed by some 16 existing and policy statements. In addition, there is a series of financial programmes targeted at the economic and social revitalisation of the most disadvantaged rural areas in Northern Ireland through community projects and partnerships with local people. A recently published report commissioned by the Department of Agriculture highlighted the considerable success of the rural development programme since its launch in 1991 and it continues to serve as an effective instrument in tackling the needs of rural areas in Northern Ireland.

Existing Government policies and programmes for rural areas of Northern Ireland therefore compare very favourably with those in other parts of the UK. My Department will continue to keep abreast of policy developments affecting rural areas on the mainland and, where appropriate, will consider their adoption in Northern Ireland.

Department of Health and Social Security Services (Maladministration)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement regarding the DHSS arrangements for considering financial redress where maladministration has occurred. [17107]

Mr. Moss: The Department of Health and Social Services is committed to making its services more responsive to the needs of its customers, operating financial redress where appropriate. Since 1977, the Department has operated arrangements whereby financial redress can be made to a customer who has suffered a financial loss through maladministration. These arrangements mirror those operated by the Department of Social Security. While the arrangements have been updated periodically since then, a major review, covering the whole of the United Kingdom, has recently been completed. The review, which took account of the principles contained in the Office of Public Service and Treasury guidance and concerns raised by the GB Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and the parliamentary ombudsman for Northern Ireland, has resulted in the production of a revised set of arrangements.

The revised arrangements provide the basis for a consistent approach to complaints across agencies and offer a more sympathetic attitude to cases where official error has occurred, but no financial loss has been experienced. They also ensure more equitable treatment in the consideration of compensation payments when moneys due are unnecessarily delayed. In line with the remainder of the United Kingdom, the revised arrangements are effective from 1 January 1997. A copy of "Financial Redress for Maladministration",—DHSS(NI), which provides detailed guidance will be placed in the Library.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what targets have been set for the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency during 1997–98. [17108]

Mr. Moss: For 1997–98, the following targets have been set:

	Target
Vehicle test appointments	21 days average waiting time
Driving test appointments	38 days average waiting time
Productivity (vehicle testing)	18.5 units per man per day
Productivity (driver testing)	7.98 units per man per day
Faulty inspections	Faulty inspections not to exceed 0.01 per cent. of tests conducted
Level of complaints about booking arrangements	Less than 0.20 per cent. of applications received
Level of complaints about the conduct of tests	Less than 0.20 per cent. of applications received
Level of customer satisfaction with booking arrangements	At least 85 per cent. plus or minus 2 per cent. within the range of sampling error
Level of customer satisfaction with test procedures	At least 92 per cent. plus or minus 2 per cent. within the range of sampling error
Number of compensation payments for cancelled tests	Less than 0.2 per cent. of applications received

WALES

Mentally Ill People

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of cases of abuse of mentally ill people in community care in Wales which (a) are currently under investigation and (b) have been reported in each of the last five years; of those investigated, how many and what percentage have resulted in (i) prosecution and (ii) conviction; and if he will make a statement. [12951]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 27 January 1997]: The Welsh Office has made no such estimate.

Hospital Beds

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each year since 1979 the numbers of (a) registered beds and (b) occupied beds in (i) registered private hospitals or clinics, (ii) registered private nursing homes and (iii) all registered establishments in Wales, showing separately those which were for (1) acute specialties, (2) mental illness, (3) people with learning difficulties, (4) people with physical disabilities, (5) maternity and (6) other purposes. [14545]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information on registered beds is given in the following table. Information on occupied beds is not collected centrally and no information on bed numbers is available before 1982.

Beef Export Ban

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) farmers' incomes and (b) the economy of Wales of the European ban on UK beef exports. [15479]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Total income from farming in Wales is estimated to have fallen by 4.4 per cent. in 1996. This is due to a range of factors, including BSE. Output from the cattle sector in Wales is estimated to have fallen by just under 23 per cent. in 1996. However, this reduction in output is largely offset by compensation and support measures put in place by the Government. The Department is co-sponsoring an independent study to provide a comprehensive assessment of the economic impact of BSE.

Electoral Register

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total number of electors for each of the new parliamentary constituencies in Wales for the 1997–98 register of electors effective from 16 February. [16214]

Mr. Hague: The Office for National Statistics is preparing a monitor detailing numbers of electors on the 1997 electoral register for each of the new parliamentary constituencies. This will be published by early April 1997 and a copy will be placed in the Library on the day of publication.

The numbers of electors on the 1996 electoral register for the new parliamentary constituencies in the United Kingdom were published in July 1996 by ONS in Monitor EL 96/2, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mink Fur Farms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many mink fur farms there are in Wales by county. [16410]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There are no mink fur farms in Wales.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended, indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16578]

Mr. Hague: Nil.

Agri-environment Schemes

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funding his Department has allocated in the current year for the operation of agri-environment schemes; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the schemes. [15208]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Current provision for 1996–97 is £3.32 million. I anticipate that running and monitoring costs for 1996–97 will be £1.98 million and £0.85 million respectively.

SCOTLAND

NHS Salaries and Wages

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list NHS salaries and wages costs for (a) general and senior manager, (b) nurses and midwives and (c) administrative and clerical staff for the financial years (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1995–96. [14575]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The annual accounts of the health boards and NHS trusts do not detail separately salaries and wages for general and senior managers. This information is included in the costs of administrative and clerical staff as detailed in the table.

£ thousand

	1994–95	1995–96
Nurses and midwives	949,697	939,844
Administrative and clerical staff	251,328	265,516

The salaries and wages of student nurses are included in the figure 1994–95 but not 1995–96 as a result of the introduction of Project 2000.

Basking Sharks

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of (a) the depletion rate of basking sharks over the past five years and (b) the size of the current population around the coastline and islands; and if he will make a statement. [14667]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 12 February 1997]: No estimates are currently available due in part to the basking shark's erratic and highly variable appearances off Scotland's coasts. Scottish Natural Heritage has examined the feasibility of monitoring the distribution and movement of this species and is considering the best way of taking forward research.

LAW Mining

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the actions taken by the Lanarkshire mining company, LAW Mining, in respect of petitioners against its planning applications to develop opencast mining; and if he will make a statement. [15977]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received no representations about the reported action by LAW mining in respect of petitioners against its planning application. Clearly, it can sometimes be useful for a planning authority in preparing for decision making to take into account the views of applicants, objectors or consultees on representations made by other parties. However, should any party take it upon itself to make an inquiry about any such representation it should, of course, be undertaken in a lawful manner.

Scottish Prison Service

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the properties owned by the Scottish Prison Service in (a) Clydesdale, (b) Lanarkshire and (c) Scotland; and if he will list the total valuations in each category; [15902]

(2) if it is Government policy to sell off Scottish Prison Service property to the highest bidder; what account is taken of the willingness of the sitting tenants to buy; and if he will make a statement; [15899]

(3) what discount is allowed to Scottish prison officers living in tied accommodation when buying their homes; [15903]

(4) what consultation there was with sitting tenants, renting property owned by the Scottish Prison Service, concerning the sell-off of houses and garages. [15900]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the questions relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked the chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Jimmy Hood, dated 19 February 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your questions about properties owned by the Scottish Prison Service (SPS) and various associated matters relating to disposal procedures.

You asked for information abut properties owned by the SPS in specific parts of Scotland, and for the country as a whole. This information is set out in the table attached. The valuation figures have been provided by the relevant District Valuers.

You also asked about the policy in relation to selling property to the highest bidder. Government policy is that assets, not required for operational purposes, should be disposed of at the best price possible, with due regard to any special factors, such as the discount sales scheme which operates in relation to staff quarters. The extent of discounts allowed was the subject of one of your further questions. The discount scheme enjoyed by prison officers is equivalent to that operated by local authorities under the "Right to Buy" legislation. Prison officers do not have a statutory right to buy, but, unless there are any limitations on security grounds relating to the sale of the property, officers may purchase quarters at discounts which range from 32 per cent. to 60 per cent. for a house, and 44 per cent. for a flat, depending upon length of tenure.

You also asked about what consultation there was with sitting tenants, renting property owned by the SPS, concerning the sell-off of houses and garages. When the discounted sales scheme was introduced in 1981, all SPS staff in rented quarters were advised of the conditions under which they were eligible to purchase, and the level of discounts they would receive. The terms of the discount scheme had been agreed with the relevant trade unions. Since then, staff who have continued to occupy SPS quarters have been reminded from time to time of the opportunity to purchase. Quarters are disposed of only to willing tenants who submit an application to purchase.

As regards garages, where these are occupied by SPS staff who are also renting or have purchased an SPS quarter, tenancies would continue until such time as the tenant either wished to purchase, gave up the garage voluntarily or left the Service. In certain cases, where there has been no interest by SPS staff in renting garages, and no internal or external interest in purchase, vacant garages have been rented to private tenants. In these circumstances, if the siting tenant later wished to purchase, the sale would normally take place at a price determined by the District Valuer. Given the small sums of money involved, it has not been the practice to seek then to advertise the property in an attempt to obtain a higher price. If an outside party expressed an interest in purchasing a garage in private tenancy then, in fairness to the sitting tenant, he/she would be offered first refusal, either at the District Valuer's sale price, or at the amount offered by the other party, whichever was the higher.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what training is available to staff within the Scottish Prison Service's estates department in public relations and how to communicate with the general public, and if he will make a statement; [15904]

(2) how many managers are employed within the Scottish Prison Service's estates department; and what are their grades and salaries; [15905]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the questions relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked the chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Jimmy Hood, dated 19 February 1997:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your questions about Scottish Prison Service (SPS) Estate Department staff.

You asked about the numbers, grades (expressed in terms of pay bands) and salaries of managers employed with the SPS's Estate Department. The information, relating to the Estates Directorate within the SPS's Headquarters in Edinburgh, is as follows:—

Head of Estates Directorate

1 x Band H @ £40k

Branch Heads

1 x Band H @ £35k

2 x Band G @ £30k

There are no specific courses in "public relations and how to communicate with the general public". Normally mangers and their staff receive training in building, professional and construction matters, and also in administration-related topics, reflecting the range of duties they carry out. Contact with the public in such areas is minimal. It is however my view that all public servants where they do come into contact with the public, should deal with them in a polite, courteous and professional manner. Where a development need is identified, training can be provided.

Electoral Register

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of electors for each of the new parliamentary constituencies in Scotland for the 1997–98 register of electors effective from 16 February. [16209]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not yet available centrally.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16183]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The Scottish Office and its agencies make minimal use of private employment agencies to provide staff with particular skills at short notice. Statistics are not held centrally either on the numbers employed through private employment agencies or on the median costs.

The following tables do, however, give the figures for total expenditure in each of the last three years, along with an estimate of the average length of contract.

Royal Yacht

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the costs incurred by (a) Locate in Scotland and (b) Scottish Financial Enterprise in the promotional use of the royal yacht in the past seven years. [15626]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The total cost to Locate in Scotland of using the royal yacht for promotional purposes during the past seven years was £23,596.

Scottish Financial Enterprise is a private sector organisation and questions relating to the costs incurred by it in connection with its use of the royal yacht are a matter for it.

Homeless People

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State of Scotland how many homeless people there were in each Scottish constituency in each year between 1992 and 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15892]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The available information relates to local authorities and not to parliamentary constituencies.

Mink Fur Farms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mink fur farms there are in Scotland by county. [16408]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: There are no mink fur farms in operation in Scotland.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment his Department had made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16310]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Department recognises that it has an important part to play in using products which do not contain either hazardous materials or ozone-depleting substances and has had green housekeeping strategies in place since 1992. Within the Scottish Office, core estate goods that contain chlorofluorocarbons in any application are not purchased and the use of ozone-depleting substances has been phased out. The Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988 are fully implemented in the procurement, storage, use, and disposal of chemically based products.

Agri-environment Schemes

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total budget for (a) environmentally sensitive areas and (b) the Scottish countryside premium scheme, over each of the next three years. [15213]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The overall planned provision for the Scottish agri-environment programme is £9.235 million for 1997–98, £13.468 million for 1998–99 and £15.7 million for 1999–2000. This excludes running costs for the schemes, since this information is not collected separately.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding his Department has allocated in the current year for the operation of agri-environment schemes; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the schemes. [15211]

Mr. Robertson: The overall financial provision for the Scottish agri-environment programme for 1996–97 is £9.248 million. This includes monitoring costs for environmentally sensitive areas but excludes running costs for the schemes, since this information is not collected separately.

All aspects of the operation of the schemes are kept under review. Following completion of a programme of biennial reviews, substantial increases in payment rates and ceilings for environmentally sensitive areas were implemented last year. In addition, the new countryside premium scheme, which we plan to launch in the spring, will provide a comprehensive menu of conservation options previously only available to farmers and crofters in environmentally sensitive areas.

Pesca Funding

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the disbursement of Pesca funding to local authorities in Scotland in respect of approved projects; when these funds were received from the EU authorities; when he proposes to distribute the money; if he will list the projects and authorities concerned, indicating the amounts of Pesca funding due; and what are the reasons for delays in that distribution. [15792]

Mr. Kynoch: The Pesca community initiative operates on a UK basis and the Scottish Office receives its share of funds from the European Commission via the Department for Education and Employment, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Trade and Industry respectively. The first instalments of all funds were received by November 1996.

Pesca is delivered in eligible areas in Scotland through local Pesca groups—LPGs. The Scottish Office has approved a business plan for each LPG detailing the budget and criteria for selecting individual projects at local level. Each LPG has begun to implement its business plan and approve projects. Detailed lists of projects will be provided in annual reports from the LPGs for collation by the Scottish Office and transmission to the European Commission in June 1997.

The table lists the LPGs, each group's allocation and the lead organisation and telephone number.

The need to establish administrative arrangements which achieved the greatest delegation of responsibility to local areas while ensuring proper accountability delayed the operation of Pesca in Scotland. It is to the credit of all concerned that we now have an acceptable balance. The Scottish sub-programmes are now operating ahead of most of the rest of the UK. By the end of this financial year, the Scottish Office will have disbursed all due Pesca funds.

Consultants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much has been spent on consultants' reports over the past five years. [16494]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Expenditure over the past five years by the Scottish Office and its associated agencies on external consultants including management consultants has been:

1991–92: £10,836,000

1992–93: £4,370,000

1993–94: £5,383,000

1994–95: £4,079,000

1995–96: £5,440,000

HEALTH

Lariam

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, with dates, the changes made between 1990 and 1997 in the product data sheet issued to patients with the drug Lariam, describing use and possible side-effects; and what were the reasons for the changes. [15193]

Mr. Malone: The changes that have been made to the product information for Lariam—mefloquine—between 1990 and 1997 have been placed in the Library. The reasons for the changes are that new evidence has become available to the marketing authorisation holder and to the Medicines Control Agency. The sources of the information include suspected adverse reactions received through spontaneous adverse reaction reporting schemes and clinical studies on efficacy or safety of the product.

Copies of data sheets that have been included in the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry data sheet compendium between 1990 and 1996, along with the current data sheet and the patient information leaflets for the same period, have been placed in the Library.

NHS Trusts (Lease Cars)

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of NHS trust chairmen and non-executive directors with lease cars on 31 December (a) 1995 and (b) 1996. [16242]

Mr. Malone: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the different arrangements applying to (a) Crown and (b) lease cars provided to members of boards of NHS trusts. [16236]

Mr. Malone: Under the terms of section 24 of the general Whitley council handbook, national health service employers may offer Crown cars to employees where they deem it to be in the interests of the service. The Whitley council scheme does not apply to chairmen and non-executive directors. They may be provided with lease cars when this represents value for money when compared with other methods of funding their travel on NHS business. However, they must make a personal contribution for any private use equivalent to the full amount of the taxable benefit.

NHS Medical Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement on 11 February, Official Report, column 156, concerning the size of the current Red Book contract for the delivery of NHS general medical services, what opportunities will be offered by his proposed amendment to the National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill [Lords] which are not possible under a current Red Book contract. [16023]

Mr. Malone: The National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill will permit those who work in the NHS to shape services to reflect local needs and circumstances rather than work solely to the national terms of service.

Hospitals (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many capital spending projects are (a) under way and (b) planned at hospitals in Lancashire. [16144]

Mr. Horam: As at 31 December 1996, there were 10 schemes under way in the North West region. A further 10 projects are planned. Details for Lancashire are not available separately.

Abortion

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will embody the British Medical Association guidelines on conscientious objection to abortion in a departmental circular to GPs. [16095]

Mr. Horam: In 1991 the general medical services council of the British Medical Association issued guidance to general practitioners through local medical committees, reminding them of their objections under their terms of service. The guidance remains extant, and GPs who have a conscientious objection to abortion should refer the patient to another doctor as soon as possible.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will direct regional health executives not to employ criteria for NHS abortions which are not provided for in the Abortion Act 1967. [16096]

Mr. Horam: The Abortion Act 1967 as amended sets out the grounds on which abortion may lawfully be carried out. The criteria health authorities use when deciding on the level of abortion services are not covered by the Act.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement of the Abortion Law Reform Association report on "NHS Abortion Services". [16161]

Mr. Horam: The Abortion Law Reform Association report has indicted that where the conditions of the Abortion Act 1967 as amended are met there is an overall national improvement in access to abortion services.

Any specific service issues are a matter for local health authorities and should be brought up with them in the first instance.

Dentists

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists worked in the NHS in the north-west of England (a) at the latest available date and (b) in 1979. [16169]

Mr. Malone: The table shows the number of general dental service dentists at 30 September 1979 and 1995 in north-west England.

General Dental Service: number of dentists by family health services authority at 30 September north-west England

1. The figures represent the number of dentists (principals) on the family health services authority list and their assistants and vocational trainees.
2. Some dentists have contracts with more than one family health services authority. These dentists have been counted only once.
3. Excludes salaried, hospital, and community dentists.

Hospitals (North-west)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients were treated in hospitals in the north-west in (a) 1995 and (b) 1979; [16147]

(2) how many patients were treated at hospitals in the north-west in 1979. [16159]

Mr. Horam: Information on the number of patients treated is not collected centrally. In-patient activity is recorded in terms of finished consultant episodes. The latest year for which information is available is 1995–96, and the information is contained in "Ordinary and day case admissions: England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Prior to 1988–89, data were collected on a different basis. Information for 1979 is not available in the form requested for the North-west region.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the number employed by the agencies in work for this Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16184]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is shown in the table.

Figures are not available to provide the median cost paid to each agency and the average length of contracts, but agency staff are used only to cover short-term absences.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) Ministers and (b) officials have attended indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16575]

Mr. Horam: No Ministers or officials from the Department of Health have attended a meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee.

National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what organisations have proposed amendments to the National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill [Lords] to his Department. [15814]

Mr. Malone: The Department has held discussions with a number of organisations, including representatives of primary care professionals, about the provisions of the National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill, including discussions about how the Bill might be amended in ways to meet their particular concerns. However, amendments may be proposed only through hon. Members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had with (a) unions representing medical workers, (b) NHS trusts, (c) medical insurance companies and (d) the British Medical Association regarding the National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill [Lords]. [15815]

Mr. Malone: The Bill follows wide consultations with all those with an interest in primary care, including national health service trusts, general practitioners, dentists, nurses and other health professionals and their representatives. The range and variety of consultation is outlined in the annex to "Primary Care: The Future", published on 10 June 1996, copies of which are available in the Library.

Discussions about the Bill and its proposals between officials and representatives of the professions are continuing. Officials have had a preliminary meeting with a representative of the Medical Defence Union, at its request, to discuss the arrangements for indemnity under the proposals.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the status of the family doctor service within the NHS; [15828]

(2) what plans he has to propose amendments to the National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill [Lords]. [15816]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the opening statement on Second Reading of the National Health Service (Primary Care) Bill on 11 February, Official Report, at columns 146–158.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of research funded by the Government into multiple sclerosis and on his plans for extending it. [15865]

Mr. Malone: The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. In addition to work specifically on multiple sclerosis, the MRC also undertakes work under the broader headings of auto-immune disorders, diseases of the central nervous system, and neurodegenerative diseases, all of which underpin research into MS. Results of Government-funded research are made freely and widely available.

Cancer Research

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress of cancer research funded by the Government and on his plans for extending it. [15866]

Mr. Malone: The Government's commitment to prevention of ill health caused by cancer is set out in "The Health of the Nation". The national health service research and development programme's research and development priorities in cancer is an example of the Government's commitment to encourage research into the causes, prevention, early detection and treatment of all cancers. In 1995–96, the Government spent some £25 million on research into cancer. Results of Government-funded research are made freely and widely available.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many CJD cases designated (a) definite and (b) probable by his Department in the years 1988 to 1995 fell in the age range of (i) 0 to 20, (ii) 21 to 30, (iii) 31 to 40, (iv) 41 to 50, (v) 51 to 60, (vi) 61 to 70 and (vii) over 70 years at the time of death. [16128]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is given in the table.

Diprosone

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the reasons for the proposed inclusion of Diprosone on the list of drugs to be excluded from prescription. [16132]

Mr. Malone: A decision on whether to include Diprosone on the list of drugs to be excluded from prescription by general practitioners has been deferred pending the receipt of further advice from the advisory committee on national health service drugs.

Travel Vaccines

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reviews the Government are currently conducting in relation to travel vaccines; when the results of this review are expected to be published; what body is carrying out the review; and what representations have been received about the review. [16331]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health, as part of a continuing internal review of the current arrangements for travel vaccines, is seeking to resolve the anomalies which exist at present. We shall consult interested bodies once we have proposals to present.

General Practitioners (Computers)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide figures comparable to those in his answer of 2 April 1996, Official Report, columns 175–76, for the reimbursement of the costs of the computerisation in general practice and the numbers of fundholding and non-fundholding practices and general practitioners in 1995–96; if the figures given for the reimbursement of the costs of computerisation include the expenditure on computers to support general practitioner fundholding reported in table 13 of his Departmental report published in March 1996; and if he will make a statement. [16628]

Mr. Malone: The total amount directly reimbursed to general practitioners from public funds towards the costs of computerisation in the financial year 1995–96 was £64 million[1]. Information on the apportionment of these costs between fundholders and other GPs is not available centrally.

The figures previously provided to the hon. Member on 2 April, Official Report, columns 175—76, include reimbursements for the costs of computers to support GP fundholding as shown in table 13 of the departmental report published in March 1996.

The related figures for the number of fundholding and non-fundholding practices and general practitioners for 1995–96 are as follows[2]:

England—April 1995

	Total	Fundholding	Non-fundholding
Unrestricted principals	26,647	10,456	16,191
Practices	9,063	2,613	6,450

Criminal Record Checks

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the procedures are for criminal record checks through the voluntary organisations consultancy service pursuant to arrangements made under Home Office circular 47/93; and which organisation or categories of organisation are eligible for such checks. [16588]

Mr. Burns: The procedures for criminal record checks through the voluntary organisations consultancy service are set out in Home Office circular 42/94, copies of which are available in the Library. Checks are available to all major national voluntary child care providers.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many checks were made under the arrangements for criminal record checks through the voluntary organisations consultancy service, pursuant to arrangements made under Home Office circular 117/92. [16589]

Mr. Burns: The current arrangements for criminal record checks through the voluntary organisations consultancy service are set out in Home Office circular 42/94. In the year 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996, 8,857 checks were carried out for the VOCS by police forces in England and Wales.

Meningitis

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the current research projects into meningitis (a) to which his Department has provided funds and (b) which other Government agencies have funded; and what proposals he has to increase the level and range of such research projects. [15372]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 11 February 1997]: The Department of Health supports a number of research projects into meningitis through both the policy research programme and the National Health Service Executive. The PRP commissioned a two-year clinical trial of candidate meningococcal vaccines in 1993 at a total cost of £198,528. More research is needed before their suitability for widespread use can be considered. The Department is currently working with the Public Health Laboratory Service, the National Institute for Biological Standards and Control and the Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research to take this work forward. We also collaborate internationally in this area, for example the UK and Dutch health departments are working together to accelerate the development of group B meningococcal vaccines.

Since 1993, the NHS Executive has supported a number of meningitis-related research projects worth £220,000. This includes a current study: neurodevelopmental examination at nine years of age of children who suffered neonatal meningitis. This is funded through North Thames regional office at a cost of £80,000.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The MRC received its grant in aid from the Office of Science and Technology, which is part of the Department of Trade and Industry. Current projects receiving support from the MRC are listed as follows:

MRC-supported meningitis research

Indirect Support

Project grants

1. Dr. D. J. Maskell, Department of Biochemistry, Imperial College of Science, Technology and Medicine, London—The molecular genetics of lipid A-KDO biosynthesis by Haemophilus influenzae and Neisseria meningitidis.
2. Professor J. E. Heckels, Department of Molecular Microbiology, University of Southampton—Antigens from meningococcal outer membrane proteins as vaccine candidates.
3. Dr. D. Ala'Aldeen, Dr. I. Todd and Professor S. P. Boriello, Department of Microbiology, University of Nottingham—Identification of T-cell epitopes involved in protective immunity to meningococcal infection.
4. Professor J. R. Saunders, Department of Genetics and Microbiology, University of Liverpool—Pilin variation and glycosylation in modulating pilus mediated adherence of Neisseria meningitidis to human cells.
5. Dr. H. Palmer, Institute of Infections and Immunity, University of Nottingham—Development of a pig model for meningococcal meningitis.

Strategic project grant

Professor S. P. Boriello, Department of Microbiology, University of Nottingham—Clinical research Initiative in bacterial infections: determinants of tissue damage is bacterial infections.

Programme grant

Professor E. R. Moxon, Molecular Infectious Diseases Group, John Radcliffe Hospital, Oxford—Molecular basis of Haemophilus influenza pathogenicity.

Infrastructure grant

Professor P. S. Watt and Professor S. T. Holgate—Mucosal Immunology—A Protein engineering laboratory for studies on vaccine design and asthma research.

Direct support

MRC Laboratories, The Gambia—An efficacy study of the Haemophilus influenzae Type b (Hib) polysaccaride-protein conjugate vaccine, PRP-T in The Gambia.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Franchising Advisory Group

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 January, Official Report, column 11, on the Franchising Advisory Committee, what were the dates of the two occasions on which the committee met; which organisations were represented at the meetings; when the members of the committee were advised of the decision to discontinue the committee; and what are the more effective mechanisms for communications and consultation which have been developed by the Legal Aid Board. [15494]

Mr. Streeter: The Franchising Advisory Committee met on 11 February 1994 and 14 October 1994. The organisations represented were: the Advice Services Alliance, Legal Aid Practitioners' Group, the Law Society and the National Consumer Council. The committee was informed in January 1997 of the board's decision to disband it.

Since October 1994, the board has held regular meetings of franchise liaison user groups. To date, 156 meetings have been held at various locations throughout England and Wales. At national level the board has met with the Advice Services Alliance on 13 occasions, the Legal Aid Practitioners' Group on five occasions and the Law Society on 12 occasions at which franchise issues have been raised. Those meetings are to continue.

Queen's Counsel (Selection)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what costs were incurred by the Lord Chancellor's Department in conducting the procedure for selecting Queen's Counsel for 1996. [15482]

Mr. Streeter: The departmental expenditure apportionable to the procedure for selecting Queen's Counsel in 1996 is estimated to be £81,202.

Chancel Repairs

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the Government's estimate of the cost of compensating the Church of England for abolishing the chancel repairing liability. [15683]

Mr. Streeter: No such estimate has been prepared because the Law Commission report on this subject made no recommendation for compensation, a position which the Church of England and the Church in Wales are content to adopt.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the arrangements for those carrying out property searches to discover whether a particular property is affected by liability for chancel repairs. [15681]

Mr. Streeter: Searches may be carried out in the tithe records now held at the Public Records Office.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what discussions his Department has had with the Church of England in the last year regarding liability for chancel repairs. [15685]

Mr. Streeter: There has been one exchange of letters between my Department and the general secretary of the General Synod of the Church of England.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many representations the Government have received in the last year on the Law Commission report No. 152, "Property Law: Liability for Chancel Repairs". [15684]

Mr. Streeter: Apart from discussions within Government, my Department has corresponded with three bodies and two individual Members of Parliament.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in respect of chancel repairing liabilities on properties, how many (a) properties and (b) hectares are affected; how many parishes benefit; if he will list those parishes; and by how much the Church of England benefited in each of the last 10 years. [15680]

Mr. Streeter: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tithes

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what date tithes were abolished; and what has been the total paid in compensation by the Government to the Church of England. [15682]

Mr. Streeter: The Tithe Act 1836 made provision for the conversion of existing tithes into tithe rent charges. Those were converted into tithe redemption annuities by the Tithe Act 1936, and ceased to be payable in 1977. Figures on compensation are not held centrally.

Bradfield House School, Devon

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many boys from Bradfield house school, Cullompton, Devon appeared before the Cullompton juvenile court; and what percentage of total cases this constituted in 1996. [16347]

Mr. Streeter: I have been informed by the court that, out of 52 appearances before the Cullompton Youth Court in 1996, Bradfield house school was given as the defendant's address in 15 cases. That represents 29 per cent. of all appearances. In some instances, a defendant may have appeared on more than one occasion.

Legal Aid

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if he will list the (a) 20 solicitors firms and (b) barristers who have received the largest sums of money from the legal aid scheme for each year for which information is available. [8700]

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, which firms of solicitors received more than £500,000 from the legal aid fund in 1995–96; how much they each received; and what sum they have received in 1996–97. [12309]

Mr. Streeter [holding answer 29 January 1997]: It has not proved possible to provide all the information in the form requested. I have therefore written to the hon. Members and placed a copy of the letters in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agriculture Council

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 17 February; and if he will make a statement. [16858]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State, Scottish Office, represented the United Kingdom at the Agriculture Council in Brussels on 17 February.

The main business of the Council was to consider the Commission's proposed regulations establishing a system of identification and registration of cattle, together with a linked proposal on the labelling of beef and beef products. The importance to the United Kingdom of early progress on the setting up of an EU-wide animal identification and registration system was emphasised in the Council discussions, subject to the proposal being technically sound and workable. However, my noble Friend expressed reservations about the practicability of the proposed funding arrangements. The presidency informed the Council that further work would continue urgently on these proposals with a view to the Council being in a position to reach agreement if possible at its March meeting.

Prompted by discussion papers tabled by the Italian and United Kingdom Governments, the Council held a wide-ranging debate on the future of the Common Market organisation in milk and milk products, in particular the future of the EU milk quota regime. The United Kingdom pressed for early progress on reforming the milk regime in view of World Trade Organisation and budgetary constraints, as well as the prospect of future EU enlargement. In the light of the Council discussion, the European Commission undertook to bring forward shortly a detailed analysis of the milk sector and ideas for possible changes to the milk quota regime.

The Council held a brief discussion on the situation in the beef and veal sector, in particular on the early marketing and calf processing schemes. My noble Friend took the opportunity to press for a reduction in the rates of payment under the calf processing scheme which, at their present levels, risked creating distortions in the market.

The Agriculture Commissioner presented reports to the Council on options for reform of the EU market regimes for tobacco and olive oil. Legislative proposals will be made to the Council in the near future on changes to the tobacco regime. The Council will consider in detail the options for reforming the olive oil regime at its forthcoming meetings.

BSE

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to impose a ban on all beef and beef products, originating in countries which (a) cannot demonstrate a total absence of BSE in their cattle herds and (b) have not instituted a complete ban on specified bovine material and the use of animal protein in animal rations. [14769]

Mrs. Browning: The Fresh Meat (Beef Control) Regulations 1996 prohibit the sale for human consumption of all bovine meat derived from bovines which at the time of slaughter were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to cattle slaughtered on or after 29 March 1996 whether in the United Kingdom or overseas, other than those born, reared and slaughtered in specific third countries set out in the regulations. This list of countries is confined to those where the Government are satisfied that we can import beef without risk because they are free of BSE. Other countries, including all other member states, are covered by the 30-month rule.

The Government do not believe that it is necessary to go beyond this and institute a wider ban on the basis proposed by the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) in order to protect public health. Those member states which have endemic BSE already have controls in place to remove bovine offals which are similar in nature to those in this country. The Government have strongly supported European Commission proposals to introduce controls on bovine offals on a Community-wide basis which were discussed by the Council in December and rejected. We are pressing the Commission to introduce revised proposals shortly.

The European Community already has a prohibition on the use of mammalian protein in ruminant rations, with certain exceptions. The United Kingdom law goes further and covers mammalian meat and bonemeal in all farm animal rations but neither European Community nor UK law prohibits the use of all animal protein in animal rations. In particular exceptions are made for mammalian proteins such as milk and there are no prohibitions on fish or avian proteins in any animal feed nor any scientific basis on which to justify such action.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many responses he has received to the consultation document, "Proposal for a UK Certified Herds Scheme"; from what source; and if his Department will publish a summary of those responses. [15874]

Mr. Baldry: Forty eight replies were received in the UK to the consultation document, "Proposal for a UK Certified Herds Scheme". A list of those who responded and copies of their responses can be examined at the libraries of the Agricultural Departments.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress in discussions with the European Commission on the introduction of a UK certified herds scheme. [15876]

Mr. Baldry: We have been working closely with the Commission on our proposals for an export certified herds scheme and intend formally to submit those proposals shortly. Thereafter, the proposals will be subject to the process laid down in the Florence agreement, which includes: consultation with the Scientific Veterinary Committee, the Multi Disciplinary Scientific Committee and, where appropriate, other relevant scientific committees, in tandem with discussions in the Standing Veterinary Committee. In the light of those discussions, the Commission will take a decision using established procedures and will subsequently fix the date when exports can effectively resume following a successful outcome of a Community inspection.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response his Department has made to the criticisms by the National Farmers Union of the proposed certified herds scheme. [15875]

Mr. Baldry: We are finalising our proposals for an export certified herds scheme in the light of comments made on our consultation document from the National Farmers Union and others.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is the Government's policy to press for a lifting of the European ban first on certified herds in Northern Ireland. [15877]

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the full statement by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster during the debate on the BSE crisis, Official Report, columns 708–13. My right hon. Friend made it clear that the export certified herds scheme we will put forward to the Commission applies to the whole United Kingdom but that Northern Ireland, with its computerised cattle tracing system and low incidence of BSE, would derive immediate and significant benefit from our proposals.

ADAS (Sale)

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the sale of ADAS has been agreed. [17133]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are pleased to announce, that following independent financial advice from PA Strategy Partners Ltd., we have selected the management and employee buy-out—MEBO—team led by the current chief executive, Phillip Needham, as the preferred bidder for ADAS.

The deal which has been agreed meets all the objectives which I announced on 4 November 1966, Official Report, column 313. The overall net present value to the taxpayer of the MEBO bid is some £23.5 million, made up of the consideration for the business, savings flowing from the pricing structure for future services for MAFF and the Welsh Office, and rents for the properties occupied by ADAS.

We expect to exchange contracts on the sale very shortly. Completion will be subject to the requirement to inform and consult appropriate representatives of ADAS employees under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 (as amended).

Agri-environment Schemes

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what funding his Department has allocated in the current year for the operation of agri-environment schemes; and if he will make a statement on the operation of the schemes. [15209]

Mr. Boswell: The 1995 public expenditure survey provision allocated a total of £76.3 million to the operation of agri-environment schemes in England for 1996–97. Of this total, £60.6 million was for payments to land managers, £12.5 million was for running costs and £3.2 million was for monitoring costs.

The agri-environment programme provides a wide range of voluntary incentive schemes to encourage environmentally beneficial farming practices. The Ministry carries out a monitoring programme to measure the success of each scheme and the detailed results of these are published. Schemes will normally be evaluated and reviewed every five years to assess the extent to which policy objectives are being achieved and the efficiency with which schemes are being administered. For example, the five stage I environmentally sensitive areas underwent their second five-yearly policy review in 1996. Results of a comprehensive programme of environmental monitoring have shown the schemes to be successful. A public consultation exercise detailing proposals for improvements to the scheme was conducted as part of the review and, as a result, several new tiers and options have recently been introduced.

The schemes are kept under review and consultation arrangements have recently been expanded at both national and local level to ensure that we get the best out of our schemes.

The Agriculture Select Committee is nearing the conclusion of its inquiry into the Ministry's agri-environment schemes and I look forward to receipt of its report.

Tobacco

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his statement in European Standing Committee A on 12 February, Official Report, column 2, what is the approximate annual production in the European Union of raw tobacco and its cost to the common agricultural policy in (i) ecus and (ii) pounds sterling; and what are the annual figures for the three most recent years for which figures are available for (a) quantities of tobacco consumed within the European Union and (b) the tonnage exported to each of the principal export destinations. [16022]

Mr. Baldry: The latest figures available on EU tobacco production are for the 1994 harvest when 337,091 tonnes were produced. The current annual cost of the tobacco regime is approximately 1 billion ecus or £750 million[1]. For the three most recent years for which figures are available, the quantities of tobacco consumed within the European Union and the tonnages exported to principal destinations were as follows:

tonnes

	1993	1994	1995
EU consumption[2]	497,789	560,434	485,297
Total EU exports	195,882	192,362	272,179

Cattle Cull

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what have been the total costs incurred to date for slaughter, rendering incineration and storage of carcases under the over-30-months scheme. [16244]

Mr. Baldry: As at 31 January 1997, the following amounts had been paid:

	£ million
Slaughter	65.6
Rendering	42.1
Incineration	5.4
Storage of carcases	11.6

BSE (Chickens)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what measures he has taken to prevent the spread of BSE to chickens; [16135]

(2) what action he has taken to investigate whether BSE (a) can and (b) has spread to chickens. [16136]

Mrs. Browning: There is no scientific evidence to suggest that chickens are susceptible to transmissible spongiform encephalopathies. In experimental attempts to establish disease, BSE has not been transmitted to poultry either by oral exposure or by direct inoculation into the brain. Challenged birds survived to five years post-inoculation. Further tests have been carried out on tissues from these chickens by inoculation into further chickens and into mice to see if any infectivity can be detected. These are now eight months post-inoculation without evidence of transmission. I am aware of the recent press reports suggesting that TSEs have been identified in chickens. My Department has been informed by the researcher who holds the material in question that no pathological examination of brain tissue has yet been carried out. My Department has informed him that if on examination a TSE is suspected, he is under a legal obligation to surrender the material to a veterinary inspector of the Ministry of Agriculture for further analyses.

The feeding of mammalian meat and bonemeal to all farm animals, which includes poultry, has been banned since 29 March 1996. This ban was put in place to prevent the accidental feeding of ruminants with feed intended for pigs and poultry, which prior to 29 March could legally have contained meat and bonemeal.

Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the (a) number and (b) species of the zoo animals in which spongiform encephalopathy has been confirmed between 1988 and the present time. [16129]

Mrs. Browning: The following table gives the number of confirmed transmissible spongiform encephalopathy cases in animals kept in zoological collections in Great Britain as at 1 February 1997[1]:

Confirmed cases shown by year of clinical onset or year of confirmation	Species
1986	Nyala
1987	Gemsbok
1988	[1]—
1989	Oryx (Arabian) Kudu, Eland
1990	Kudu
1991	Eland(3), Kudu
1992	Puma, Kudu(3), Cheetah, Oryx (scimitar horned)
1993	Cheetah[2]
1994	Ocelot, Eland
1995	Puma(2), Eland, Tiger(2)
1996	Ocelot, Bison

It is not possible to provide the data by date of confirmation or to give details of suspect cases which were not subsequently confirmed as central records are not compiled in this way. Furthermore, there was no statutory requirement to report diagnosis of a spongiform encephalopathy other than BSE or scrapie until November 1994. MAFF would not therefore have been informed of suspect cases for which laboratory examination proved to be negative. To provide the information in the way requested could be done only at disproportionate costs.

[1] Two cases in Ankole cows were recorded in the BSE statistics for cattle for 1991.

[2] Two further cheetahs were confirmed in foreign zoos, having been born and infected in a British zoo.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of spongiform encephalopathy have been (a) suspected and (b) confirmed in each of the last 10 years, broken down by species. [16223]

Mrs. Browning: The following table gives the number of suspected and confirmed cases of BSE in Great Britain as at 7 February 1996. The cases before 21 June 1988 are recorded by date of clinical onset of disease and the cases thereafter are recorded by date of restriction:

Year	Suspected[1]	Confirmed[4]
1986	[2]—	7
1987	[2]—	435
1988	2,516	2,469
1989	8,447	7,137
1990	17,323	14,181
1991	30,009	[5]25,032
1992	44,846	36,682
1993	42,931	34,370
1994	30,261	23,944
1995	17,946	14,298
1996	10,688	[3]7,323

[1] Incomplete data.
[2] BSE not a notifiable disease prior to 21 June 1988, details of suspect cases not available.
[3] Suspects restricted—only cases showing clinical signs suspicious of BSE are placed under restriction. Some suspects reported by owners will not on close examination justify service of restriction. No central records are kept of such cases.
[4] BSE confirmed—The figures are significantly in arrears of restriction as there will inevitably be a delay in examining the brains, and some animals placed under restriction in 1996 will not yet have been slaughtered.
[5] Includes two Ankole cows in zoos recorded as normal BSE cases.

The following table gives the number of suspected and confirmed cases of scrapie in Great Britain as at 18 February 1997.

Year	Suspected	Confirmed
1986	[1]—	156
1987	[1]—	179
1988	[1]—	215
1989	[1]—	246
1990	[1]—	[2]348

1992	[1]—	[2]666
1993	492	327
1994	291	199
1995	220	163
1996	[2]339	209
1997	[4]35	—

[1] Details of suspect cases unavailable. Scrapie became a notifiable disease on 1 January 1993.
[2] Figures are distorted because payments were offered for cases between October 1990 and August 1992 when brain pools were being assembled for rendering experiments.
[3] Some results due.
[4] All results due.

The following list gives the number of confirmed cases of feline spongiform encephalopathy by year of confirmation in Great Britain as at 1 February 1997:

1990: 12
1991: 12
1992: 10
1993: 11
1994: 16
1995: 8
1996: 6

Information on cases in other species is recorded in the answer to the hon. Member's other question about zoo animals.

British Agrochemicals Association Ltd.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what meetings he has had with the British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of the meetings; and if he will make a statement; [16289]

(2) what representations he has received from British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. in the past 12 months; what was the subject of those representations; and if he will make a statement. [16286]

Mrs. Browning: British Agrochemicals Association Ltd. has not sought a meeting with my right hon. Friend or other MAFF Ministers in the last 12 months but the association is frequently in contact with our officials to discuss issues relating to the regulation of pesticides.

In addition, the association has made formal representations to the Department on a number of issues including: updating of UK regulations on pesticides and European legislation on plant protection products; clarification of the arrangements for the authorisation of adjuvants; EC proposals for maximum residue levels in food; enforcement of maximum residue levels in protected lettuce; review of standards for the approval of amateur pesticides; the 1997–98 fees and charges structure and application arrangements operated by the Pesticides Safety Directorate; revision of the code of practice for the safe use of pesticides on farms and holdings; revision of the code of practice for suppliers of pesticides of agriculture, horticulture and forestry; labelling and risk management strategies for pesticides and terrestrial non-target arthropods; pesticide label phrases regarding the risk to honeybees; and a proposed MAFF booklet on pesticides in integrated farming.

Pesticides and Fertilisers

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the total amount of (a) pesticides and (b) fertilisers sold each year for the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [16293]

Mrs. Browning: The current and constant price series given in the table show estimates of sales of pesticides and fertilisers for agricultural use in the UK. The constant price series are valued at the prices of pesticides and fertiliser in 1990. This is the best guide to changes in volumes as different types of fertiliser and pesticide are weighted according to their relative values in 1990.

[1] Provisional.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress of his Department's search for cattle associated with BSE cases to be culled under the terms of the Florence agreement; how many cattle have been identified so far; what is his latest estimate of the likely total; how many farms are involved; and what is his estimate of the time scale for completing this search and concluding the accelerated cull. [16320]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 18 February 1997]: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has responsibility for conducting the cull throughout Great Britain. The reply is therefore on a Great Britain-wide basis.

On-farm visits to natal herds in which a confirmed case of BSE was born started in the week beginning 27 January. The total number of cattle that have been identified through these visits as having been exposed to the same feed as BSE cases is 4,439. Of this number, 199 animals have so far been confirmed as exposed by the central veterinary unit: 71 of these are still in the natal herd; 128 have moved and need to be traced further. The latest estimate of the number of cattle affected in Great Britain is 90,000 to 100,000. However, the true number of animals affected can be determined only by on-farm visits.

There are natal herds in over 7,000 farms in Great Britain. Farms which have bought in exposed animals will also be affected. Again, the number of such farms can be established only through visits to the natal herds and subsequent tracing visits.

It is very difficult at this early stage to estimate the length of time it will take to conclude the cull.

Organophosphates (Animal Health)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what current long-term research Her Majesty's Government have commissioned on organophosphates and animal health; and if he will make a statement. [15425]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 12 February 1997]: There are no current long-term Government commissioned research projects on organophosphates and animal health.

The Government have, however, awarded £500,000 to the Institute of Occupational Medicine in Edinburgh for research into the possible long-term human health effects of organophosphorus sheep dips. The results of that study are expected in 1999.

DEFENCE

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 October, Official Report, column 924, on the discovery of mustard gas during the Gulf war, when he intends to send the letter to the hon. Member; and if he will list the reasons for the delay in writing. [14916]

Mr. Soames: I have written today.

Departmental Expenditure (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current estimate of the annual expenditure by his Department in Wales on (a) employment of service staff, (b) employment of civilian staff and (c) procurement. [16271]

Mr. Soames: The estimate of expenditure in the current financial year on employment in Wales of (a) service personnel pay is £118.69 million and (b) civilian staff is £96,773 million. Figures for the current financial year for Defence procurement in Wales are not available. The latest for which figures are available is 1994–95 when the total was £50 million, exclusive of VAT. This does not include expenditure by the armed forces for the provision of local services, for which figures are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Low Flying

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many collisions involving low-flying military aircraft have occurred over the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years. [16133]

Mr. Soames: The number of collisions involving low-flying military aircraft over the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

1987: 2
1988: 1
1989: nil
1990: 1
1991: 1
1992: nil
1993: 1
1994: nil
1995: nil
1996: nil

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons the automatic low flying flight planning enquiry and notification system—ALFENS—was not introduced in mid-1992; when he now expects the system to come into operation; and what penalties have been incurred by the contractors as a result of the delays. [16134]

Mr. Soames: As explained in detail to the House of Commons Defence Committee (HC314, Session 1993–4, pages 15–17), the original time scale for the introduction of ALFENS in mid-1992 was based on the best information available to National Air Traffic Services, which let the contract and manage it on behalf of the MOD, at an early stage of the procurement process. This date was not achieved due chiefly to delays caused by changes to the scope and complexity of the project and a number of problems with the submission and evaluation of tenders. We hope to see ALFENS in use by this summer. The contractors have carried out additional work at their own expense to rectify faults in the system.

Naval Movements (Ayrshire)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the deployments of naval vessels off the coast of Ayrshire and naval aircraft in Ayrshire on 31 January, indicating what types and numbers of craft were involved, the reasons for their deployment and the costs of the deployments. [16334]

Mr. Soames: There were two separate training activities which involved naval vessels being off the Ayrshire coast on 31 January. The first was UK mine counter measures group training consisting of four Hunt class MCM vessels. The second involved the NATO standing naval force channel conducting training independent of the UK group and this included the use of one UK MCM vessel with one coastal survey vessel in support. MCM operations off the Ayrshire coast are part of normal Royal Navy activity and all costs were fully contained within the annual training budget. No additional costs were incurred.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16175]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information on employment agencies used by MOD is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. It is my Department's policy to use agencies on the following circumstances: to provide staff as an interim measure where directly employed labour cannot be provided; to assist recruitment authorities on all or part of the recruitment selection process, but most recruitment is undertaken in house.

Information, where available, in respect of defence agencies is a matter for the chief executive concerned, who will be writing to the hon. Member separately.

Letter from C. A. Gordon to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as the Deputy Chief Executive of the Army Individual Training Organisation.

This Agency came into being on 1 April 1996 and I am therefore quoting figures from that date. Details of this Agency's use of private employment agencies are listed below:

Letter from J. R. Drew to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking him to list the private employment agencies used by the department and its agencies in each of the last three years. For the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO) this matter falls within my responsibilities as Chief Executive.

I have enclosed the details you requested on a separate sheet. It should be noted that the number of staff engaged through employment agencies was unusually high in 1995–96 and 1996–97 because of the need temporarily to replace vital skills lost during the rundown of ABRO Old Dalby, which closed at the end of December 1996.

ABRO: Use of employment agencies

a. Agencies used[1]	b. Numbers of posts filled	c. Cost[2] £

Turner Charles Ltd., Omega Personnel, Dargue Staff, Select Appointments, Partners Employment, Mitrem Employment Service, Personnel Placements, British Nursing Co-op Ltd., Kelly Services, Matchmaker Personnel	37	210,117

The average length of contract is 1 year 4 months.

[1] The individual fees for companies are not given as they are commercially confidential.

[2] It is not clear what is meant by the median cost paid to the employment agency. The employment agencies are paid an hourly rate for staff supplied.

Letter from Paul Altobell to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about dealings with private employment agencies over the past three years as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency.

We make only limited use of contract staff from private employment agencies, usually to deal with surges in our workload. Unfortunately, our records are not kept in a form which would permit a precise answer to your question without incurring undue expense. However, I hope the following information will meet your needs:

Agency	Total expenditure £
1994–95[1]
Manpower	32,300.64
Josephine Sammons	4,347.93
Total cost for year	36,648.57

1996–97[3]
Manpower	13,603.88
JM Recruitment	3,639.34
Total cost for year	17,243.22

[1] Approximately four people were recruited during the year with an estimated median cost per week of £230.

[2] Approximately eight people were recruited during the year with an estimated median cost per week of £230.

[3] Approximately six people were recruited during the year with an estimated median cost per week of £250.

Letter from Julian Hunt to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about staff supplied by private employment agencies, as this falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office.

The Meteorological Office use agencies only rarely and the information you requested is given below:

Letter from Graham Jones to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies, by his Department and its agencies, in each of the last three years for which figures are available, as these matters fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment Defence Agency. Specifically, you asked for: the names of the agencies; the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department; the total cost to the Department of using employment agencies; the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited; and the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies.

During the last 3 years the Royal Air Force Signals Engineering Establishment has used 5 private employment agencies—Piper Group Ltd, RSD Technology Ltd, Turner Charles Ltd, Inter Europe Technical Services Ltd, Escom Technical Services—to provide professional engineering staff to fill vacancies in the personnel establishment until full-time civil servants are recruited.

In 1994 these agencies supplied 38 personnel on an average contract length of 8½ months. The total cost was £957,486, with a median cost per agency of:

Piper Group Ltd: £26,274.

RSD Technology Ltd: £25,636.

Turner Charles Ltd: £30,856.

Inter Europe Technical Services Ltd: £7,596.

In 1995 these agencies supplied 52 personnel on an average contract length of 8½ months. The total cost was £1,003,425, with a median cost per agency of:

Piper Group Ltd: £26,641.

RSD Technology Ltd: £25,996.

Turner Charles Ltd: £11,412.

Inter Europe Technical Services Ltd: £2,809.

Escom Technical Services: £6,364.

In 1996 these agencies supplied 58 personnel on an average contract length of 7.45 months. The total cost was £1,310,206, with a median cost per agency of:

Piper Group Ltd: £28,781.

RSD Technology Ltd: £29,722.

Turner Charles Ltd: £19,896.

Inter Europe Technical Services Ltd: £11,711.

Escom Technical Services: £24,877.

Letter from Richard Kyle to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

PRIVATE EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES USED BY THE ROYAL AIR FORCE MAINTENANCE GROUP DEFENCE AGENCY

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning private employment agencies used by his Department's Agencies because this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Maintenance Group Defence Agency.

The information readily available is given in the table at Annex A. As a number of the agency staffs are provided through call-off contract arrangements to cover manpower shortages or peak production periods, the information on median costs and contract periods for individual staff cannot easily be discerned, and is therefore not provided.

Letter from Peter Foxton to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to the recent questions you tabled to the Secretary of State for Defence for those matters that fall within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Base Supply and Distribution Agency (ABSDA). You asked about the use being made of private employment agencies to recruit staff for employment within Defence Agencies, ABSDA has only been in existence since April 1995 and in that time there has only been one occasion where private employment agencies have been requested to recruit staff, and that was in 1996. The Occupational Health and Safety Bureau was tasked to provide a Grade E Nurse as a temporary measure due to difficulties in recruiting full time personnel.

Recruitment and Assessment Services (RAS), a government agency, were requested in August 1996 to seek candidates for the position of Chief Executive of ABSDA on the retirement of the incumbent. Between the selection procedure and my appointment RAS were privatised. Therefore, you may wish to consider RAS a private employment agency.

The total cost, for both appointments, was £30,289. The length of contract was four months for the Nurse and three years for my tenure of office.

I trust I have answered your questions satisfactorily.

Letter from D. L. Burden to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies by the Ministry of Defence and its Agencies, in so far as it applies to the Army Personnel Centre as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of that Agency.

I should explain that the Army Personnel Centre (APC) formed as an agency on 2 December 1996 and received delegated personnel management responsibility for civilian staff in the APC in Glasgow from 9 December 1996. I can confirm that the APC in Glasgow has not engaged private employment agency staff.

In addition to the staff employed in the APC at Glasgow I also have residual responsibility for staff at a number of sites in England currently involved in APC business. For the provision of civilian staff at Directorate of 'A' Information Systems (Army), Worthy Down, the now vacated sties (Earls Court and Stanmore) in London and the closing sites (Ashton-Under-Lyne, Leicester, Chester, York and Exeter) in England, I was and remain reliant on the respective Civilian Personnel Management Authorities (CPMAs) responsible for recruitment and management of staff within those areas. I envisage that the individual CPMAs will submit responses for collation centrally and, to avoid the risk of duplication, the data on private employment agency staff who have been employed to support the business of the APC at the closing sites would be incorporated into the MOD—collated return.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from John Prince to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Army Technical Support Agency (ATSA).

ATSA launched in October 1995 and, to date, have used 2 private employment agencies, as follows:

Agency	Number of employed	Total cost £	Contract length
October 1995 to March 1996
Job Spot	1	2,800	8 weeks
April 1996 to February 1997

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

Your recent question asked for information about private employment agencies used by the Ministry of Defence and its Agencies including numbers of staff employed from employment agencies, the cost of staff thus employed and the cost paid to the agency and contract duration. I am replying on behalf of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA).

I am afraid that this information is not held centrally in DERA as all our business sectors are empowered to recruit their own staff. The information you request could therefore only be collected at disproportionate cost.

All recruitment of permanent staff in DERA is through fair and open competition in accordance with Civil Service procedures. Where private employment agencies are used it is either to complement other methods of advertising for staff or to meet short term temporary requirements.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Letter from T. McG. Brown to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, the Rt. Hon Michael Portillo MP, regarding the use of private employment agencies within the MOD. As Chief Executive of the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency (DPCSA) I am responsible for recruitment and employment of staff within my Agency and I am therefore providing the details you have requested in respect of my Agency.

The four employment agencies shown below have supplied temporary staff to DPCSA during the period from 1st January 1994 to 31st December 1996. The total number of staff used from each agency during this period, the average length of contract, the cost per hour (inclusive of VAT) and the type of employee supplied is also shown.

	Number supplied	Contract period	Cost (£/hour)	Employee type
Bond Accountancy	1	3 months	20	Accountant
Hays Accountancy Personnel	1	5 months	25	Accountant
Manpower plc	32	4 days	7–8	Drivers
Josephine Sammons Limited	10	4 months	7–8	Clerical staff

The overall cost of using these staff is not separately identified. However most of these staff were used during 1996/97 and current expenditure on temporary staff is approximately £45,000 per year. The overall cost of employing temporary staff is comparable with the cost of equivalent permanent staff.

The agencies listed above are used to recruit temporary staff on a short term basis while permanent staff are being recruited. All permanent staff are recruited from other areas of the MOD or directly by DPCSA via press advertisements, which are also sent to local Job Centres. No permanent staff are recruited from private employment agencies.

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from Ron Smith to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies by Defence Agencies as this matter, in respect of the Defence Secondary Care Agency (DSCA), falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the DSCA.

I regret, that the information requested, is not held in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Alan Bush to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence, about the use of private employment agencies, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Acting Chief Executive of the Defence Transport and Movements Executive Agency (DTMX).

A private employment agency has been used only once by DTMX in the last 3 years. We employed the Recruitment and Assessment Services, Basingstoke, at a total cost of £14,822, to engage direct from Industry the Commercial Business Adviser to DTMX. The individual concerned is employed on a contract of 2 years duration.

Letter from Malcolm Westgate to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies. This matter falls to me as Chief Executive of the Disposal Sales Agency.

My organisation acquired Agency status in October 1994. The information you seek is given below, for the period October 1994 to December 1996.

1. Names of agencies used, and numbers employed by each agency in each year.

	1994	1995	1996
Josephine Sammons	3	3	4
Manpower Services	1	1	0
Alfred Marks Western Systems	1	1	1

2. Cost of using employment agencies.

1994: £14,414.67

1995: £47,743.20

1996: £35,278.96

3. The median cost per person recruited was £264.

4. The length of the contracts ranged from 2 weeks to 2 years. The average length was 8 months.

Letter from John Clarke to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence a Parliamentary Question relating to the use by the MOD and its Agencies of private employment agencies in each of the last 3 years. As this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the United Kingdom Hydrographic Office I have been asked to reply to you.

No private employment agencies were used in the years 1994 and 1995. On 1st April 1996 the UK Hydrographic Agency became a Trading Fund Agency solely reliant for its funding on revenue from the sale of its products and services. It was therefore necessary to build up very rapidly a more commercial awareness in the Agency and for that reason a number of Interim Managers were employed through private employment agencies. In addition, one agency supplied a temporary employee to cover for short term absence. Details of these are:

Agency name	Numbers employed	Median cost per person recruited £
Ashton Penney	3	58,044
Barton Interim Management	1	92,277
Parity Solutions	1	12,740
Eurolink Group plc	1	9,800
Western Staff Services	1	472.11
Harrison Willis Ltd.	1	26,892.53

The total cost to the UK Hydrographic Agency of using employment agencies in 1996 was £316,315.64p. This amount included charges in respect of salaries paid to the recruits by the agencies but does not include VAT. The average length of contract was 19.4 weeks

I hope this information has been helpful.

Letter from Gordon Wilson to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the use of private employment agencies.

Letter from Alan Pollard to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about use of private employment agencies. As Chief Executive, this falls within my area of responsibility for the Logistic Information Systems Agency (LISA).

The Agency was formed in November 1994 and assumed full responsibility for personnel recruitment in April 1996. During 1996, the Agency incurred expenditure of £830.76 + VAT to the Paterson Recruitment Agency of Bicester in recruiting one Administrative Assistant on a permanent basis. In recent weeks I have authorised expenditure amounting to £33763.62 to the Recruitment & Assessment Services for the coordination of a campaign to recruit up to 60 Higher Executive Officers and Executive Officers on a permanent basis. The recruitment process is ongoing with results yet to be promulgated.

Should you require any further information, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Letter from Stephen Campion to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies as this matter falls within the area of responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Medical Supplies Agency, who is currently away from the office on official duties.

The answers to your questions are that since the Agency was established in March 1996:

(a) No permanent staff have been recruited through private employment services.

(b) A total of 4 industrial and 6 non-industrial casual staff have been recruited through one private agency.

(c) The costs of (b) above are £82,586.47 with the median cost paid to the agency being approximately £8,300.

(d) The average casual/temporary contract for these staff is 3 months (industrial) and 6 months (non-industrial).

Letter from Philip Wildman to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of Military Survey Agency.

The breakdown of the employment agencies and the costs are below. The median cost paid to each agency per person recruited in 1996–97 is £31,480 with an average length of contract of one year.

Letter from Walter Boreham to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about private employment agencies, as this falls into my area of responsibility as Chief Constable/Chief Executive of the Ministry of Defence Police Agency.

During the last three financial years I have used Belle Personnel, Key Personnel, Manpower Plc and Josephine Salmons employment agencies, who provided a total of 8 persons, at a cost of some £51,000.

I do not use the services of employment agencies to recruit permanent staff but rather to provide personnel to fill short term vacancies.

Letter from John McAnally to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, about the use of employment agencies in each of the past three years, in my capacity as Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency (NRTA).

I am afraid that it is not possible to provide you with the information in the format requested. The NRTA was created from the Flag Officer Training and Recruiting (FOTR) Command area on 1 April 1995 and, therefore, has not been in existence for three years, however, the following information has been compiled from the combined FOTR and NRTA use of employment agencies since 1994:

(a) Agencies Used:

South Hams Nursing Agency

Crown Nursing Agency

Personnel Selection

Primary Management

Alfred Marks

AYS Recruitment Agency

Manpower plc

Office Angels

(b) Total Number of Personnel Employed: 92

(c) Total Cost: £172,908 (Median Cost Per Person: £407.17)

(d) Average Length of Contract: 1½ months.

You may be interested to note that, wherever possible, a competitive tendering process is used to identify the most cost-effective employment agency. In cases where there may be an ongoing requirement for agency personnel (e.g., Nurses), the negotiation of a longer term contract (say, for three years) is likely to result in more competitive prices than would be the case in ad hoc arrangements.

I hope that this is helpful.

Letter from A. J. Stables to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency. The names of the agencies which have ben used are as follows:

Anaesthetists Agency

Angela Shaw Associates

Beaver Employment

Blue Arrow Catering Services

Brook Street Bureau plc

Defcon Security Services

Gibson Oliff Recruitment

Hamlin Nursing Agency

Hayes Accountancy Personnel

The total number of private agency staff employed over the last 3 years was 109; 29 of them were employed during financial year 1994–95, 32 in 1995–96 and 48 in 1996–97. The costs during these years were approximately £102K, £132.5K and £147.7K respectively; a total of £382.2K over the period. The median cost paid to the agencies per employee was approximately £3.5K. As far as can be determined from the information available, the average length of contract per person was just over 7.5 weeks.

I am sending a copy of this letter to my Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief.

Letter from Roger Babington to Mr. Mike Hall, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying in part to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the use of private employment agencies, as this is related to my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Ships Support Agency.

The Ships Support Agency was launched on 11 December 1996 and since that time has used two employment agencies, the details of which are provided below:

1.

(a) Ross Campbell Consultants Limited

(b) Two people employed

(c) Total cost £3,552, cost per employee £1,776

(d) Average contract length of employees ten months

2.

(a) Alfred Marks (At Your Service)

(b) Three people employed

(c) Total cost £8,086, cost per employee £2,695

(d) Average contract length of employees 5.5 months

(The cost per employee is the exact cost to the Department and not the median).

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings which his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16287]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The assessment and recording of hazardous substances used in construction is covered by the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1995. The Construction (Design and Management) Regulations 1994 requires information regarding any hazardous materials incorporated within the fabric of any new structure to be recorded in the health and safety file for that structure.

The presence of any hazardous materials, such as asbestos, in existing buildings is recorded in the appropriate register its location is noted and its condition monitored.

Measures are in place to restrict the use of ozone-depleting substances in the construction of MOD buildings.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department had made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16311]

Mr. Boswell: The Department is responsible for carrying out risk assessments under, among other things, the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992, the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1994, the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987 and the Control of Asbestos at Work (Amendment) Regulations 1992. All buildings have an asbestos register where its presence has been identified. As far as ozone depleting chemicals are concerned, surveys of fire fighting and cooling equipment have been carried out and the use of these substances has either ceased or is in the process of being phased out.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of (a) energy use and (b) waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16421]

Mr. Boswell: Environmental assessments are carried out for all new buildings and major refurbishment of existing buildings under the Building Research Establishment's environmental assessment method—BREEAM. These include energy use and waste management.

As a result of energy surveys and auditing through a computerised database, a programme of energy efficient schemes has been initiated.

Under our action plan for green housekeeping, there is a requirement on all our sites to minimise the generation of waste and implement recycling schemes. A series of formal audits of laboratories is planned for 1997–98.

Mink Farms

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink fur farms there are in England by county. [16406]

Mrs. Browning: At 17 February 1997, there were the following mink farms in England:

County	Number of licensed mink farms
Cornwall	1
Dorset	1
Hampshire	1
Isle of Wight	1
Lancashire	5
Northumberland	1
Staffordshire	1
West Yorkshire	2
Total	13

Hens

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will introduce measures requiring pop-holes in housing associated with free-range poultry systems to be a minimum of 30 cm high and 75 cm wide; [16520]

(2) if he will ensure that laying hens in colony systems have their beaks trimmed only for therapeutic purposes; [16510]

(3) if he will ensure that sufficient pop-holes are provided in free-range poultry systems to allow all birds easy access into and out of the house; [16512]

(4) if he will require that perching space of at least 18 cm per hen is provided in colony systems; [16514]

(5) if he will ensure that the stocking rate of laying hens in colony systems does not exceed (a) seven hens per square metre of floor plan area in single-tier systems and (b) 15.5 hens in multi-tier systems; [16516]

(6) if he will introduce maximum flock size in a laying hen colony system of 2,000; [16511]

(7) if he will ensure that hens in free-range systems are not stocked in any one paddock at more than 1,000 hens per hectare under a rotational management system; [16513]

(8) if he will ensure that sufficient nest boxes are to be provided for laying hens in colony systems to permit access for all hens. [16517]

Mrs. Browning: These questions concern the implementation of recommendations in the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of laying hens in colony systems.

As our detailed response to that report made clear, there is no overall benefit to farm animal welfare in introducing unilateral legislation where this would disadvantage our own producers while continuing to allow imports produced in systems with lower welfare standards. We have instead worked with our European partners to develop a new Council of Europe recommendation on the welfare of domestic fowl and will continue to press the European Commission to bring forward its overdue proposals for a directive laying down new or revised Community standards for laying hens.

Our input into the forthcoming negotiations will be underpinned by our extensive programme of research into farm animal welfare and informed by the recommendations in the existing report and by the outcome of the Farm Animal Welfare Council's current review of the welfare of laying hens in all types of system.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that (a) hens in colony systems and (b) broiler chicken flocks are required to be inspected at least twice each day by those in charge of the units. [16763]

Mrs. Browning: This question concerns the implementation of recommendations in the Farm Animal Welfare Council's reports on the welfare of laying hens in colony systems and the welfare of broiler chickens.

As our detailed responses to these reports made clear, we accept that twice daily inspection makes good management practice. This will be reflected in our input into forthcoming negotiations on new Community standards for laying hens and nationally in the new welfare code for broilers which is currently in preparation.

Sheep

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will ensure that embryotomy is carried out only on dead lambs; [16504]

(2) if he will ensure that only qualified veterinary surgeons trained in the technique carry out trans-cervical artificial insemination in sheep; [16503]

(3) if he will prohibit combined castration and tail docking of lambs less than 24 hours old. [16507]

Mrs. Browning: The Government response to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of sheep made it clear that we agree with these points. We intend to address them in the revised welfare code on sheep which is currently in preparation.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will ensure that tail docking of lambs over the age of six weeks is carried out only by a veterinary surgeon for therapeutic purposes under anaesthetic; [16506]

(2) if he will ensure that surgical castration of lambs is performed only when the lambs are under anaesthetic by a veterinary surgeon. [16505]

Mrs. Browning: We made it clear in our detailed response to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of sheep that, in the absence of conclusive scientific evidence as to the best way forward, we thought it inappropriate to make changes to current legislation on tail docking and castration. We are funding further research and will review the position in the light of the results.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many holdings on which sheep are kept in England and Wales are registered with MAFF; and how many of those have been allocated with a flockmark in accordance with article 3 of the Sheep and Goats (Identification, Movement and Records) Order 1996. [16687]

Mrs. Browning: A total of 70,742 holdings on which sheep are kept in England and Wales have been registered with MAFF under the terms of article 3 of the Sheep and Goats (Records, Identification and Movement) Order 1996. They have all been allocated with a flock mark.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of sheep for slaughter have been exported from the United Kingdom to the Republic of Ireland since 1 January; and in each case which ferry route was declared in the journey plan. [16684]

Mrs. Browning: Since 1 January 1997 there have been two consignments of sheep exported from Britain to the Irish Republic for slaughter. The transporter declared that the Cairnryan to Larne ferry crossing would be used.

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will introduce a maximum stocking density for broiler chickens; [16508]

(2) if he will require farmers to keep records of stocking densities of broiler chickens; [16509]

(3) if he will require the internal floor area available to each bird in a broiler chicken house to be clearly and permanently displayed at the entrance to the house. [16515]

Mrs. Browning: These questions concern the implementation of recommendations in the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on the welfare of broiler chickens.

As our detailed response to that report made clear, there is no overall benefit to farm animal welfare in introducing unilateral legislation where this would disadvantage our own producers while continuing to allow imports produced in systems with lower welfare standards. We have instead worked with our European partners to develop the new Council of Europe recommendation on the welfare of domestic fowl. This was adopted in 1995 and will serve in due course as the basis for EU legislation.

In addition to implementing many of the Farm Animal Welfare Council's recommendations, the new welfare code for broilers, which is currently in preparation, will take the new Council of Europe requirements into account.

Carcases (Labelling)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will require that carcases and cuts from animals slaughtered by religious methods be clearly labelled at the point of sale. [16518]

Mrs. Browning: Following a comprehensive review of labelling issues in 1990, the Food Advisory Committee recommended that there should be no statutory requirement to provide information about slaughtering methods. The Government accepted this advice and have no plans to reconsider the issue. Such information may be provided voluntarily if it is true and not misleading.

Animal Slaughter

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure the legal exemption from pre-stunning livestock before slaughter is withdrawn in respect of animals slaughtered for religious purposes. [16519]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have no plans to withdraw this exemption which recognises a fundamental matter of religious belief to communities that are an important part of our national life.

Badgers

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans in respect of badger removal programmes. [16685]

Mrs. Browning: Professor Krebs and his committee are conducting an independent review of the scientific evidence relating to badgers and tuberculosis in cattle. It would be inappropriate to consider changes to the current policy until Professor Krebs has reported.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the (a) current reported outbreaks of bovine tuberculosis and (b) current and proposed badger removal programmes in Gloucester. [16686]

Mrs. Browning: There are currently 37 herds in Gloucestershire under movement restrictions due to bovine TB. There are 13 badger removal operations in progress. A further seven badger removal operations have been approved and investigatory work has commenced on three of these.

European Commission Inspection Report

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a copy of the report received by him from the European Commission following a visit from an inspector from the Commission between 4 to 7 November 1996. [16688]

Mrs. Browning: A report from the European Commission has not been received.

Rabies

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 14 February, Official Report, column 321, what plans he has to consult the British Veterinary Association on possible changes to the United Kingdom's rabies control arrangements when his Department's consideration of the matter has been concluded. [16846]

Mrs. Browning: Should the review conclude that alternative options to quarantine are available, the views of the British Veterinary Association would be sought.

Livestock Transport Adviser

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what qualifications were required in the appointment of a livestock transport adviser; when this position was first established; and if he will list the names, qualifications and experience of each holder of the post. [16689]

Mrs. Browning: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Quarantine

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many owners of quarantine kennels have agreed to abide by the voluntary code of practice on welfare standards in quarantine premises; and how many of those premises have been inspected by the state veterinary service to date. [16690]

Mrs. Browning: Seventy-one owners of quarantine premises have agreed to abide by the voluntary code of practice. Of these, 59 have been inspected by the State Veterinary Service to date.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the inspections by the state veterinary service of quarantine premises that agree to abide by the voluntary code of practice on welfare standards to be completed. [16692]

Mrs. Browning: The majority of inspections by the State Veterinary Service to ensure compliance with the voluntary code of practice have been carried out. But the programme will not be completed as early as originally planned due to the urgency of work connected with the outbreaks of Newcastle disease and the BSE accelerated cull programme. It will be completed as soon as possible.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many quarantine premises have (a) indicated that they will not comply and (b) have not yet responded to the Minister's invitation to comply with the voluntary code of practice on welfare standards. [16693]

Mrs. Browning: Four quarantine premises have indicated that they do not wish to comply with the voluntary code of practice at this stage. Two have not yet responded to the invitation.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many ports and airports through which cats and dogs may be imported into the United Kingdom have facilities for holding animals prior to them being taken into quarantine. [16694]

Mrs. Browning: Five ports and nine airports.

Challenge for Agriculture Programme

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in implementing the challenge for agriculture programme in English objective 5b areas. [17476]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Six areas in England are designated for support under objective 5b of the EC structural funds. They are:

The South West—Cornwall, the Isles of Scilly and parts of Devon and Somerset;

The Marches—most of Shropshire and parts of Hereford and Worcester;

The Northern uplands—parts of Lancashire, parts of north and east Yorkshire, Durham, Cumbria and Northumberland;

Lincolnshire—Most of northern and eastern Lincolnshire, excluding the city of Lincoln and other mainly urban areas;

East Anglia—the Fens, rural Norfolk, Lowestoft and rural east Suffolk; and Midland uplands—Peak district of Staffordshire and Derbyshire.

The challenge for agriculture programme is formed of those elements of the objective 5b programmes which are part-financed by the guidance section of the European agriculture guidance and guarantee fund—EAGGF. The programme also attracts national public funding, mainly from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and levers in substantial amounts of private sector funding to support the investments that it encourages.

Assistance is available for a wide range of farm-related activities that will promote economic development in the objective 5b areas, in particular, farm tourism, agricultural and horticultural development and diversification, protection and enhancement of the environment, generation of energy from alternative sources by the agricultural industry and the promotion and marketing of local and regional products.

The first EAGGF projects under the challenge for agriculture programme in England were approved in March 1995. In the two years since then, a total of 144 projects have already been approved across the six designated areas with EAGGF grant of £13 million and MAFF grant of £10 million committed to them. As these projects are implemented, they will lead to the eventual total investment of almost £50 million in the objective 5b areas concerned. Projects supported to date vary from small schemes to develop and promote local meat production to multi-million pound projects promoting farm tourism, offering business support to farmers and protecting the environment.

I am particularly pleased with the interest shown to date in the challenge for agriculture programme across the agricultural sector and expect that many more worthwhile projects will come forward for funding before the end of this programme in 1999. It demonstrates MAFF's commitment to the rural economy, with sound and sustainable economic benefit in the objective 5b areas concerned.

My ministerial colleagues and I maintain a close interest in the development of objective 5b and the challenge for agriculture programme and have previously visited a number of projects which have been approved and are in receipt of funding. Further such visits are planned for 21 February to projects in the northern uplands, the south-west, the Marches and Lincolnshire objective 5b areas.

A list of the challenge for agriculture projects approved to date in each of the six English objective 5b areas has been placed in the Library of the House.

Cattle Cull

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated cost of the disposal per tonne of cattle carcases (a) by incineration, (b) by landfill and (c) by other means. [10342]

Mr. Baldry [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1997]: The cost of rendering and incinerating meat and bonemeal and tallow derived from cattle carcases is around £215 per tonne.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the minimum age requirements enforced by her Department. [15912]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education and Employment is not in general responsible for enforcing age requirements. However, age requirements do apply to certain education, training and employment measures, including the following:

Children must be aged four to be eligible for the nursery voucher scheme.

The majority of places offered under the assisted places scheme begin at age 11. From September 1996, places are now available for the first time for primary age children as young as five. Assisted sixth form places are also available.

Current regulations require pupils to remain at school until one of two dates: for pupils whose birthday falls between 1 September to 31 January, it is the end of the spring term—that is, the Easter holidays—following their 16th birthday; for those whose 16th birthday falls between 1 February to 31 August, it is the Friday before the last Monday in May. The only exception to the above is for those children who have not been registered at a school at any time during the year preceding their 16 birthday. For these children, the upper limit of compulsory school age is their 16 birthday.

For programmes covered by the training and enterprise councils operating agreement, and other associated contractual documentation:

young people have to have reached the minimum school leaving age (as above) before they can join youth programmes; people need to be 18 before they are eligible for training for work;

pupils are eligible to take part in work experience if they are in the last term of year 10 or year 11; children of school age are eligible to use the child care services provided by the out-of school childcare grant.

To receive income-based jobseeker's allowance, claimants must have reached the age of 18; 16 and 17-year-olds may receive JSA however, if they are in circumstances prescribed in the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996—regulations 59, 60 and 61—or if the Secretary of State decides they would suffer severe hardship unless an allowance was paid. In either case, 16 and 17-year-olds must meet the basic requirement conditions for JSA.

The teachers' superannuation regulations impose minimum age requirements in four areas:

membership of the scheme—age 18; purchase of added years—age 20;

retirement on age grounds—age 60;

premature retirement—age 50.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the ways in which her Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of waste management within those buildings her Department occupies; and if she will make a statement. [16429]

Mr. Robin Squire: Departmental waste management centres on internal monitoring of procedures; waste segregation and recycling—that is, white paper, newspaper, aluminium cans, cardboard, toner cartridges, redundant furniture and hazardous waste.

Castle View house, Runcorn is the only new building to come onto the Department's headquarters estate in recent years. Following its completion in 1992, a Building Research Establishment environmental assessment method was successfully completed in December 1993. DfEE HQ has set a waste minimisation target of 5 per cent. for the 1997–98 financial year. A cross-site working group has been set up to co-ordinate waste minimisation and encourage the use of the Environment Agency "DIY Environmental Checklist".

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 26 November 1996, Official Report, column 173, when she intends to publish the results of the research carried out by the Employment Service occupational psychology division. [16682]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 20 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about when the results of the research carried out by the Employment Service Occupational Psychology Division will be published. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

My predecessor, Mike Fogden, said in his letter of 26 November that Occupational Psychology Division were considering their findings and a report would be published in due course. In considering those findings we identified the need to examine in more detail aspects of the help we offer former Incapacity Benefit claimants. We have now decided that it would be more practical and useful to publish that further work, once completed, alongside the original work as a single package. I anticipate publication in late Spring. As Mr. Fogden promised in his earlier letter I will ensure that a copy is sent to you and that one is placed in the Library.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobfinder's Grant

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her latest estimate of the numbers of (a) severe disablement allowance, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) income support claimants who would gain if eligibility for the jobfinder's grant were extended to people in receipt of those benefits at the time of their application. [16673]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 20 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about possible take-up of the Jobfinder's Grant by claimants in receipt of Severe Disablement Allowance, Incapacity Benefit and Income Support. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I understand from the Department of Social Security that the current number of claimants in each of the three groups are approximately as follows: Severe Disablement Allowance—331,000; Incapacity Benefit 1,541,000 and Income Support—2,059,000. Some people may be claiming more than one of these benefits.

We do not know what the take-up of the Jobfinder's Grant amongst these groups would be if it was made available. For jobseekers who have been registered unemployed for two years or more it is about 6%, but we would expect it to be lower for these other groups of claimants, perhaps in the order of 2%, giving a possible take-up of around 80,000.

I hope this is helpful.

Student Loans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many students registered in the (a) first, (b) second, (c) third and (d) fourth years of (i) a university and (ii) a college course applied for a student loan between 1990 and 1996; [16522]

(2) how many students registered in graduate studies applied for a student loan between 1990 and 1996; [16523]

(3) what was the percentage of defaults on student loan repayments between 1990 and 1996. [16524]

Mr. Forth: These are matters for the Student Loans Company. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Education Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to pilot a voucher scheme for education at (a) primary and (b) secondary levels. [16598]

Mr. Robin Squire: None.

Free School Meals

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list, for each education authority in England, (a) the number and percentage of pupils entitled to free school meals for each year since 1992 and (b) the spending on school meals in the same period. [16770]

Mrs. Gillan: As the available information is lengthy, I have arranged for it to be placed in the Library.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amount of the total budget allocated to training and enterprise councils was subsequently allocated to training providers in the most recent year for which figures are available. [16776]

Mr. Paice: Government contracts with TECs for a range of activity as set out in TEC business plans. We do not collect detailed information on TEC payments to training providers.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what monitoring takes place by her Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16760]

Mr. Robin Squire: Non-departmental public bodies sponsored by the Department for Education and Employment operate within the terms of financial memoranda agreed with the Department.

These require NDPBs to establish an internal audit service whose role is to provide assurance on the control arrangements to the accounting officer of the NDPB. This assurance is provided through the implementation of a risk-based audit plan.

Each plan identifies a cyclical programme of reviews designed, over time, to subject the full range of running cost expenditure to system audit. This process reviews those systems that control the use of external consultants. The frequency and depth of review would depend on the perceived degree of "risk" of the various arrangements within the particular organisation.

The Department's own internal audit division ensures that the overall service provided by the internal audit provider to the NDPB is of appropriate quality.

Additionally, NDPBs are aware of the Cabinet Office report on the Government's use of external consultants and have been given copies of the Department's guidance on best practice in the use of external consultants.

Employment Service

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will place in the Library a copy of the Ernst and Young study into the Employment Service headquarters structure. [16772]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 20 February 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question on whether a copy of the Ernst and Young study of the Employment Service Headquarters will be placed in the Library of the House. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

You may find it helpful if I give you some background to the work. The Employment Service (ES) commissioned the consultants Ernst and Young to help the ES Board think through issues concerning the future role of our Headquarters (Head Office and Regional Offices) and to develop an overview of the type of Headquarters the Agency would need. We accomplished this through a series of workshops of ES Board members and senior managers, facilitated by the consultants, who provided advice and fact-finding based on their work in organisations elsewhere. Our aim is now to draw on that work to inform more detailed change projects over the next three years.

Because of the way in which the consultants worked with the ES Board there is no formal consultants' report from the Headquarters Review project, but my predecessor, Mike Fogden, wrote to all staff in Headquarters on 31 October last year summarising the ES Board's main conclusions. I set out the key strands of our thinking and proposals for further work from that communication below.

ES's field operations have previously been subject to rigorous examination of need, effectiveness and cost. The Agency has become smaller as unemployment has fallen and it is now appropriate to apply a similar approach to our Headquarters functions.

Our examination concluded that the ES could be managed better and more cost effectively by eliminating duplication of functions between Head and Regional Offices which lead to reworking and loss of economies of scale; improving our Headquarter business processes; and contracting out some support functions.

This has led us to develop a blueprint for ES Headquarters of a small directing and enabling Head Office and a regional management tier focusing on the delivery of services to our clients.

To realise this, we have commissioned more detailed work to reduce HQ activities in areas not directly related to delivery of services to our clients; rebrigade (possibly to single sites) a number of support functions, and actively explore the scope for contracting out a number of support functions.

I think it worth adding that this is essentially a management issue rather than a policy one and the changes we are proposing will not affect our services to jobseekers and employers through Jobcentres – indeed we aim by focussing our Headquarters more directly on the core business of the ES to improve the services we provide through our Jobcentre network.

I hope this is helpful in giving more information on what we are seeking to achieve.

European Social Fund

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice has been issued to sector managers about the effect of exchange rate changes between the pound and the ecu on 1996 approvals for European social fund moneys; by how much allocations are to be reduced in total; and if she will make a statement. [16774]

Mr. Paice: For the objective 3 programme of the European social fund, it is currently estimated that there will be enough sterling to meet claims for existing projects approved by the Department's European social fund unit in 1996. The monitoring committee responsible for overall management of the objective 3 programme in Great Britain will make the final decision as to what extent further projects should be approved. When it has reached a conclusion on this, the Department will issue appropriate advice to sector managers.

ENVIRONMENT

Brent Spar

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of correspondence between his Department and other bodies regarding the process or content of discussions to dispose of the Brent Spar, as set out in the papers listed as Brent Spar papers 1 to 24, placed in the Library by his Department. [15650]

Mr. Clappison: Since my Department has no statutory powers to exercise in this field, it had no correspondence of the kind contained in the Brent Spar papers 1 to 24 placed in the Library by the Department of Trade and Industry, except that, as one of the UK co-ordinating points for the Oslo and Paris commissions, it received a copy of the letter of 17 February 1995 from the secretariat of those commissions, which forms No. 18 of those papers.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment at what stage and on what date his Department was first consulted by the Department of Trade and Industry about Shell's wish to dispose of the Brent Spar at sea; and if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence between the two Departments on this matter. [15651]

Mr. Clappison: Discussions were held between Departments at various levels and in various contexts. My Department was involved from at least February 1994. It is not the normal practice to publish material passing between Government Departments in the course of preparing advice for Ministers.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the energy conservation authorities which did not submit their first reports to the Secretary of State under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 (a) by 30 November 1996, (b) by 31 December 1996, (c) by 31 January 1997 and (d) to date. [15883]

Mr. Clappison: The energy conservation authorities whose reports were not received by the dates referred to are in the following list:

Migratory Song Birds

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account his Department takes of measures taken by applicant countries to the EU to deter the killing of migratory song birds in determining its policy towards their application. [15793]

Mr. Clappison: Wild birds in the European Union are protected by the provisions of the EC wild birds directive, 79/409/EEC. My Department would expect any new countries who acceded to the EU to abide by the provisions set out in that directive.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make representations to the Government of Cyprus regarding the killing of migratory song birds by hunters; and if he will make a statement. [15795]

Mr. Clappison: Bird protection measures in Cyprus are the responsibility of the Cypriot Government. The British Government are limited in what they can ask of other countries regarding their own legislation.

Water and Sewerage Companies

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the indicative values of the water, and water and sewerage companies used to calculate rates of return for the period 1989 to 1994. [16233]

Mr. Clappison: The indicative values of individual companies formed part of the financial projections which underlay the initial setting of price limits for each company. These financial projections are commercially confidential.

Tranquil Areas

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will map comprehensively the tranquil areas of England as defined by the Council for the Protection of Rural England; and what steps he is taking the preserve the tranquillity of those areas. [16227]

Mr. Clappison: We have no plans to map the tranquil areas of England. Ministers took great interest in the Council for the Protection of Rural England's tranquil area maps project and fully recognise the importance of areas of the countryside where people can go for peace and tranquillity. The Government's White Paper on rural England sets out our framework for maintaining a proper balance between development and protection across the whole of the countryside. The forthcoming revision of planning policy guidance note 7 will emphasise that a central tenet of sustainable development is the integration of development with protection of the environment.

Pollution (North Sea)

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress made by the United Kingdom in meeting the targets set to reduce pollution in the North sea at the second North sea conference held in London in 1987. [16101]

Mr. Clappison: The second North sea conference in 1987 agreed to take measures to reduce urgently and drastically the total quantity of substances that are persistent, toxic and liable to bioaccumulate reaching the aquatic environment of the North sea via rivers and estuaries, with the aim of achieving a substantial reduction—of the order of 50 per cent.—in total inputs from these sources between 1985 and 1995.

As shown in the progress report to the fourth North sea conference, placed in the Library, the UK has achieved reductions of this order for "red list" substances, with the exception of zinc, where diffuse sources such as corrugated iron, cosmetics and car tyres have proved to be more significant than thought in 1987.

Student Accommodation

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many students in further and higher education he estimates were accommodated in the private rented sector in (a) 1987, (b) 1992 and (c) the last year for which figures are available; and what assessment he has made of the growth in student accommodation since 1987. [16166]

Mr. Clappison: The number of students in the private rented sector estimated from the labour force survey are:

Thousands

	Full-time course	Part-time course
1987	260	80
1992	360	130
1996	470	180

Notes:
Students on full-time courses include those on sandwich courses and training in nursing.
Like all estimates based on sample surveys, these figures are subject to sampling variability.
There are no reliable figures on student accommodation yet provided by educational institutions.

Sheffield Development Corporation

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the work of the Sheffield development corporation since its inception; and which organisation has been designated to continue its work. [16292]

Mr. Curry: As my hon. Friend will recall, recognition was given to the work of the Sheffield development corporation during the recent parliamentary debates on the winding up of the corporation—Official Report, Second Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation, 28 January 1997 and Official Report, House of Lords 6 February 1997 columns 1801–04. I fully endorse the views expressed by the Under-Secretary of State. It is clear that there is agreement on all sides that Sheffield development corporation has fulfilled its mission to bring economic regeneration to the lower Don valley and has made a most significant contribution to changing the image of Sheffield.

No single organisation has been designated to continue regeneration in Sheffield. The city council and British Waterways will bring to a conclusion a number of projects under way at the end of the corporation's lifetime. It is for the city council and other local partners to reach a conclusion on whether they wish to establish a single-purpose organisation to take regeneration forward. We have shown our commitment to partnership working in Sheffield by committing £124 million to projects in the city over the next seven years under the single regeneration budget challenge fund, capital challenge and estates renewal challenge fund.

Environmental Performance Checklist

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress with the Environment Agency's production of a DIY environmental performance checklist for premises managers on the Government estate. [16455]

Mr. Clappison: The checklist has been produced, and copies have been sent to green co-ordinators in Government Departments and to premises managers on the Government estate.

English House Condition Survey

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish (a) the main report of the 1996 English house condition survey and (b) the energy report of the 1996 English house condition survey. [16581]

Mr. Clappison: We expect to produce the main report of the 1996 EHCS before the end of this year and the energy report next year.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16576]

Sir Paul Beresford: No Ministers or officials from the Department of the Environment have attended a meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee.

North of England Assembly

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the North of England Assembly to discuss regional government. [15287]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has not met the North of England Assembly.

Social Housing

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are currently on waiting lists for social housing in (a) London, (b) England and (c) Coventry. [16552]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities in England report the number of households on their housing waiting lists at 1 April each year in their annual housing investment programme returns. The latest available figures relate to the position on 1 April 1996, and are given in the 1996 "HIP 1 All Items Print", a copy of which is in the Library.

Corresponding data are not collected centrally for housing associations, some of which do not operate waiting lists.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16759]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is a matter for the management of the bodies concerned.

Homelessness

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for grants to homelessness voluntary organisations under section 180 of the Housing Act 1996. [17264]

Mr. Clappison: The successful grant programme established under section 73 of the Housing Act 1985 will be continued under section 180 of the 1996 Act. The grant programme has been particularly successful in helping single, homeless people to find and keep accommodation, and it continues to represent good value for money.

For 1997–98, the Government have made available £7.9 million to assist voluntary sector organisations to meet the running costs of practical projects which help single people in housing need. In addition to continuing to fund all eligible existing projects, we shall be inviting bids from voluntary organisations to set up new projects in 1997–98.

English Nature

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made on the financial, management and policy review of English Nature. [17265]

Mr. Clappison: The financial management and policy review of English Nature has been completed. The intention of the review was to see whether English Nature's system of internal control over both administrative and programme expenditure were reliable and effective. Today, the report was presented to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment and to the chairman of English Nature, and I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

The review by my Department has made more than 50 recommendations. As a result of the review, there will be a major change in the relationship between the Department and English Nature, which will include the introduction of single running cost control, a revised financial memorandum, and a management statement.

Single running cost control is an annual cash limit for a non-departmental public body running costs which replaces more detailed item scrutiny. It enables a non-departmental public body to manage its own administration expenditure within that limit, subject to such overall constraints as Government policy on pay. The establishment of single running costs control emphasises that primary responsibility for both financial control and value for money rests with the non-departmental public body's own management.

For a non-departmental public body to be able to follow such an approach requires the support, encouragement and co-operation of its sponsoring Department. English Nature and the Department will work together to achieve this aim.

I consider all the recommendations important. Together, they constitute a package which will enable English Nature to continue to ensure that it is operating in an efficient and effective manner.

Water Conservation and Supply

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his response to the first report of the Environment Committee on water conservation and supply (HC 42, 1996–97) published on 20 November 1996. [17475]

Mr. Gummer: The Government have today published their response to the conclusions and recommendations of the Environment Committee's first report on water conservation and supply. We welcome the report, which broadly mirrors the views expressed in our own paper "Water Resources and Supply: Agenda for Action" which we published last October. In that, we set out a framework of policy and strategy to ensure that the water we need in the longer term is provided effectively, efficiently, and in an environmentally sustainable way.

The Government agree with the Committee that leakage reduction must be a top priority for the water companies in relation to water conservation, and notes a recent report from the Director General of Water Services that water companies' revised targets—which he may enforce—aim to reduce losses from their pipes in aggregate to around 15 per cent. of distribution input by the turn of the century. Moreover, the Government consider that it is sensible for water companies to offer their customers free or significantly discounted leakage detection and repair services for supply pipes, particularly where the supply system is stressed.

In 1996, the Government placed water companies under the statutory duty to promote the efficient use of water by their customers. The Director General of Water Services has reviewed companies' draft plans for doing this and is seeking improvements in some cases. As the Government pointed out in "Water Resources and Supply: Agenda for Action," and as the Committee states in its report, it is important for all organisations which are in a position to influence water usage by their employees or by the greater public to set an example, and for water consumers to be responsive.

In promoting water conservation, the Government will be bringing forward in 1998 new regulations to replace the existing water byelaws as a means of preventing wasteful use and undue consumption of water. Through their environmental technology best practice programme, the Government have already provided advice to industry and commerce on reducing water use and will be continuing their initiatives in this field. The Government provide advice to the agricultural sector on storage and efficient use of water, supported by research and development.

The Government share the Committee's concern about the impact of climate change on water resources and demand for water. The work of the Government's climate change impacts review group has focused attention on this issue, and has been made possible in large measure by continuing Government-funded research into climate prediction. The Government are encouraging water companies and the Environment Agency in taking full account of the implications of climate change scenarios for their duties. The Government note the private sector ability of the water companies, under the economic regulation of the Director General of Water Services, to put in place measures to strengthen supplies by making rapid improvements to the existing water supply system, and the investment of more than £400 million for that purpose since 1995.

Our response emphasises the role of water companies, their regulators, the wider water industry and water consumers in contributing to the sustainable management of water resources through water conservation. With the continuing dry weather over much of England and Wales, these issues must remain at the forefront of our attentions. The Government have been monitoring the water resources position since the onset of this dry period in the spring of 1995. We have commissioned the Environment Agency to produce in March a report on the prospects for water supplies, based on the position at the end of February as the likely winter recharge period draws to a close, and on the actions water companies have in hand to fulfil their duty to maintain supplies.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change the 1996–97 external finance limits for the urban development corporations. [17478]

Mr. Gummer: Grant in aid to Teesside development corporation is being increased by £2,000,000 to allow it to bring forward regeneration projects. This will be funded by a transfer from city challenge. There will be an associated increase in the external financing limits for urban development corporations by £2,000,000 from £207,817,000 to 209,817,000.

PRIME MINISTER

Millennium Club

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister how many times over the last three years, he has addressed the Millennium Club in his official capacity; and if he will list the names of those present and the companies they represented on each occasion; and if he will make a statement. [15696]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 February 1997]: None.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Prime Minister what reports he has received on the offer made to prospective members of the Millennium Club by Mr. Alan Lewis, concerning access to Ministers of Her Majesty's Government and influence over Government policy; and if he will make a statement. [15661]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 February 1997]: None.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 20 February. [15459]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 20 February. [15460]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Prime Minister what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16752]

The Prime Minister: For this purpose, my Department is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the replies given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 13 January, Official Report, columns 13–14.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Homes

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many housing associations registered in Scotland are registered with Scottish Homes; and how many of these have elected members of local authorities on the management boards or committees; [16595]

(2) when Scottish Homes expects the Irvine housing association to have drawn up and implemented new membership rules for the association; [16596]

(3) under what rules housing associations are obliged by Scottish Homes to operate in relation to their housing allocation systems; and if Scottish Homes has approved the current housing allocation system operated by the Irvine housing association; [16597]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested relates to operational matters which are the responsibility of Scottish Homes. I have asked the chairman, Mr. John Ward, to write to the hon. Member with the relevant information.

Housing

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what remedy in law is available to Scottish local authorities seeking to improve the condition of a residential property under the ownership of an individual who is allowing it to fall into a state of disrepair; and what responsibilities and duties the different legislative provisions place on the local authority in relation to the property which is the subject of any action. [16599]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Building (Scotland) Act 1959, the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 and the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 give local authorities power in specified circumstances to serve notices on persons having control of houses which are in disrepair or likely soon to be so. The powers under the 1959 Act apply to houses or other buildings which are considered dangerous, those under the 1982 Act are commonly used to require repairs to the exterior of buildings in common ownership, and those under the 1987 Act apply to houses which are considered to be in a state of serious disrepair or are likely to deteriorate rapidly or to cause material damage to another house. In each of these cases, the notice will require the owner to take remedial action within a specified time; if it is not complied with the authority may carry out the works and recover the cost. Similar powers may be available also under local legislation.

Mixed-sex Wards

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to eliminate mixed-sex wards in Scottish national health service hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [16676]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no such proposals at present. However, during 1995, we instructed all trusts and health boards to review current practice in relation to mixed-sex accommodation and to draw up action plans to ensure that patients' concerns are addressed.

In addition, we introduced a new charter commitment from September 1996, so that all patients in Scotland receive prior notification of the type of accommodation in which they will be treated and can defer admission until single-sex accommodation is available if they so wish.

Subsequent checks have confirmed that the issue is being addressed effectively and sensitively by the Scottish health service so that patients' rights and dignity are respected. We continue to monitor closely progress on this issue.

Care and Repair Projects

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what public resources have been made available for care and repair projects in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97; [16677]

(2) how many houses have been improved in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97 with assistance from care and repair projects. [16678]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Comprehensive information is not held centrally. The available information, relating to projects jointly funded by Scottish Homes and local authorities, is set out in the table.

	Revenue funding (estimate)[1] (£ million)	LA capital grant contribution[2] (£ million)	Number of homes covered
1994–95 (outturn)	0.8	3.1	616
1995–96 (outturn)	1.0	3.7	794
1996–97 (planned)	1.2	3.2	750

Scottish Homes.
Notes:
[1] Total revenue funding for salaries and other running costs of projects estimated by grossing up from Scottish Homes contribution, which is normally matched equally by local authorities.
[2] Contributions are in the form of improvement and repair grants for works costs. Other costs are met from care and repair client's own resources, and charitable and other funding. Scottish Homes does not contribute to these costs.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16751]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Non-departmental public bodies are established to operate at arm's length from Government, often under specific statutory powers. An NDPB's governing body is responsible for the management and control of the body's functions.

Ministers and their Departments are responsible for monitoring the performance of the NDPBs which they sponsor, and for ensuring that they operate within the framework of controls set out in the Treasury and Cabinet Office guidance "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: A Guide for Departments."

A Scottish Office booklet, "The Hiring and Managing of External Consultants", which draws on the recommendations of an efficiency scrutiny "The Government's Use of External Consultants"—published in November 1995—gives guidance on best practice in the procurement and management of external consultants. This booklet is available to all Scottish Office NDPBs.

Mr. Alan Lewis

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the occasions on which Scottish Office Ministers have met Mr. Alan Lewis in an official capacity since 1987; and what subjects were discussed on each occasion. [15664]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 13 February 1997]: The Department's records indicate that my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade, the then Minister of State at the Scottish Office, met Mr. Lewis in an official capacity on 7 July 1988 to discuss industry matters.

Messrs Kynoch Of Keith

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost of the public support provided to Messrs Kynoch of Keith; and how many jobs have been created or protected in Scotland as a result of that support. [15667]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 13 February 1997]: The public financial support which the Kynoch Group plc, formerly G. and G. Kynoch, has received has been through the investment by the former Scottish development agency which has passed to Scottish Enterprise as its successor body. Scottish Enterprise's investment in Kynoch Group plc is an operational matter within the delegated authority of Scottish Enterprise and I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Illingworth Morris and Crombie Mills

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what discussions his Department held with (a) Crombie Mills of Aberdeen and (b) Illingworth Morris between 1988 and 1993; [15812]

(2) what discussions (a) he and (b) his Department held with Mr. Alan Lewis about (i) Illingworth Morris and (ii) Crombie Mills of Aberdeen in the period 1988 to 1993. [15811]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 February 1997]: The Department's records indicate that my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, then Minister of State for Industry at the Scottish Office, met Mr. Lewis on 7 July 1988 to discuss industry matters. Subsequently on 5 September 1989 he visited J. and J. Crombie, Grandholm Mills, Aberdeen.

The Department's records also indicate a discussion between an official of the Department and a representative of J. and J. Crombie on or around 3 June 1991, to establish information about the closure of Grandholm Mills, which had just been announced.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance was provided from public funds to (a) Crombie Mills of Aberdeen and (b) Illingworth Morris between 1988 and 1993. [15813]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 17 February 1997]: None.

Council House Waiting Lists

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were on council house waiting lists in Scotland in (a) each Scottish local authority and (b) Scotland as a whole in each year from 1990 to 1996; and if he will make a statement. [15893]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Reliable information is not held centrally.

Road Construction

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of (a) motorway and (b) trunk roads have been constructed in Scotland for each year since 1992; and what percentage in each year was in rural areas. [16272]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information set out as follows is the motorway and trunk road milage constructed on major schemes completed in Scotland in each year since 1992. This information is not held centrally for minor schemes.

Miles

Year	Motorway (length)	Trunk road (length)
1992	12.5	9.5
1993	6.3	16.4
1994	16.5	5.5
1995	16.1	2.5
1996	9.2	4.5

At least 80 per cent. of this total mileage over the five-year period was constructed in rural areas.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of (a) motorway and (b) trunk roads he proposes to construct in (i) 1997 and (ii) 1998. [16273]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is not possible to give a precise figure of mileage to be constructed in any future year. In 1997, a total of 20.7 miles of motorway and 12 miles of trunk road major schemes will be under construction or will commence construction. In 1998, a further 13.7 miles of motorway and 3.9 miles of trunk road is programmed for construction.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the total expenditure on (a) motorway and (b) trunk road construction in Scotland since 1992. [16295]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Major scheme expenditure on motorways and trunk roads in Scotland since 1992 is set out in the following table. As it is not practical to attempt to extract and allocate the expenditure on minor schemes over this period to either motorway or trunk road, this has been listed separately.

£ million

Year	Motorway	Trunk Road	Minor Schemes
1992–93	90	25.1	17.1
1993–94	56.5	45.1	9.9

Departmental Salaries

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff in his Department and each of its executive agencies earn a gross annual salary of £43,000 or more. [16297]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of staff in the Scottish Office and its executive agencies earning a gross annual salary of £43,000 or more at 1 January 1997 is shown in the following table.

All staff in the Scottish Office and its executive agencies earning a gross annual salary of £43,000 or more at 1 January 1997

Department	Total
Scottish Office (core)	220
Executive agencies	10
Scottish Office (excluding SPS)	230

Pupils

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage and how many (a) primary school pupils and (b) secondary school pupils were in classes of over 30 in the latest census (i) in each local authority and (ii) in total; and what was the (1) actual and (2) percentage change in numbers against the previous year's census. [16296]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Statistics on class size in primary schools are collected biennially. The available information is given in the table. Schools have been allocated to their current education authority. Information on individual class sizes in secondary schools is not collected centrally.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to expand opportunities within the aid programme for British consultants in (a) fisheries and (b) other matters, following United Kingdom withdrawal from UNIDO. [16356]

Dr. Liam Fox: Wide-ranging opportunities for British consultants are already available under the British development programme. The ODA is actively developing a new strategy for strengthening its links with the private sector in a broad range of sectors.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the decision to withdraw from UNIDO on (a) developing countries and (b) employment of British consultants by UNIDO. [16532]

Dr. Fox: The impact of UK withdrawal from UNIDO will have little effect on developing countries. The Government believe that greater impact for developing countries can be achieved by the use of other channels for our resources. There is no restriction in UNIDO's statute on consultancies being awarded to non-member states.

St. Helena

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if an aid settlement has yet been agreed for St. Helena. [16536]

Dr. Liam Fox: I am pleased to advise that my right hon. and noble Friend, the Minister for Overseas Development has this month approved a £26 million development commitment to St. Helena covering the next three years. This significant allocation, which represents an increase over previous plans, is linked to an agreement between the St. Helena Government and Her Majesty's Government on a three-year country policy plan. This provides a detailed framework for the reform and development of the island's economy. It illustrates the Government's continuing commitment to ensuring economic development and proper governance of the UK dependent territories as a whole.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Comparative Statistics

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy when asked by hon. Members to provide comparative statistics between Northern Ireland and other parts of the United Kingdom, or the United Kingdom as a whole, to obtain the necessary figures from other Departments and to publish them. [15819]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: No. It would not be appropriate to provide statistical information on subjects for which I am not responsible.

Car Parking Spaces

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many car parking spaces are provided (a) on the Stormont estate and (b) at Rosepark House (i) free of charge and (ii) for which charges are made; how many were provided five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [15817]

Mr. Moss: There are some 2,461 parking spaces in the Stormont estate, including 240 at Netherleigh, and 235 at Rosepark house. The corresponding figures five years ago were 2,405, including 240 at Netherleigh, and 230. Charges are not made for the use of these spaces.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16753]

Sir John Wheeler: The central Northern Ireland civil service guidance on employment of consultants is derived from the efficiency unit's 1994 report on "The Government's Use of External Consultants". Each Northern Ireland Department has, as required, drawn that guidance to the attention of its non-departmental public bodies. It is then for the Department concerned to settle the appropriate monitoring arrangements for NDPB's conduct in this area, taking account of the particular circumstances in which each NDPB operates.

Housing

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the percentage change in the number of households assessed as being in priority need by the Housing Executive between 1986 and 1996. [16879]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive whose chief executive has advised me that the category "priority need" was established in 1989 and that the information from that date is as follows:

Year	Number in priority need
1989–90	3,604
1995–96	5,166
Change	43 per cent.

The total number of presenters increased by 61 per cent. from 6,675 in 1989–90 to 10,768 in 1995–96.

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many households have presented themselves as homeless to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each of the last five years and the current year to date; and what percentage of those have been assessed as being (a) unintentionally homeless and (b) in priority need. [16880]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the chief executive has advised me that the information is as follows:

col. a	col. b	col. c	Unintentionally homeless[1] col. d	col. e	col. f	col. g
Year	Presented as homeless	Intentionally homeless	Number	Percentage (d/b)	In priority need	Percentage (f/b)

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the minimum age requirements enforced by his Department. [15917]

Mr. Streeter: The statutory minimum age requirements enforced by the Lord Chancellor's Departments and the agencies for which the Lord Chancellor has ministerial responsibility are as follows.

Individuals under the age of 18 cannot act on their own behalf as plaintiffs. Proceedings are issued through a next friend or guardian ad litem. This applies in all cases unless the claim is being made for the recovery of wages—County Courts Act 1984, section 47. In those circumstances, minors can act for themselves.

An individual under the age of 18 cannot act on his or her own behalf as a defendant in civil proceedings. This applies in all cases save where the claim is for a liquidated amount and permission has been granted by the court allowing the minor to act for him or herself.

Jurors qualify for jury service if they are at least 18 years old on the day jury service is to start.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many asylum seekers have appealed against refusals of asylum received since July 1996 for each month since July 1996. [15806]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Doug Henderson, dated 20 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of appeals received for each month since July 1996 from asylum seekers who have been refused asylum.

The number of appeals received per month by the Immigration Appellate Authority since July are as follows:

1996

July: 2,242

August: 1,656

September: 1,822

October: 2,909

November: 2,165

December: 1,552

1997

January: 2,375

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16185]

Mr. Streeter: This reply is given on behalf of the Court Service, the Land Registry, the Northern Ireland Court Service, the Public Record Office, the Lord Chancellor's Department headquarters and its associated offices, and the Public Trust Office. No comprehensive records are held centrally and it has not therefore been possible in the time available to supply all the information sought or to verify some of the details provided.

Total expenditure in the Court Service during 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 to date was £927,575, £2,103,273 and £1,870,237 respectively. No information is held centrally about the names of the agencies used, the number of staff employed or the length of contracts. It has not therefore been possible to determine the median cost per person recruited.

The Public Record Office has used five agencies; Blue Arrow, Brook Street, Reed, Kelly Services and Hays Accountancy. Total expenditure in 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 to date was £149,968.57, £223,260.31 and £202,034.45 respectively. No information is available about the number of staff employed or the length of the contracts. It has not therefore been possible to determine the median cost per person recruited.

Cost information for the Public Trust Office and LCD headquarters was not kept separately during 1994–95 but total expenditure in this year was £439,462. This related to the employment of 134 agency staff in LCD headquarters and its associated offices, and 38 agency staff in the Public Trust Office.

The Public Trust Office has used six employment agencies in the last three years; Ecco Employment Agency Hays Accountancy Personnel, Eclipse, Myriad, Key Entry and Recruit Plc. In 1995–96, 125 staff were employed; and in 1996–97 to date, 127 staff have been employed, at a cost of £24,208 and £514,717 respectively.

In LCD headquarters and its associated offices, 108 agency staff were employed during 1995–96, and 113 in 1996–97 to date, at a cost of £834,534 and £565,490 respectively. A total of 12 agencies have been used; Alfred Marks, City Centre Bureau, PS Personnel, Eclipse, Workflow, Kelly Services, Excel, Dagmar Tara, Premier Ltd and Adecco UK Ltd. As neither organisation holds detailed records, it has not been possible to determine the median cost per person recruited.

The Northern Ireland Court Service has used two employment agencies during the period in question; Grafton Recruitment and Kennedy Recruitment. A total of eight, seven and six staff were employed in the last three years, at a cost of £73,946,78, £36,213.77 and £36,610.88 respectively. Based on 1966 figures, the median cost in respect of Grafton Recruitment was approximately £60 per day, £4.50 per hour in respect of Kennedy Recruitment but the average length of contract is not known, as each case varied according to staffing needs.

The Land Registry has not used private employment agencies in the last three years.

Whitemoor Prison (Escape)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will place a copy of the transcript of the second Whitemoor escape trial in the Library. [16543]

Mr. Streeter: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question as to whether a copy of the transcript of the second Whitemoor escape trial will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

The trial judge gave two rulings: one on discharging the jury, and a second on the contempt of court proceedings. A transcript has been made of these rulings and I will ensure that a copy is placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16755]

Mr. Streeter: Five non-departmental public bodies have the budgetary power to appoint external consultants. They are all required to report to the Department at regular intervals showing expenditure on external consultants/professional fees. Guidance on best practice on the procurement and management of external consultants is contained in the efficiency unit scrutiny report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants", which is available to all NDPBs.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Equipment and Furniture

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will list the cost and number of items of equipment and furniture that (a) have been stolen and (b) are otherwise unaccounted for from the House during the past 12 months, listing by name any such items valued at £5,000 or more, and showing information technology material separately. [17058]

Sir Raymond Powell: Some 12 items valued in total at approximately £10,000 have been reported stolen or otherwise unaccounted for in the House of Commons during the past 12 months. Of these, two were IT equipment. No item was valued at £5,000 or more.

WALES

BSE

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of BSE cases in Wales to date; and if he will make a statement. [15833]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The latest number of confirmed BSE cases in Wales is as follows:

Year	Cases
Pre 21 June 1988	54
21 June 1988 to 31 December 1988	131
1989	507
1990	1,083

EU Funding

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the income, from grants, subsidies and other payments received by or on behalf of Wales from the European Union in each of his last three years. [15993]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 14 February 1977]: Over the last three calendar years, project sponsors in Wales have received structural fund payments of over £123 million. However, since there is no obligation on direct applicants to European schemes to notify my Department, and since many EU schemes of assistance involve a direct approach to the Commission or use of an intermediary, the total income into Wales from all European funded sources will be somewhat greater.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16181]

Mr. Hague: Information is not kept in the form requested. The available information is as follows:

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16424]

Mr. Hague: My Department has examined its waste management activity and, as a result, various initiatives are in place which are improving overall efficiency and reducing environmental effects.

In particular, the Welsh Office has a range of targets aimed at reducing the amount of waste it sends to landfill. Substantial quantities of waste paper, aluminium cans, toner cartridges, plastics, old wooden pallets and polythene packaging are being directed away from landfill.

In addition to the environmental benefits, these initiatives are bringing significant financial gains through the generation of revenue and reduction in waste disposal costs.

My Department is committed to doing more where possible in future. Welsh Office staff are regularly encouraged toward further improved performance including the minimisation of waste at source.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental of Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and

(b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings which his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16284]

Mr. Hague: My Department's property management regime provides for professional consultants to carry out regular inspections and assessments of Welsh Office buildings aimed at identifying all significant hazardous materials. Welsh Office property records highlight factors relating to our buildings which present a potential health and environmental hazard. From the information compiled, annual maintenance programmes are devised and implemented to ensure full compliance with statutory and health and safety obligations.

Specifically, asbestos registers are maintained for all Welsh Office property. Other significant health and environmental hazards covered by Welsh Office risk management arrangements include: legionella, water chlorination, radon and ozone-depleting substances.

Welsh Office policy on ozone-depleting substances is to reduce and ultimately eliminate their use in its buildings. My Department has replaced all halon fire extinguishers with ozone-friendly alternatives. It has also established an inventory of the remaining equipment which contain ozone-depleting chemicals. These substances are used mainly by the Welsh Office in the operation of the main refrigeration plant. All such systems are subject to stringent maintenance regimes intended to readily detect any abnormalities.

NHS Trusts (Pay Rises)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what data he has collected from national health service trusts in Wales on the pay rises which have been awarded to chief executives of trusts during this wage round (a) in percentage terms and (b) in money terms. [16768]

Mr. Hague: None. Details will be included in annual reports, which will be placed in the Library. The amount of remuneration is a matter for each trust to determine. I will ask the chairman of the relevant trust to write to the hon. Member if he will provide details of individual cases of concern.

Nurses

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what data he has collated on the numbers employed in the NHS in Wales as agency nurses, and bank nurses on a whole-time equivalent basis. [16771]

Mr. Hague: Information on agency and bank nurses is not collected centrally. However, informal inquiries in 1995 suggested that the contribution made by such staff was around 500 whole-time equivalents.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16748]

Mr. Hague: The use of external consultants by those non-departmental public bodies sponsored by my Department is subject to the same controls as apply to all their activities which are funded by public expenditure. These include operating within the parameters of management statements and financial memoranda agreed with the Treasury and the Department, audit scrutiny and a structured programme of corporate planning.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many student nurses have been accepted on courses under Project 2000 in each year since its commencement; how many student nurses have dropped out during their courses; and how many Project 2000 qualified nurses have not taken up employment as nurses in the national health service in Wales. [16769]

Mr. Hague: The information is as follows. Information on numbers who have not taken up employment in the national health service in Wales is not collected centrally.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. Former Yugoslavia

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the French Foreign Minister about the outcome of the latter's meeting with the leaders of the opposition in Yugoslavia; what plans he has for a similar meeting; and if he will make a statement. [16582]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The French Foreign Ministry has briefed us on the outcome of the Serbian opposition leaders' recent visit to Paris. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary hopes to be able to see the three leaders in London on 26 February.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16570]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Ministers attend Scottish Grand Committee meetings as part of their normal parliamentary duties and officials do so as part of their normal departmental duties. Expenditure falling to the Department has been limited to travelling costs. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary attended the Scottish Grand Committee meeting on Friday 5 July 1996 in Dumfries and Monday 13 January 1997 in Edinburgh and had officials in attendance as necessary.

Turkey

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Turkish Government to review the prison sentence imposed on Soner Onder at the Istanbul state security court on 12 December 1996. [16775]

Mr. David Davis: We have been following the case of Mr. Soner Onder closely and with concern. We understand that Mr. Onder will exercise his right of appeal. Our embassy in Ankara has made sure that the Turkish authorities are fully aware of the widespread dismay here at his sentence.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16758]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, on 13 February 1997, Official Report, column 296.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Minimum Age Requirements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the minimum age requirements enforced by her Department. [15918]

Mr. Sproat: The Department and the two agencies for which it is responsible—Historic Royal Palaces and The Royal Parks—have a minimum age requirement of 16 for external recruitment. The agencies have a minimum age of 17 for jobs involving driving, and The Royal Parks has a minimum age of 18 and a half years for the recruitment of constables.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the ways in which her Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of (a) energy use and (b) waste management within those buildings her Department occupies; and if she will make a statement. [16418]

Mr. Sproat: Following an external energy audit, my Department is undertaking a phased implementation of work to our buildings to achieve a cost-effective reduction in energy consumption. This will assist in my Department's efforts to make 8 per cent. savings in consumption by 2000, against a base line setting year of 1994–95, in accordance with targets set by green Ministers. A waste audit is also being undertaken to aid the process of setting realistic targets for waste minimisation in the near future. Paper saving measures are already in place as well as recycling schemes for glass, cans, plastic cups and paper.

Torbay Cinema

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will take steps to ensure the protection of the listed features of the Torbay cinema. [16540]

Mr. Sproat: The Torbay cinema is a grade II* listed building, and is protected under the provisions of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990. Listed building consent is required for demolition of the building and for any works of alteration or extension which would affect its special character. Any application for consent is a matter for the local planning authority in the first instance. In determining applications for consent, the local planning authority must take account of Government policy as set out in planning policy guidance note 15: "Planning and the Historic Environment". The guidance advises that there should be a general presumption in favour of the preservation of listed buildings. In the case of listed building consent, applications relating to grade I and II* buildings, the local planning authority is required to notify English Heritage and—if it is minded to grant consent—my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, who is empowered to call in cases for his own decision.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment her Department had made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings her Department occupies; and if she will make a statement. [16312]

Mr. Sproat: My Department employs consultants to undertake assessments in accordance with statutory requirements so as to identify hazardous material in buildings occupied. Registers are maintained of any known materials and regular further inspections made.

In respect of ozone-depleting substances, all equipment where such substances exist is maintained by external contractors in accordance with statutory and best practice requirements as part of their terms of employment. Risk assessments are carried out as part of this work.

British Library

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the original estimated cost of the new British library project in London; what is the latest estimated cost; and how much of this cost will be met by central Government. [16447]

Mr. Sproat: The original estimated cash cost of the whole of the new British library project was £450 million. It now stands at £511.1 million. The project is being funded wholly by central Government.

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of her Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if she will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16566]

Mr. Sproat: No Ministers or officials from the Department of National Heritage have attended a meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what monitoring takes place by her Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16754]

Mr. Sproat: Non-departmental public bodies are established to operate at arm's length from the Department and are often set up under specific statutory powers. An NDPB's board has responsibility for the day-to-day management and control of the body's functions, including the use of external consultants.

My Department is responsible for monitoring the performance of the NDPBs it sponsors, and for ensuring that they operate within a framework of controls drawn up between my Department and its NDPBs. Within this framework, they are given administrative delegations within which they operate. The use of external consultants is one such delegated limit. If the NDPB wishes to let a contract above its delegated limit, it must seek my Department's prior approval.

Television Licence (Pensioners)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will implement the recommendation of the Peacock committee that pensioners on supplementary benefit should not have to pay a television licence fee. [16583]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 19 February 1997]: The Peacock committee report of 1986 recommended that pensioners drawing supplementary pension in households wholly dependent on a pension should be exempt from the television licence fee. Supplementary pension was replaced in 1988 by the income support scheme. The cost of identifying pensioners drawing income support in households wholly dependent on a pension would be disproportionate and the only realistic alternative would therefore be to introduce free television licences for all pensioners drawing income support. Such a measure would inevitably prompt demands for similar treatment for other people on income support, many of whom might be thought to have an equally valid claim to a concession. The cost of any such concession in lost licence fee revenue would be considerable and would need to be offset by an increase in the licence fee for all other licence holders, including pensioners. The Government are not persuaded that this would be justified.

TREASURY

Finance Bill

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations took place in respect of clauses 51 to 54 of the Finance Bill before presentation of the Bill. [16103]

Mr. Oppenheim: Customs published a consultation document, entitled "Rationalisation of Debt Recovery Law" in May 1996. It was sent to 180 trade and advisory bodies and invited comments on Customs' proposal for changes to the existing debt recovery legislation.

ECOFIN

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union. [17101]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I represented the UK at the Economic and Finance Council of the European Union in Brussels on 17 February.

The Council carried out an examination of the Belgian new convergence programme for the period 1997 to 2000 and welcomed the programme's strategy for fiscal consolidation as credible, adequate to the particular public finance conditions of Belgium and well adapted to the institutional structure of the state.

The Council agreed in principle to provide exceptional financial assistance to Armenia, Georgia and Tajikistan. A final decision will be taken at a later meeting following a formal Commission proposal for this assistance. This is subject to a UK parliamentary scrutiny reserve.

The Council also discussed the possibility of providing macrofinancial assistance to the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. This will be discussed again at a later meeting. It is subject to a UK parliamentary scrutiny reserve.

The Council then discussed the economic situation in the European Union. All member states were cautiously optimistic about the prospects for 1997 but agreed on the need for structural reform, including labour market flexibility, to tackle unemployment.

Single European Currency

Sir Raymond Whitney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic and commercial effects of British membership of a European single currency. [15052]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 19 February 1997]: A hard-headed assessment of the economics and commercial effects of UK membership of the single currency will be made nearer the time, when it is necessary for a decision to be made on whether or not we should participate. At the moment, there are still considerable uncertainties, most notably on what degree of sustainable convergence will have been achieved by other member states.

Correspondence

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie his Department's delay in replying to the letters from the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West dated 11 September 1996 and 12 December 1996, regarding his constituent, Mr. Alton Murphy; and if he will make a statement. [14036]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 6 February 1997]: The correspondence from Mr. Murphy related to claims for amounts overpaid as VAT in relation to supplies of spectacles. The reply has been delayed because Customs has been considering whether opticians' claims for overpayments are subject to the three-year time limit on VAT refunds in view of an earlier trade agreement with Customs. The matter was considered during judicial review proceedings decided last November, and Customs has since sought further legal advice in the light of the judge's comments. Customs announced on 10 February that there will be special transitional arrangements for opticians' claims, and I shall be replying fully to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlie his Department's delay in replying to the letters from the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West dated 15 October 1996 and 12 December 1996, regarding his constituent, Mr. M. J. Walker; and if he will make a statement. [14037]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 6 February 1997]: Mr. Walker's correspondence related to claims for amounts overpaid as VAT arising from a recalculation of tax due following a change of the VAT retail scheme used. Claims for repayment of overpayments are now subject to a three-year time limit, the introduction of which resulted in an enormous volume of correspondence, both on the principle of introducing a time limit and the effect on particular businesses. This has unfortunately led to delays in replying to correspondence, but I shall be writing to the hon. Member shortly.

Millennium Club

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times over the last three years, he has addressed the Millennium Club in his official capacity; and if he will list the names of those present and the companies they represented on each occasion; and if he will make a statement. [15693]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 13 February 1997]: None in my official capacity.

HEALTH

Tropical Diseases

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of tropical diseases have been diagnosed within the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate he has made of the cost to the national health service of treating these cases. [16267]

Mr. Horam: Information on the numbers of all diseases notifiable under various Public Health (Infectious Diseases) Regulations in England and Wales are published by the Office for National Statistics in the publications "MB2 Communicable Disease Statistics", annually, and "MB2" Infectious Disease Statistics", quarterly. Where known, numbers of cases of diseases contracted abroad are given. In addition, the public health laboratory service collects data voluntarily submitted by laboratories on those tropical diseases confirmed by laboratory tests and these are published in the PHLS's communicable disease report. Copies of these publications are available in the Library. Information on the cost to the NHS from travel-related infection is not held centrally. Questions relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, respectively.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg) of 29 January, Official Report, columns 269–72 on PFI schemes in the health service, if he will list for each PFI scheme within his Department's responsibility not included in those answers information equivalent to that set out in the table in columns 271–72. [14852]

Mr. Horam: The table gives the information requested for schemes, where the information is held centrally which have reached preferred bidder status or beyond, and which are not included in the tables referred to in my reply to the hon. Member for the City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg) on 29 January at columns 269–72.

[1] Date of Health Authority not known centrally for cases which have not received full business case approval.
[2] Selected.
[3] Not yet approved or signed.
[4] These three schemes are for new hospitals which the NHS Executive have been informed of since the answer given in column 271–272 of the Official Report of 29 January 1997.
[5] Not applicable either because the Health Authority itself is commissioning the scheme or because Health Authority approval is not required in cases where the scheme has no impact on the method or delivery of clinical services.

Disability Services

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is given to local authority social services departments concerning (a) the unit cost of the personal care needs of disabled people and (b) the unit cost of services provided by or on behalf of the authority for personal care when considering eligibility for assistance with independent living. [16269]

Mr. Burns: Local authorities have the responsibility to assess individual needs and, where appropriate, to arrange support cost effectively. The Department of Health does not give detailed guidance on these issues.

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings which his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16277]

Mr. Horam: In the buildings for which it is responsible, the Department of Health has undertaken surveys to identify the presence of hazardous materials and ozone-depleting substances. Positive action has been taken to reduce or safely contain any such elements.

(a) Hazardous materials: buildings occupied by the Department do not contain any significant amounts of hazardous substances. Where their presence is unavoidable, they are identified, registered and recorded in accordance with legislation.

(b) Ozone-depleting substances: halon fire extinguishers are being phased out of all our buildings and refrigeration units are being replaced with energy efficient CFC-free equipment. Major air conditioning systems in our buildings are equipped with leak-detection sensors.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16416]

Mr. Horam: In the buildings for which it is responsible, the Department of Health operates an effective energy and environment action plan, which promotes all aspects of green housekeeping and which is reviewed regularly.

Each of our main buildings has been equipped with recycling facilities for common waste items for some time and we continue to look at ways of extending the range of waste collected for recycling. We now monitor the volumes of waste in these buildings to give a quantitative measure of the progress we are making in this area.

Penile Implants

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the health effects on men of silicone leakage from penile implants. [16901]

Mr. Horam: No research has been commissioned or evaluated on silicone leakage from penile implants.

Breast Implants

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the health effects on women of silicone migration from breast implants. [16900]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health has established a national breast implant registry to facilitate future research projects. Department of Health officials together with the relevant independent expert groups have evaluated all published research on this subject.

Health Service Staff Contracts

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff employed by NHS trusts or health boards are on local contracts outwith Whitley agreements. [16745]

Mr. Malone: Precise information is not available centrally. However, the current estimate is that in England 13 per cent. of staff are on locally negotiated contracts.

Out-of-hours Patients (Transport)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received regarding the provision of transport for out-of-hours patients in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [16609]

Mr. Malone: We have received no representations on this subject recently. The new general practitioner out-of-hours arrangements have been a great success, improving the quality of care for patients while easing the personal burden on the individual GP.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what mechanisms financial support is given towards the costs of travel of out-of-hours patients required by their doctor to make their way to primary care centres. [16610]

Mr. Horam: There is no provision for reimbursing any costs patients may incur while travelling to receive primary care.

Glaucoma

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients suffering from glaucoma were treated by general practitioners during (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94 and (c) 1994–95. [16611]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of patients treated by their general practitioner for glaucoma is not available centrally.

Nurses and Midwives (Training)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pre-registration nursing and midwifery students commenced training as initial entrants by means of (a) salaried student places, (b) Project 2000 and (c) undergraduate study in each of the last five years. [16612]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting for England for the information that is available on entries to and discontinuation from training.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16757]

Mr. Horam: Non-departmental public bodies are responsible for monitoring the use of external consultants as part of their operational management responsibilities; but the Department would expect to be made aware of plans for any major consultancies.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Hazardous Materials (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment his Department had made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16317]

Mr. Bates: The Cabinet Office, its agencies and the Central Office of Information undertake assessments of hazardous materials in accordance with the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988. The use of ozone depleting substances is kept to the minimum.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department had made of the presence of (a) hazardous materials and (b) ozone-depleting substances within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16306]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Paymaster General.

Environmental Audit (Departmental Buildings)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the ways in which his Department has demonstrated the ability to improve efficiency and competitiveness through an environmental audit of waste management within those buildings his Department occupies; and if he will make a statement. [16428]

Mr. Bates: The Cabinet Office, the agencies and the Central Office of Information play a full part in supporting the initiatives being carried forward in response to the 1990 White Paper, "This Common Inheritance", including membership of the Green Ministers' Group. Minimising waste is at the core of the Department's energy and environmental policy, which is supported by an action plan. The policy has proved effective during the first five years of the Government's campaign to reduce energy consumption and improve environmental performance; the Department has achieved its objective of meeting the Government's target of a 15 per cent. reduction in energy consumption to April 1996. The headquarters buildings in London recently received an award from Westminster city council for its contribution since 1992 to its recycling scheme.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mustard Gas Experiments

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what steps the War Pensions Agency has taken to evaluate the systems in (a) Australia, (b) the United States of America and (c) Canada for compensating former service personnel who are suffering long-term ill health as a result of mustard gas experiments conducted by their own Governments in previous years; [14383]

(2) if the burden of proof is on the claimant to prove his or her case in cases in which service personnel are claiming disablement as a result of experiments at the chemical defence establishment at Porton Down; [14384]

(3) if he will list the regulations introduced by his Department since 1986 which relate to claims made by individuals claiming disablement as a result of experiments at the chemical defence establishment, Porton Down; [14390]

(4) what evaluation has been made by the War Pension Agency of the findings on the long-term health effects of mustard gas and lewisite reached by the US Institute of Medicine committee in its report "Veterans at Risk—the health effects of mustard gas and lewisite" edited by Constance Pechura and David Rall published in January 1993; and what was the basis of the evaluation. [14847]

Mr. Heald: No steps have been taken to evaluate either the US Institute of Medicine report quoted, or the systems in Australia, Canada and the United States of America for compensating former service personnel who may be suffering long-term ill health as a result of mustard gas experiments.

Under the war pensions scheme, where a claim is made within seven years of termination of service, the onus is on the Secretary of State to show beyond reasonable doubt that service has played no part in the cause or course of the claimed disablement. For claims made more than seven years after leaving service, where the onus is on the claimant, he is required only to raise at least a reasonable doubt, based on reliable evidence, that a condition may be due to service. The benefit of any reasonable doubt is always given to the claimant.

No regulations relate specifically to Porton Down experiments. The Naval, Military and Air Forces etc. (Disablement and Death) Service Pensions Order 1983, applies to all claims in respect of disablement due to service.

1987–165: Uprating order.

1988–248: Uprating order plus changes relating to income support.

1988–2248: Provisions for payment of pension by direct credit transfer.

1989–156: Uprating order plus amendments due to introduction of the community charge.

1990–250: Uprating order plus amendment to definition of the term "public funds".

1990–1308: Extension of entitlement to mobility supplement to the deaf-blind.

1991–766: Uprating order plus extension of entitlement to mobility supplement to certain amputees.

1992–710: Uprating order plus abolition of dependent's allowance and reduction in qualifying period for mobility allowance.

1992–3208: Abolition of gratuities for noise— induce sensorineural hearing loss of less than 20 per cent.

1993–598: Uprating order plus abolition of rank additions, education allowance and restoration of certain widow's pensions and amendments consequential to the introduction of council tax.

1994–772: Uprating order plus amendment to the definition of "injury" to exclude the effects of tobacco and consumption of alcohol and provisions relating to the suspension of pensions pending an appeal.

1994–1906: Supplementary pension for "pre-1973" widows.

1995–766: Uprating order plus effect of the disability living allowance mobility component on entitlement to mobility supplement and minor amendments concerning the suspension of pension pending appeal.

1996–732: Uprating order plus restoration of widow's pensions.

1996–1638: Provision for "pre-1914 War" and "inter war years" cases.

1996–2882: Manner and date of claim provisions.

Back-to-work Bonus

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number of (a) men and (b) women who have received a back-to-work bonus; what has been the average amount of the bonus in each case; and what has been the total cost of the scheme to date. [15075]

Mr. Burt: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Back-to-work bonus statistics[1]

	All claimants
Number of bonus payments made from October 1996 to January 1997[2]	3,000
Total amount of bonus payments made from October 1996 to January 1997[3]	£248,000
Estimated average bonus payment[4]	£85.34
Estimated administrative cost of bonus payments made from October 1996 to January 1997[5]	£18,263

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many section 18 appeals have been (a) upheld and (b) turned down by the Child Support Agency in each month since April 1993. [15085]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Miss Liz Lynne, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of section 18 appeals handled by the Child Support Agency.

There are no such things as section 18 appeals but the Agency handles section 18 reviews (normally referred to as second tier reviews). These are usually requested, in writing, when a client—either absent parent or parent with care—disagrees with a Child Support Officer's decision. If the client is still not satisfied following the review, they have the option to lodge an appeal, which will be handled by an independent Appeal Tribunal.

The attached table shows the breakdown of second tier review applications which have been cleared by the Agency; a monthly breakdown is available only from August 1994.

I hope this is helpful.

Child Support Agency Second Tier Reviews (August 1994–December 1996)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what actions are being taken by the Child Support Agency concerning allegations of fraud in respect of the production of posters for the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [15659]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant CB. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 19 February 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about action being taken by the Child Support Agency into allegations of fraud in respect of the production of posters.

I am unaware of any such allegations. However, internal control systems within the Agency raised serious concerns over a service for distribution of posters. I can confirm that last year the Agency passed papers to the police in connection with previous business dealings with a private firm.

It would not be appropriate to comment further or speculate on a case which is still under police investigation.

I hope this is helpful.

Medical Appeal Tribunals (Posthumous Claims)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many successful posthumous claims in respect of (a) pneumoconiosis and (b) chronic bronchitis and emphysema were made to medical appeal tribunals in areas with former and present coal-mining communities in each of the last five years. [15246]

Mr. Roger Evans: Posthumous claims can be considered under normal rules for pneumoconiosis and in respect of those who died after 13 September 1993 for chronic bronchitis and emphysema. However, information on the numbers of such cases is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants of invalid care allowance also undertake part-time study. [15869]

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that 10,000 recipients of invalid care allowance are also undertaking part-time study. Estimates are based on sample data which may be unrepresentative.

Source:

Family Resources Survey 1994–95.

Notes:

1. Estimates are rounded to the nearest 5,000.
2. Part-time study is defined in invalid care allowance as less than 21 hours a week.

Medical Services Centres (Targets)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by centre the targets negotiated by each medical services centre in its service level agreement with each disability benefits centre, for disability living allowance and attendance allowance in respect of (a) medical advice, (b) scrutiny, (c) assessment, (d) examinations and (e) complaints. [16497]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 19 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking if he will list by centre the targets negotiated by each medical services centre in its service level agreement with each disability benefits centre, for disability living allowance and attendance allowance in respect of (a) medical advice, (b) scrutiny, (c) assessment, (d) examinations and (e) complaints.

Details of all the negotiated targets are in the attached appendix.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what targets for quality of service in addition to clearance times are currently set for the Benefits Agency medical services. [16496]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical service is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Howarth, dated 19 February 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent parliamentary question asking what targets for quality of service in addition to clearance times are currently set for the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS).

Targets for standards of service are set out in the BAMS Professional Standards, and the Client Service Standards. Details have been placed in the Library.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish the results of the disability living allowance benefit review. [16666]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Social Security and Disabled People gave to the hon. Member for Erith and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) on 12 February 1997, Official Report, column 250.

A copy of the review is available in the Library.

Benefits Agency Report

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what instructions he has given to the Benefits Agency in Wales on changes in the consultation period on the BA-area strategy unit report. [16525]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Benefits Agency has been instructed that none of the measures within the consultation document "BA Wales—Blue Print for The Future" are to be implemented during the consultation period.

All comments and concerns raised during the consultation period will be given full consideration.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what payments and expenses derived from part-time employment by jobseeker's allowance claimants are not treated as earnings by the Benefits Agency. [16764]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is as follows:

Employed earners

Income tax deducted; primary class 1 national insurance contributions deducted; one-half of any sum paid as a contribution towards an occupational or personal pension; payments in kind; payments (whether or not reimbursed by the employer) in respect of expenses wholly, exclusively and necessarily incurred in the performance of the duties of the employment (but not including travelling expenses incurred by the claimant between his home and place of work or expenses incurred under arrangements made for the care of a member of the claimant's family owing to his absence from home).

Self-employed earners

An amount in respect of income tax; an amount in respect of class 2 and class 4 national insurance contributions; one-half of any sum paid as a contribution towards a personal pension; expenses wholly and exclusively defrayed for the purposes of the employment (but excluding capital expenditure, depreciation, sums employed or intended to be employed in the setting up or expansion of the business, loss incurred before the period over which the earnings are being assessed, capital repayments on loans taken out for the purposes of the business and business entertainment); excess of VAT paid over VAT received in the period over which the earnings are assessed; income expended in the repair of existing assets except to the extent that any sum is payable under an insurance policy for its repair and interst on loans taken out for the purposes of the business.

Note:

Part-time employment for the purposes of jobseeker's allowance is work in which a person is engaged for less than 16 hours a week on average (24 hours in the case of partners of people receiving income-based jobseeker's allowance).

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16750]

Mr. Burt: The use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies—NDPBs—is discussed and agreed with the Department,usually during the planning and allocation process and as such are included in any business or corporate plans. The results of any consultancy exercise are monitored each year as part of an established accountability review process and actual expenditure is recorded and monitored on a monthly basis throughout the financial year. The Department's NDPBs are also subject to scrutiny by the National Audit Office and by the Department's own internal audit team.

Personal Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the net present cost, in 1996 prices, of national insurance rebates and incentives paid to those who have joined appropriate personal pensions since 1988–89, assuming the social discount rate used by his Department. [13841]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 4 February 1997]: For the years 1987–88 to 1994–95, the latest date for which certified figures are available, the cost of national insurance rebates and incentives was £21.7 billion at net present value. This figure has been calculated using the GDP deflator and a social discount rate of 3.75 per cent. consistent with the Government Actuary's review of contracting out terms (Cm 3221). The figure includes the cost of providing flat rate rebates, incentives and age additions to holders of appropriate personal pensions during this period. From 6 April 1997, flat rate rebates for APPs, and the age addition, will be replaced by age-related rebates. The costs of the new rebates will be contained by tailoring the amount needed by a funded pension to replace the state pension foregone according to the age of the policyholder. The allowance made for administrative expenses in the rebates are based on those of the more efficient providers. The rebates will also be capped to avoid excessive rebate levels.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the expenditure by his Department on housing benefit subsidy paid to local authorities in each of the years from 1989–90 to 1996–97; and what is his estimate for 1997–98 in respect of tenants of housing associations created as a result of large-scale voluntary transfer. [15164]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 10 February 1997]: This information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table:

Estimates of DSS housing benefit subsidy paid to local authorities in respect of private sector tenancies created as a result of large scale voluntary transfers

Year	Subsidy (£ million)
1990–91	9
1991–92	13
1992–93	37
1993–94	70

1. The information relates only to the estimates of the housing benefit subsidy paid to local authorities in respect of private sector tenancies created as a result of large scale voluntary transfers for the years 1990–91 to 1997–98.

DEFENCE

Tornado GR1 Aircraft

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average annual running cost of a squadron of Tornado GR1 aircraft. [16563]

Mr. Soames: The average cost of operating a Tornado GR1 squadron, including the variable hourly flying costs and the apportionment of the station's fixed costs and overheads, is £78 million per annum.

Regimental Museums

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money his Department provided in each year since 1990–91 towards staff pay in (a) all the regimental museums in the United Kingdom and (b) the museum of the Royal Dragoon Guards and Prince of Wales's Own Regiment in York. [16648]

Mr. Soames: My Department currently contributes some £1.68 million in total to the operating costs of some 70 Army regimental and corps museums. The information for previous years is not available in the form requested.

The information requested for the museum of the Royal Dragoon Guards and the Prince of Wales's Own Regiment is as follows:

Financial Year	RDG £	PWO £
1992–93	9,300	8,800
1993–94	11,000	10,000
1994–95	11,000	10,300
1995–96	11,100	10,400
1996–97 (estimate)	12,000	8,900

The figures for the financial year 1990–91 and 1991–92 are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

WE-177 Bomb

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the operating costs of the WE-177 bomb in each of the past 15 years at 1995–96 prices. [16562]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 18 December 1996, Official Report, column 627.

Environmental Information Regulations

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inquiries have been received by his Department under the terms of the Environmental Information Regulations 1992; how many of these have been refused, and on what grounds; what has been the cost of substantive responses to such requests; and what amount has been received from those making requests towards recovery of these costs. [16807]

Mr. Soames: My Department's records indicate that, from 1 January 1993 to 31 January 1997, we received 108 questions. Before November 1995, only queries quoting the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 were classed as made under those terms. Subsequently, all queries on environmental issues have been treated as made under EIR92; 102 such queries have been received. None has been refused an answer.

My Department seeks to recover costs only if it is estimated that the work involved will exceed four man hours. Questioners in such cases are advised beforehand of the estimated costs and asked to confirm that they wish to proceed; to date, none has done so.

No records are made of the actual costs of providing substantive answers for which no charge is raised.

Army (Readiness to Change)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to adapt the readiness of the Army to changing strategic circumstances. [17103]

Mr. Portillo: Since the collapse of the Soviet Union and the Warsaw pact, we can assume that we would have longer warning of any re-emerging threat to the UK or western Europe by conventional forces. On the other hand, recent events have underlined that it is important that we should be able to dispatch forces rapidly to deal with crises elsewhere.

In response, I have decided to shift the balance of investment in the Army further towards those units required to be at higher operational readiness. The changes build on the one army concept by taking account of the synergy between regular and reserve units.

For the two parachute battalions in the joint rapid deployment force, the present enhancement of some 105 Gurkhas will finish in 2000. The strengths of each battalion will then be increased by some 60 posts. With effect from 1 April this year, arrangements will be made to provide dedicated manpower and equipment for the Pathfinders—5 Airborne Brigade's reconnaissance platoon.

I have also decided to increase the manning levels of two of our three multiple-launch rocket system regiments by some 100 posts each to ensure they are fully ready to deploy without the need for reinforcement from elsewhere in the Army. The third regiment will not be required for short-notice operations. I have therefore decided that it should be transferred to the Territorial Army, in place of one of its two FH 70—155mm howitzer—artillery regiments. Consequently, the TA will be equipped with one of the Army's most modern and powerful equipments.

At the same time, we now assess that the majority of the TA will not be required for short-notice operations as formed units. Those units can therefore be moved to more extended readiness. That will not, however, reduce the scope for TA personnel to take part as individuals, or in small teams, in a wide range of operations. That is demonstrated by their significant and invaluable contribution in Bosnia. Furthermore, opportunities for individuals will be significantly improved by the Reserve Forces Act 1996. There will be no change to the establishment levels of the TA, or to the TA's vital role in deploying as formed units in a major crisis. We shall, however, be able to reduce the numbers required to be fully trained, while protecting training and activity levels across the whole range from individual to formation training. Certain specialist units will remain at higher readiness.

Some adjustments will also be made to the manning and equipment of the 12 regular light-roled national defence battalions to bring them in line with current requirements.

Gulf War Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1996, Official Report, column 630, on Gulf war syndrome, when he expects to answer the question relating to (a) Mr. Rucker's inquiry and (b) the number of missing medical records. [15961]

Mr. Soames: I have written to the hon. Member and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

BSE

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many BSE-infected carcases are stored at former RAF Quedgeley; and if he will make a statement. [16910]

Mr. Soames: There are no BSE-infected carcases stored at RAF Quedgeley.

Nimrod Accident (Canada)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the board of inquiry into the Nimrod accident in Canada in September 1995 found evidence that other members of the Nimrod's crew had expressed misgivings to the pilot concerning the manoeuvres to be flown in the air display. [16936]

Mr. Soames: No.

Efficiency Savings

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the value of efficiency savings made by (a) his Department, (b) the Royal Navy and (c) the Royal Air Force in each of the last three years. [16893]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is available in the following publications, copies of which are in the Library of the House:

1993–94 : Departmental report by the MOD—the Government's expenditure plans 1995–96 to 1997–98 (Cm2801) (pages 30–31)

1994–95 : MOD performance report 1994–95 (Cm3055 (pages 36–37)

1995–96 : MOD performance report 1995–96 (Cm3448) (page 9)

In the course of researching this question, an inconsistency in the reporting of the figures for 1993–94 has come to light. This is being examined and I will write to the hon. Member when the matter has been resolved. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Lost or Stolen Articles

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records are kept in respect of articles lost or stolen whose value is less than (a) £150,000, (b) £100,000 and (c) £50,000. [16674]

Mr. Arbuthnot: All losses must be thoroughly investigated by the unit concerned and a full and factual record made. Losses under £100,000 value are reported as a total sum; those over £100,000 are reported individually.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of the items that have gone missing without explanation in each of the past three years; and what were the five most valuable items in each service in each year. [16675]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Losses are reported individually only where the value exceeds £100,000. Unexplained losses over £100,000 during the last three financial years were as follows:

	Value £
1993–94
No cases
1994–95
1. Thermal imager lost in transit	118,000
2. Consignment of 3 in rockets lost in transit	104,000
1995–96
1. Radar receiver lost in transit	130,000
2. One kit printed circuit lost in transit	164,000
3. 12 Harrier forward relay panels lost in transit	115,000

All losses were thoroughly investigated with a view to recovering the item in question and preventing a recurrence. When the search proved unsuccessful, the items in question were written off and noted in the relevant appropriation account.

Royal Flight

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the average flying hours for each of the last five years of aircraft used by the royal family. [16886]

Mr. Soames: The total hours flown by the aircraft concerned, covering communications, VIP and royal tasks—plus essential training—are as follows:

Financial year	BAe 146	Wessex	BAe 125
1992–93	1,769	740	4,645
1993–94	1,781	739	3,993
1994–95	1,440	791	3,511
1995–96	1,448	748	3,657
1996–97 (to 31 December 1996)	1,085	502	2,578

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to public funds of pre-positioning aircraft of the royal squadron for the private use of a member of the royal family (a) in each of the last five years and (b) for the flight from Nassau to Rock sound in March 1996. [16892]

Mr. Soames: The information requested at (a) is not readily available and could not be produced without incurring disproportionate costs. With respect to (b), there was no cost to public funds associated with pre-positioning as the aircraft was already in Nassau in support of official business.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what basis repayments are calculated for private use of aircraft of the royal squadron. [16888]

Mr. Soames: The basis of the charge for private use of aircraft of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron is the marginal cost of operating the aircraft for the particular flight. Where appropriate, a "waiting" charge of £60 per hour is also levied. The only exception to this approach is when a member of the royal family is advised to use an aircraft of No. 32—the royal—squadron for safety or security reasons for a private journey when he or she could otherwise have used a commercial service. In such circumstances, the household in question will be charged the equivalent commercial rate.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rules govern whether a journey involving an aeroplane of the royal squadron is official or private. [16887]

Mr. Soames: A journey by a member of the royal family involving the use of an aircraft of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron is considered to be official if it is undertaken in pursuance of royal duties.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the payments made to his Department for private flights in aircraft of the royal squadron by members of the royal family in each of the years 1990 to 1994. [16885]

Mr. Soames: In accordance with the wishes of Her Majesty the Queen, the costs of private flights in aircraft of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron have been reimbursed to the MOD since 1 April 1995. Accordingly, no such payments were made in the period 1990 to 1994.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice), of 31 January, Official Report, column 436, relating to royal flights, if he will list the equivalent data for 1995. [16912]

Mr. Soames: In accordance with the wishes of Her Majesty the Queen, the costs of private flights in aircraft of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron have been reimbursed to the MOD since 1 April 1995. The information requested for the period 1 April 1995 to 31 December 1995 is as follows:

Date of journey	Passenger	Route	Cost reimbursed £
1 July 1995	HRH The Duke of Edinburgh	Sandringham to Kensington Palace	1,215
1 July 1995	HRH The Duke of Edinburgh	Kensington Palace to Sandringham	1,325
1 July 1995	HRH The Prince of Wales	Dyce to RAF Northolt	735
1 July 1995	HRH The Prince of Wales	Heathrow to Dyce	735
3 September 1995	Her Majesty The Queen	Dyce to Teesside	1,558
5 September 1995	Her Majesty The Queen	Teesside to Dyce	1,558
10 December 1995	Her Majesty The Queen	Blackpool to Northolt	1,186.67

Beef

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of beef provided for the armed services is (a) of British origin, (b) of EU origin and (c) of Argentinian origin; [16907]

(2) what factors are used in determining the country of origin of beef consumed by the armed forces. [16908]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The procurement of food for the armed forces is currently contracted to the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes. My Department does not specify the source or origin from which the NAAFI should obtain beef, or any other meat, but expects it to seek the best market prices for the products. There are no constraints on the choice of British meat products which are considered equally with meat products sourced generally in the open market. The majority of our requirements are, however, for frozen beef.

The British market deals predominantly in fresh beef and consequently does not normally offer frozen British beef at the most competitive prices. As a result, most of our requirements are sourced from south America—mainly Brazil and Uruguay—New Zealand and Australia. A limited range of beef products including sirloin, foreribs, minced and diced beef are currently procured in the UK on value for money grounds. No records are kept of the volumes or percentages provided from the UK, EU or South America and this will, in any event, vary dependent upon markets providing the best value for money.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16761]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Advice on the use of external consultants is available to all of my Department's non-departmental public bodies, as listed in "Public Bodies", to ensure that they operate within the framework of controls set out in the Treasury and Cabinet Office guidance "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: A Guide for Departments".

My Department's non-departmental public bodies do not make significant use of external consultants, as shown in my answer to the hon. Member on 14 January 1997, Official Report, columns 233–34. In the past five years, only two of our bodies, the Oil and Pipelines Agency and the RAF Museum, have spent money on services of this sort. In the case of the Oil and Pipelines Agency, there is a requirement for prior approval from my Department for all consultancy services. In the case of the service museums, different arrangements apply depending on the circumstances of the body, but there is a very close relationship between the museums and their departmental sponsoring divisions which ensures that any plans to use consultancy services should be known in advance.

Junior Leaders Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he announced the closure of the junior leader unit at Harrogate, North Yorkshire; when the site closed; when his Department put the Harrogate site up for sale; which estate agent was hired to sell the site; what has been the total cost to public funds to date of the attempted sale of the site; and if he will make a statement. [16844]

Mr. Soames: Following an initial announcement on 10 March 1992 by my right hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Sir A. Hamilton) when Minister of State for the Armed Forces, Official Report, column 496, about the future of junior leader and apprentice training, it was announced on 16 December 1992 that Harrogate was not to be converted to accommodate an Army junior leader regiment and that alternative defence uses would be sought. The site was formally closed on 1 December 1996. The Leeds office of Knight Frank commenced the marketing campaign in November 1995, but work on the sale of the site has been suspended pending a decision on the location of the proposed Army Foundation college. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, I am withholding information on the fees incurred in relation to this commission under exemption 7 of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he announced the termination of the junior leaders scheme. [16843]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend the member for Epsom and Ewell (Sir A. Hamilton), when Minister of State for the Armed Forces, announced the cessation of the junior leaders scheme in his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Wimbledon (Dr. Goodson-Wickes) on 16 December 1992, Official Report, columns 335-36.

Efficiency Savings

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the value of efficiency savings made by (a) the royal yacht and (b) royal squadron in each of the last three years. [16894]

Mr. Soames: The annual running costs of HMY Britannia, excluding repair and refits, have remained broadly constant over the past three years. I refer the hon. Member also to my answer of 9 January 1996 to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe) Official Report, column 96.

Prior to 1 April 1995, royal flying tasks were undertaken by the Queen's Flight, based at RAF Benson. From that date, the flight was incorporated into No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron, tasked with undertaking a full range of communications, VIP and royal flying duties. This change was designed to achieve improvements in cost-effectiveness through better use of aircraft assets and through greater efficiency in support areas. Subsequently, the new arrangements for the funding of royal travel announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 16 October 1996 will facilitate further improvements in cost-effectiveness through the closer involvement of the royal household as the customer for the service provided by the squadron for royal tasks.

Personnel Administration and Pay Organisations

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence agency status for the armed forces' personnel administration and pay organisations. [17293]

Mr. Soames: The Armed Forces Personnel Administration Agency will be launched on 1 April 1997. The aim of AFPPA is the cost-effective provision, on a tri-service basis, of data and systems for the payment of military personnel, and to support the personnel management function, in peace, including crisis, transition to war and war. The agency will be formed from the Directorate of Naval Personnel Services and the Directorate of Naval Pay and Pensions at Gosport; the Directorate of Administrative Information Systems (Army) at Worthy Down, near Winchester; and the Directorate of Administrative Information Systems (RAF) and the RAF Pensions Branch at Innsworth, near Gloucester. In addition, a small agency headquarters office will be created at Innsworth in the first instance. On formation, the agency will employ some 1,000 civilian and 200 military staff. It is also the intention, at a later date, that pay, pensions and personnel administrative elements of the recently formed Army Personnel Centre in Glasgow should come within the agency.

The agency proposal followed a feasibility study which concluded that personnel administration offered scope for significant harmonisation and, eventually, the development of an integrated tri-service computer system. Arrangements are in hand to contract a private sector partner under the Government's private finance initiative to deliver most of the services required of the agency. The partner would also be responsible for developing and operating new computer systems to improve efficiency, whilst at the same time shouldering much of the business risk involved.

AFPAA has developed a comprehensive set of performance indicators, including measures to monitor the quality, timeliness and efficiency of its outputs. The chief executive has been set the following targets for the agency's first full year:

1. Pay, allowances and pensions payments.

Whilst making 100 per cent. of payments of pay, allowances and pensions by the due date, the number of errors per 1,000 payments not to exceed 10 for pay and allowances, and not to exceed five for pensions.

2. Accuracy of personnel records and liabilities data.

Determine measures to set base line of completeness and accuracy of the record of service.

3. Currency of personnel records and liabilities data.

Update all records within three days of receipt of valid input.

4. Responsiveness.

Resolve inquiries across all three services within 10 working days of receipt.

5. Customer satisfaction.

Develop systematic and objective methods of ensuring customer satisfaction, in consultation with the owner and customers.

6. Private sector participation.

Agree a private finance initiative service delivery contract with a private sector partner by July 1997, to provide significantly better value for money than the public sector comparator.

7. Efficiency.

Develop cost ratios and implement appropriate measures for benchmarking efficiency, in core personnel administration services.

Bett Review

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the results of his consideration of Sir Michael Bett's independent review of the armed forces manpower, career and remuneration structure; and if he will make a statement. [17294]

Mr. Soames: It is clearly essential that the armed forces have pay structures, allowances, and other terms and conditions of service that attract and retain people of the calibre and exceptional qualities that we need.

Our personnel policy must recognise and reflect the unique demands of service life, while at the same time taking account of the terms and conditions of service applicable to relevant civilian groups. We need to recruit and retain substantial numbers of high-quality men and women to ensure that the armed forces continue to be able to fulfil their operational commitments. We must also offer careers which are satisfying and rewarding. We can achieve those aims only if terms and conditions of service are right. We must also take account of modern practices in management and career planning. Since the independent review was published in April 1995, we have undertaken much further work on our policies.

Our plans are set out in an information document entitled "The Armed Forces of the Future—a Personnel Strategy". A copy is in the Library of the House.

We have decided to introduce pay ranges for all ranks, up to and including brigadier and its equivalent, underpinned by a new job evaluation system which we can use to allocate jobs to pay ranges. That will enable other ranks for the first time to progress through a pay range rather than be paid a spot rate. Everyone will have the opportunity to increase their earnings within their rank, in recognition of experience and qualifications, subject to satisfactory performance. This should be a welcome retention incentive.

Changes in the allowances payable to service personnel will allow us to target allowances more efficiently where they are most needed to assist recruitment and retention, and to compensate for the extra costs and disadvantages of service life. A longer separated service allowance will be introduced, targeted on those who serve long or frequent periods on operations, exercise or other training away from their base. The Government have accepted the Armed Forces Pay Review Body's recommendations of the rates of LSSA, and the consequential changes to the allowances currently paid for service in Northern Ireland and South Georgia. There will also be a new "get you home" allowance, providing a contribution to the cost of travelling home for those on detached duty or courses. These represent significant improvements for those personnel most disrupted by absences from their base and families.

The main offset for these proposals will be the withdrawal, from 1 April 1998, of the majority of leave travel warrants issued currently to all personnel. Only those in their first three years of service would retain the current entitlement. Beyond that, all single personnel with more than three but less than nine years' service would retain one leave warrant.

Detailed information about these plans is being widely disseminated within the three services. The plans have the whole-hearted support of the chiefs of staff.

Low Flying

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the conclusion of the study commissioned in co-operation with the United States and Canadian Governments into the feasibility of epidemiological research to examine a possible linkage between noise from low-flying military aircraft and adverse health effects. [17295]

Mr. Soames: The study, commissioned with the institute of sound and vibration research of the university of Southampton, as prime contractor, supported by the National Physical Laboratory and the Medical Research Council, was completed in December 1996. Because of the wide dispersion of military low flying, and the infrequency of exposure to noise from this source by the average person, the study concluded that it would not be practicable to carry out a meaningful epidemiological study of the effects of noise from low flying military aircraft on the health of overflown populations. Statistical calculations suggested that an initial sample of at least 20,000 people would need to be included in any study population; however, in order to allow for confounding factors and uncertainties in the pattern of exposure, the size of the study population would have to be increased by a factor of between five and 10.

A comprehensive field validation study carried out in the Vale of Evesham found that the daily noise exposure in the most heavily over flown areas did not exceed that experienced by over a quarter of the population of England and Wales from general ambient noise. No individual aircraft event exceeded 120db(A) and the majority of events were below 100db(A). This reaffirms our belief that, although the restrictions placed on the heights, speeds and operating procedures of military aircraft are designed to ensure that noise levels on the ground do not exceed 125db(A), a level which research suggests provides a margin of safety to human hearing, in practice any exposure to noise from military low flying is likely to be significantly lower.

Copies of a composite document comprising reports by ISVR and the MCR, and an executive summary by the tri-national steering committee have been placed in the Library of the House.

My Department will continue to be involved in scientific research on noise and health. Should new research suggest a linkage between military low flying and adverse health effects, we will consider what changes to our aircraft operating procedures should be made. In the meantime, we firmly believe that they reflect the best available scientific and medical advice.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Scottish Grand Committee

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the cost to public funds of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department at meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee in Scotland since December 1994; and if he will list the meetings of the Committee which (a) and (b) have attended, indicating the cost of attendance and the names of those who attended. [16569]

Mr. Lang: Ministers attend Scottish Grand Committee meetings as part of their normal parliamentary duties and officials do so as part of their normal departmental duties. Expenditure falling to my Department has been limited to travelling costs. I attended the Scottish Grand Committee meeting on 5 July 1996 in Dumfries and no officials from my Department were in attendance.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Brian David Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the comparative success of each English region in securing funding for regional selective assistance. [17192]

Mr. Greg Knight: Funding for RSA is held centrally by the Department but the appraisal of most applications and decisions on whether to offer support are taken by the relevant Government Office against criteria which are common to all regions. There is no pre-set allocation of RSA funds between regions. The amount of RSA offered in each region depends on the applications received and whether these meet the scheme criteria. Data for individual regions is published by HMSO in the annual report on the Industrial Development Act 1982.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 278, what criteria for new lenders to the loan guarantee scheme have been agreed; on what date he will be writing to potential lenders; and if he will list the potential lenders. [16940]

Mr. Page: The criteria to be used in assessing potential lenders are:

- should have the expertise, experience and capacity to appraise technology based commercial borrowing proposals from both technical and commercial viewpoints;
- should have a proven track record (ideally of several years experience) of successful lending to small businesses;
- could make worthwhile use of the scheme;
- is reputable;
- should have effective appraisal techniques;
- should have well established procedures in operation to monitor and review borrowers;
- should add something extra to the range of services already available.

We are aiming to write to all potential lenders by early March.

It is not appropriate to list potential lenders since interest in lending under the scheme is commercially confidential to the firms concerned.

Limited Liability Partnership Legislation

Mr. Batiste: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress his Department has made with developing proposals for limited liability partnership legislation in the United Kingdom. [17296]

Mr. Lang: I am pleased to announce that the Government are publishing today a consultation paper, "Limited Liability Partnership: A New Form of Business Association for Professions". The consultation paper sets out detailed proposals for legislation to create a new structure for professional businesses, in line with the Government's commitment to maintain a competitive and up-to-date legal framework for business in the United Kingdom.

The publication of the consultation paper today follows my announcement on 7 November in answer to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin), Official Report, column 700, that the Government intended to bring forward legislation at the earliest opportunity to make limited liability partnership available to regulated professions in the UK, subject to appropriate safeguards to protect the interests of those doing business with the limited liability partnership. I said then that we would publish our proposals before Easter.

The proposals are being made in response to the concerns of many in the professions that, under present partnership law in the UK, the personal assets of the active members of the partnership are at risk from the business decisions of other partners even though, in modern business conditions, it may well be impossible for partners even to know all the other partners.

Limited liability partnership is already widely available in the USA and in an increasing number of other countries. It should be available in the UK too: the present gap in our legal framework risks undermining the confidence of businesses which play a key role in the success of the UK economy.

The proposals are designed to retain the tried and tested benefits of partnership—flexibility of its capital requirements, the flexibility and privacy of its internal constitution, its avoidance of the separation of ownership and management, and the way in which earning are taxed—while protecting individual members against unlimited personal liability for matters in which they are not personally at fault. A robust package of safeguards is proposed to protect the interests of those dealing with the partnership, including the public disclosure of information about the partnership and safeguards in the case of insolvency.

The closing date for responses to the consultation is 16 May 1997. I look forward to receiving the views of the professions, those dealing with them and business generally.

Export Controls

Mr. Batiste: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the results of the public consultation on strategic export controls were; and when he will announce what action the Government will be taking in response to the consultation. [17297]

Mr. Lang: I am placing copies of the responses received to the consultative document on strategic export controls (Cm 3349), except where confidentiality has been requested in the Libraries of both Houses. I am also placing copies in the library of my Department where members of the public can arrange to see them if they wish.

My Department, in consultation with other Departments, is considering the way forward on strategic export controls, taking account of the responses received to the consultation. Where relevant, the conclusions of the committee established in November to inquire into the controls and procedures relating to arms trafficking, set out in the reply given on 21 January by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will also be taken into account.

Given the complexity of the subject some further, more detailed consultation with directly interested parties is likely to be needed in developing any proposed changes to strategic export controls. An announcement will be made in due course.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16749]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Non-departmental public bodies are established to operate at arm's length from Government, often under specific statutory powers. The NDPB's governing board is responsible for the management and control of the body's functions.

My Department is responsible for monitoring the performance of the NDPBs it sponsors, and for ensuring that they operate within the framework of controls set out in the Treasury and Cabinet Office guidance, "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: A Guide for Departments."

Guidance on best practice on the procurement of external consultants is contained in the efficiency unit scrutiny report, "The Government's Use of External Consultants", which is available to all the Department's NDPBs.

Water Cannons (Export Licences)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each of the last five years the number of export licences granted for the sale of water cannons, indicating in each case, the recipient country. [9990]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 January 1997]: Licences identified from computer records as issued for the export of water cannon and equipment incorporating water cannon during the last five years are as follows.

Year	Number of licences	Destination	Number of water cannon
1992	1	Mauritius	1
	1	Venezuela	40
1994	1	Indonesia	3
1995	2	Indonesia	6
1996	1	Indonesia	7
	1	Ghana	4

Computer records cannot always identify individual items on an export licence application if they are part of a larger export package. Further research could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost.

Mid Kent Water

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 641, what representations his Department received from parties to the proposed acquisition of Mid Kent Holdings by Companie Générale des Eaux and SAUR Water Services; in what form such representations were made; to whom they were made; and at what stage of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigation they were made. [15200]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 12 February 1997]: In this case, after the MMC had begun its inquiry into the proposed merger, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade was required under the provisions of the Water Industry Act 1991 to consider whether it appeared to him that it was or might be the fact that an actual merger had already taken place and hence whether the terms of the reference should be varied. In reaching his decision to vary the reference, which was announced on 13 September 1996, my right hon. Friend considered the views of General Utilities, Mid Kent Holdings and SAUR Water Services.

In addition, the Department received various representations about the merger either directly from the companies or attached to correspondence from hon. Members or members of the public. It is not my right hon. Friend's policy to make public further details concerning an individual merger case once the report describing the results of the thorough inquiry conducted by the MMC has been published and my right hon. Friend's decision has been announced.

Mergers

Dr. Howells: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 30 January, Official Report, column 325, if he will define the exceptional circumstances in which Ministers in his Department receive representations from companies with a direct interest in a Monopolies and Mergers Commission merger report prior to a decision being made on the report; and if any such exceptions have been made during the last 18 months, indicating in which cases and for what reasons. [15199]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 12 February 1997]: It is clearly not possible to define in advance exceptional circumstances. However, very occasionally, one of the parties to a merger may, for example, inform the Department of a significant change of circumstances in the market under examination that has occurred after the MMC has reported and Ministers would not be able properly to reach a decision without taking that new information into account.

It is not my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade's policy to make public further details concerning an individual merger case once the report describing the results of the thorough inquiry conducted by the MMC has been published and my right hon. Friend's decision has been announced.

Millennium Club

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times over the last three years, he has addressed the Millennium Club in his official capacity; and if he will list the names of those present and the companies they represented on each occasion; and if he will make a statement. [15695]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 February 1997]: I have not addressed the Millennium Club in my official capacity.

Mr. Alan Lewis

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his intervention with the Russian Deputy Prime Minister on behalf of Mr. Alan Lewis during the period when civil proceedings in the Russian courts were in progress. [15662]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 February 1997]: I wrote to Russian Deputy Prime Ministers Bolshakov and Kazakov on 28 June 1996 following up a meeting of the UK—Russia Steering Committee on Trade and Investment which I had co-chaired with Mr. Bolshakov the previous month. The letter addressed the uncertainties that investors faced in Russia and our shared aim to create there an attractive investment climate, and referred to Illingworth Morris as an example.

I also wrote to Mr. Bolshakov on 4 December 1996 concerning negotiations involving other companies. Correspondence of this type is normally regarded as commercially confidential.

Throughout, all correspondence and contact with the Russian Government were based wholly on the advice of officials in my Department and at the British Embassy in Moscow. Neither I nor any other Minister or official corresponded with the Chief Justice of the Russian High Arbitration court over this case.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the occasions on which he has met Mr. Alan Lewis in an official capacity; and what subjects were discussed on each occasion. [15663]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 February 1997]: In my official capacity as President of the Board of Trade I have met Mr. Lewis once. We discussed his company's business interests.

Mr. Madden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what factors led him to write to the Russian Deputy Prime Minister on behalf of Illingworth Morris about negotiations in which the company was involved in Russia; if he will place copies of the relevant correspondence in the Library; in what other cases he has written to Russian Ministers concerning individual company negotiations in Russia; and if he will make a statement. [15697]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 13 February 1997]: I wrote to Russian Deputy Prime Ministers Bolshakov and Kazakov on 28 June 1996 following up a meeting of the UK-Russia Steering Committee on Trade and Investment which I had co-chaired with Mr. Bolshakov the previous month. The letter addressed the uncertainties that investors faced in Russia and our shared aim to create there an attractive investment climate, and referred to Illingworth Morris as an example.

Commonwealth of Independent States

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the ministerial visits made to each CIS country since 1992. [15734]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Listed are DTI ministerial visits to CIS countries since 1992:

	Country visited	Date
Mr. Heseltine	Azerbaijan and Russia	September 1992
Mr. Eggar	Kazakhstan	September 1993
Mr. Eggar	Uzbekistan	May 1994

	Country visited	Date
Mr. Eggar	Turkmenistan	February 1995
Mr. Eggar	Azerbaijan and Georgia	May 1995
Mr. Eggar	Russia	September 1995
Lord Goschen—(Transport Minister, but let a DTI Mission)	Kazakhstan, Uzbekistan and Kyrgyzstan	September 1995
Mr. Lang	Russia	May 1996
Mr. Eggar	Azerbaijan and Georgia	June 1996
Lord Goschen—(Transport Minister but led a DTI Mission)	Azerbaijan, Georgia and Armenia	September/October 1996
Lord Fraser	Azerbaijan	January 1997

Airbus

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total expenditure in launch aid for the Airbus A320; and how much of this has so far been recouped. [15854]

Mr. Greg Knight [holding answer 18 February 1997]: Total launch aid of £249.3 million was granted for the Airbus A320. A total of £250.2 million has so far been received in repayment. Repayment, including a rate of return, is made by a levy on sales.

TRANSPORT

British Rail Subsidiaries

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the gross proceeds of sales of former subsidiaries of British Rail in 1996–97. [15399]

Mr. Watts: Total gross proceeds of companies, which were previously owned by British Rail and which have been sold in the current financial year pursuant to the Railways Act 1993, are £2.13 billion. This sum includes gross proceeds of £1.93 billion from the sale of Railtrack; deferred payments; dividends of some £14 million paid before the sales this year of BR infrastructure companies; and gross proceeds of the following companies which were sold since my answer to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington) of 27 November 1996, Official Report, columns 273–76.

Company	Purchaser	Gross proceeds £ million	Sale date
Scientifics Ltd.	Atesta Group Ltd.	1.8	9 December 1996
BR Research Ltd.	AEA Technology PLC	10.752	19 December 1996
Nationwide Fire Services	Serco Ltd.	[1]0.106	6 January 1997

M6/M61 Junction Signs

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decision he has reached concerning the inclusion of Bolton on the M6/M61 junction signs; and if he will make a statement. [15712]

Mr. Watts: I am pleased to say that the Highways Agency has prepared a design for the signs on the four gantries involved at the M6/M61 junction which will allow the addition of Bolton. This work will be completed in March.

Rail Services

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the causes of train delays and cancellations that are (a) recorded and (b) not recorded in the four-weekly track record on punctuality and reliability under the terms of the citizens charter. [15964]

Mr. Watts: Delays or cancellations caused by circumstances outside the control of the rail industry, such as vandalism, suicides or terrorist threats, are excluded from the passengers charger statistics. Services provided on certain days are also excluded: these are Sundays—except for Gatwick express and Island line—public holidays; and days when bus services are substituted, for example during engineering works, or when no effective service can be provided and season tickets are extended or refunded.

Except where exclusions apply, the services included in passengers charter punctuality and reliability results are as follows. For punctuality:

London commuter train companies (formerly Network SouthEast)—Mondays to Fridays only, trains arriving at London termini between 07.00 and 10.00 and trains departing from London between 16.00 and 19.00. Trains are punctual if they arrive at their destination within four minutes 59 seconds of the scheduled time.

InterCity train companies—all trains Monday to Saturday. Trains are punctual if they arrive at their destination within nine minutes 59 seconds of the scheduled time.

Other train companies (ex Regional Railways)—all trains Monday to Saturday. trains are punctual if they arrive at their destination within 4 minutes 59 seconds for short distance routes and 9 minutes 59 seconds for long distance routes.

Gatwick express—all trains Monday to Sunday. Trains are punctual if they arrive at their destination within 4 minutes 59 seconds of the scheduled time.

For reliability:

the number of trains scheduled to run in the published timetable, including any emergency timetable. A train is counted as run if it has completed at least 50 per cent. of its scheduled route mileage.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of a timetabled journey under the passengers charter a train must complete to count as (a) a cancellation and (b) a train run; and if these criteria apply to all train operating companies. [15965]

Mr. Watts: For passengers charter purposes, a train is counted as cancelled if it fails to complete at least 50 per cent. of its scheduled route mileage. A train would be counted as run if it had completed at least 50 per cent. of its scheduled route mileage. These criteria apply to all train operating companies and have not changed since 1992.

Isle of Sheppey (Bridge)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the proposal for a new Swale bridge to the Isle of Sheppey; what provision has been made for this project in his Department's future programme; and what priority has been accorded to the project. [16025]

Mr. Watts: Proposals for a second crossing of the Swale to the Isle of Sheppey are part of the A249 Iwade-Queenborough improvement scheme. Draft line and side roads orders under the Highways Act 1980 were published for the scheme on 23 January. Economic, environmental and engineering assessments were carried out as part of that process. The economic appraisal involved the usual cost-benefit methodology applied to all major trunk road improvement proposals. The environmental assessment, in accordance with EC regulations, considered visual impact—including consulting Royal Fine Arts Commission—the effect on the local ecology, as well as more general environmental impacts.

The results of this assessment were also published in an environmental statement on 23 January and placed on deposit locally for public inspection. The engineering assessment, comprised value management and value engineering as well as checks to ensure that the proposals comply with our national standards.

This scheme has been given priority to progress it to draft order stage. Its future progress will depend upon the successful completion of the remaining statutory procedures.

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16180]

Mr. Bowis: The extensive information requested concerning the private employment agencies used by my Department and its agencies will take some time to assemble. I shall write to the hon. Member when I have further details and place a copy of the information in the Library.

London Transport Finance

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the (a) total grants, (b) core business capital grants, (c) new lines and extensions capital grants and (d) revenue support grants, excluding the docklands light railway, awarded to London Transport in each year since 1978; and what is the planned expenditure for each year between 1996–97 and 1999–2000 in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1996–97 prices. [16027]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is set out in the following tables.

At cash prices £ million

Railtrack

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people Railtrack employed (a) in total, (b) in its Intercity East Coast zone and (c) in its regional Railways North East zone at the time of its share flotation. [16643]

Mr. Watts: As detailed in the prospectus, as at 31 March 1996, Railtrack had approximately 11,500 employees. The information is not available by zone.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the Government's estimate of the value of Railtrack's (a) capital assets, including stations, light maintenance depots, arch accommodations and commercial property, investment property, track, bridges, tunnels, signalling systems and other land and capital assets and (b) annual commercial turnover (i) in total, (ii) in the Intercity East Coast zone and (iii) in the regional Railways North East zone at the time of the share flotation. [16642]

Mr. Watts: The historical cost of Railtrack's capital assets as described in the sale prospectus was £5,915 million as at 31 March 1994 and £6,492 at 31 March 1995 at current cost. The annual turnover for the year ended 31 March 1995 again as stated in the prospectus was £2,275 million and for the six months ended 30 September 1995 £1,139 million. The information is not available broken down by zone.

South West Trains

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the compliance of South West Trains with its franchise agreement; what penalties it is subject to for non-compliance with its franchise agreement; and what liabilities it has incurred to date. [16914]

Mr. Watts: Compliance with franchise agreements is a matter for the franchising director. He has a range of options open to him to ensure that franchisees observe the terms of their agreements with him. In the case of South West Trains, the franchisee will be penalised financially for peak period cancellations he has made following the introduction of revised working arrangements for drivers. South West Trains has introduced a temporary timetable to minimise disruption to passengers, especially peak period services. Penalties are of the order of £600 per peak period cancellation.

London Underground (Disabled People)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ensure that (a) existing London underground stations and (b) London underground stations which are currently under construction are accessible for disabled people. [16521]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for London Underground. I understand that its policy is to maintain and improve existing levels of access for disabled passengers where practicable and to incorporate improved accessibility into all new and rebuilt trains, new lines and extensions and station redevelopments. For example, the Jubilee line extension, when completed, will be fully accessible to wheelchair users.

More generally, access to stations and other public transport stations and terminals is covered by the provisions of part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, which provides for the removal of physical barriers to access where that is deemed reasonable. The Government have consulted on the timetable for implementation of those provisions and an announcement will be made shortly.

Metrolink

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce a decision in relation to the outcome of the public inquiry into the extension of Metrolink into the Wythenshawe constituency; if the Minister from his Department to be present will make a statement about this at the meeting of the North West Regional Association on 24 February; and if he will make a statement. [16773]

Mr. Watts: The Secretary of State's decision on the application by the Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive for the Greater Manchester (LRTS) (Airport Extension) Order is expected shortly. If the decision is announced before the meeting of the Regional Annual Consultative Committee on 24 February, that meeting would provide an opportunity for any questions about the decision to be raised.

Driving Standards Agency

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving examiners employed by the Driving Standards Agency have worked only one day in any one month period in the last 12 months; and on how many occasions a driving examiner employed by the Driving Standards Agency worked only one day in a month in the last 12 months. [16845]

Mr. Bowis: During 1996, all contract examiners were employed to the maximum of their guaranteed work under the terms of their particular contract. The reduced use of contract examiners started in December 1996 in response to falling demand for tests. Twenty contract examiners were employed for only one day in January 1997.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16747]

Mr. Bowis: Provision for all non-departmental public bodies is reviewed regularly and before annual budgets are set including expenditure on consultants. Audited accounts are published for each of these bodies.

British Rail Property Board

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what residual liabilities will need to be met through payment of grant in aid after the sale of the British Rail Property Board; [16502]

(2) what provisions have been made in respect of the residual liabilities of British Rail Property Board following its sale. [16501]

Mr. Watts: No property assets or liabilities are to be included in the sale of the British Rail Property Board, which would become a property management business. No new liabilities would arise from its sale. Existing liabilities would remain with the BR board and provision would be made in the BR board's annual report and accounts in the usual way.

Royal Train

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what rules govern whether a journey involving the use of the royal train by a member of the royal family is official or private. [16891]

Mr. Watts: A journey by a member of the royal family involving the use of the royal train is considered to be official if it is undertaken in pursuance of royal duties.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what basis repayments by members of the royal family are calculated for private use of the royal train. [16889]

Mr. Watts: Members of the royal family do not make private use of the royal train.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners' Behaviour (Diet)

7. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department (a) has commissioned and (b) plans to commission into the effects of diet on prisoners' behaviour; and if he will make a statement. [15284]

Miss Widdecombe: We have not commissioned such research, but we have agreed to facilitate the nutritional rehabilitation project being run by Natural Justice Ltd. in Aylesbury young offender institution.

Young Offender Institution (Colchester)

12. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the first offenders to arrive at the new young offender institution in Colchester and if he will make a statement. [15292]

Miss Widdecombe: The first intake of young offenders arrived at Colchester young offender institution today.

Closed Circuit Television

13. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department has taken to increase the number of closed circuit television schemes. [15294]

Mr. Maclean: We will be investing more than £50 million in closed circuit television, funding more than 10,000 new cameras; 365 winning local partnerships have already been awarded more than £22 million. We will be announcing the results of the third competition, with another £15 million, very soon.

17. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many CCTV cameras have been installed under the Government's CCTV challenge competitions in 1995 and 1996. [15302]

Mr. Maclean: If all the winning schemes go ahead as planned, we estimate that more than 4,000 closed circuit television cameras will be installed with the assistance of funding from the first two challenge competitions.

21. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department has taken to increase the number of closed circuit television schemes. [15302]

Mr. Maclean: We will be investing more than £50 million in closed circuit television through our CCTV challenge competitions; 365 winning local partnerships have already been awarded more than £22 million in the first two competitions. We will be announcing the results of the third competition, with another £15 million, very soon.

Crime Statistics

14. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces experienced a fall in their recorded crime figures in (a) 1995 and (b) the 12 months to June 1996. [15295]

Mr. Maclean: For both periods, the majority of police forces recorded falls in crime. In the 12 months to June 1996, 24 of the 43 police forces in England and Wales recorded decreases. For 1995, 35 forces recorded decreases.

Prisoners (Handcuffing)

15. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the guidelines issued to the Prison Service concerning the handcuffing of prisoners receiving hospital or hospice treatment. [15296]

Miss Widdecombe: On 18 January 1996, my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary made a statement to the House setting out policy on the handcuffing of prisoners receiving medical or antenatal treatment or giving birth outside the prison. The following day, the director of security and programmes issued an internal instruction announcing the new arrangements.

The Prison Service has now issued further internal instructions giving more detailed guidance. These form part of the "Manual on Security", copies of which are held in the Library.

Warwickshire Fire and Civil Defence Authority

16. Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received concerning Warwickshire fire and civil defence authority. [15297]

Mr. Sackville: Representations have been received from one hon. Member about fire service funding. In addition, my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State with responsibility for the fire service, met a deputation in November to discuss the fire standard spending assessment distributional formula.

Drug Trafficking and Dealing

19. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last discussed with the Director General of the National Criminal Intelligence Service further initiatives to counter illegal drug trafficking and dealing. [15300]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has not had such discussions recently with the Director General of the National Criminal Intelligence Service. However, the director general and his staff have regular contacts with Ministers and officials on a wide range of issues concerning serious and organised crime.

Asylum Seekers

20. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently detained in prisons and in detention centres. [15301]

Mr. Kirkhope: As at 31 January 1997, there were a total of 768 persons whose detention resulted solely from powers conferred by schedules 2 or 3 of the Immigration Act 1971 and who had sought asylum at some stage.

Mobile Phones (Police Investigation)

22. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the use of mobile phones in police investigations. [15303]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary's reply of 12 February, Official Report, columns 215–16.

Religious Cults

23. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance his Department provides to the families of members of religious cults. [15305]

Mr. Sackville: The Department provides advice about the legal position and about other sources of help, including organisations which offer information and counselling.

Prosecutions

24. Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the proportion of recorded crime that resulted in prosecutions in (a) 1979 and (b) the latest period for which figures are available. [15306]

Mr. Maclean: The latest information relates to 1995 and indicates that 10 per cent. of recorded offences against individuals and their property resulted in a prosecution. Information for 1979 is not available in the form requested and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Security Breaches (Prisons)

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that every prison has a suitable emergency procedure to follow in the event of a breach of security by prisoners. [15299]

Miss Widdecombe: Every prison establishment is required to have and maintain contingency plans for incidents that may occur within it, including breaches of security by prisoners.

Drugs Seizures

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many seizures of (a) soft drugs and (b) hard drugs have been made from private dwellings in each of the past three years; what was the estimated street value of the seizures in each case; and if he will make a statement. [15461]

Mr. Maclean: No distinction is made between "soft" and "hard" drugs in drugs seizure statistics. National statistics on drug seizures are produced on the basis of class and type of drug. Seizure figures for each class for 1993, 1994 and 1995 are as follows:

	1993	1994	1995
Class A	12,102	13,876	17,344
Class B	77,068	95,997	101,445
Class C	1,129	1,627	1,867

Figures for 1996 are not yet available.

Information relating to the place where drugs have been seized has not been collected at a national level since 1992. The street values of drugs seized are also not collected. Although they provide a useful operational tool for police officers, they are too subjective and liable to fluctuation to be included in national statistics.

Holocaust Denial

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconsider his response to recent proposals for legislation to make holocaust denial an offence. [15466]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Government's position on holocaust denial is well known and we have no plans to change it.

Prison Inspectorate Reports

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, column 554, if he will publish a list showing which prison each of 25 reports awaiting publication refer to; and how long each report has been awaiting publication. [14862]

Miss Widdecombe: The 25 establishments for which, at 4 February, an inspection report had been received from Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons but had not yet been published, and the date on which the report was received from the inspectorate by my right hon. and learned Friend, is set out in the table:

Establishment	Date inspection report was received by the Home Secretary
Acklington	16 December 1996
Albany	22 October 1996
Belmarsh	17 December 1996
Channings Wood	22 October 1996
Chelmsford	16 December 1996
Dartmoor	29 August 1996
Dover	7 October 1996
Eastwood Park	6 January 1997
Everthorpe	14 November 1996
Featherstone	15 August 1996
Gloucester	22 October 1996
Guys Marsh	29 November 1996
Hatfield	8 October 1996
Holloway	14 August 1996
Lancaster Castle	18 November 1996
Low Newton	22 October 1996
Onley	19 June 1996
Portland	8 October 1996
Ranby	15 August 1996
Risley	3 September 1996
Shepton Mallet	6 November 1996
Usk/Prescoed	14 November 1996
The Verne	15 August 1996
Whitemoor	29 November 1996
Wormwood Scrubs	31 October 1996

The reports of the inspections of Portland and Hatfield were published on 13 February and 17 February respectively and those of four establishments, Guys Marsh, Holloway, Low Newton and Risley, will be published on 21 February.

The reports of the inspections of the following 10 establishments are expected to be published during February and March: Channings Wood, Dartmoor, Dover, Featherstone, Gloucester, Lancaster Castle, Onley, Ranby, The Verne and Wormwood Scrubs.

The remaining nine reports are under consideration. They will be published as soon as possible, but action in response to the recommendations made in an inspection report does not wait until publication of the report.

Prisoners (Unlocked Periods)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average amount of time prisoners spent unlocked (a) for each prison, (b) for each prison type and (c) for the whole Prison Service, (i) for each month since January 1996 and (ii) for each year since 1989–90. [15976]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the average amount of time prisoners spent unlocked (a) for each prison, (b) for each prison type and (c) for the whole Prison Service, (i) for each month since January 1996 and (ii) for each year since 1989–90.

Tables giving details of the information you requested have been placed in the Library. Time out of cell figures are not available for individual prisons prior to April 1994 so the yearly figures you requested are for April 1994 and April 1995 only.

Prisoners (Employment)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list (a) the number of employment places provided by Prison Service laundries and (b) the number of prisoner hours spent working in Prison Service laundries in each year since 1989–90. [15974]

(2) if he will list (a) the number of employment places, (b) the total net cost of these employment places offered by Prison Service industries and farms and (c) the total number of hours of inmate occupation provided by these places in each year since 1989–90; [15972]

(3) if he will list (a) the number of inmates and (b) the number of hours spent by inmates working directly for the private sector on a subcontract basis in each year since 1989–90. [15973]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your three recent Questions about the employment of prisoners.

The attached tables detail the information you requested.

The figures provided are from the earliest records available which, with the exception of the information for private sector work, exclude the period 1989–90. Figures provided for the current year are estimated rather than actual. Statistics relating to private sector work undertaken in prisons are not yet available for the period 1996–97.

Year	Number of employment places	Net hours of work undertaken within Prison Service laundries
1990–91	988	1,061,000

	16	Minimum age at which probation orders, community service orders, combination orders or curfew orders become available under the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973 and the Criminal Justice Act 1991.
	18	Minimum age at which custody for life becomes available under the Criminal Justice Act 1982, as amended.
Nationality	18	Minimum age for application for naturalisation as a British citizen and for renunciation of British citizenship by single person under the British Nationality Act 1981.
	10	Minimum age for application for registration as a British citizen by certain persons born in the UK who did not acquire citizenship at birth and for application for registration as a British citizen by a person born stateless outside the UK but resident in the UK for the past 5 years under the British Nationality Act 1981.

In addition, services for which the Home Office or its Agencies have responsibility set the following minimum age requirements for recruitment:

18 years for appointment as a firefighter (under the Fire Services (Appointment and Promotion) Regulations 1978);

22 years for appointment as a probation officer (under the Probation Rules 1984);

18 years and six months for appointment to a police force (under the Police Regulations 1995);

18 years for appointment as an immigration officer;

16 years for appointment as an assistant immigration officer, and

20 years for appointment as a prison officer (this requirement is under review).

Prisoners (Education)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many hours were spent in education by prisoners in each financial year since 1987–88; [15986]

(2) what estimates he has made of level of (a) numeracy, (b) literacy and (c) educational and vocational qualifications of prisoners on (i) first reception into prison and (ii) leaving prison; [15971]

(3) how much was paid by the Prison Service to local education authorities for teaching services in each financial year since 1985–86. [15987]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your three recent questions about education provision in prisons.

Information on the number of hours spent in education by prisoners is not available in the form requested. Since the contracting out of prison education in 1993 the number of hours spent in education by prisoners has been collected on a calendar year basis. The total number of prisoner hours spent in education was 9.2 million in 1994, the first full year under the contract arrangements, rising to 9.4 million in 1995. The predicted hours for 1996 are expected to be similar to 1995.

Education hours for the financial years before contracting out, as published in the Prison Service Annual Report, are set out in the attached table.

The Prison Service has made no specific estimates of the level of numeracy, literacy or educational and vocational qualifications of prisoners on first reception into prison and on leaving prison. Since 1 January this year, all prisoners are invited to take the Basic Skills Screening Test on reception into prison. This will provide comparative data on the level of literacy and numeracy among prisoners at the beginning and end of their sentences.

The amounts paid by the Prison Service to local education authorities for teaching services are set out in the attached table. Expenditure for 1993–94 onwards covers all education providers contracted to supply teaching services to prison establishments, not just local education authorities.

Education hours as published in the prison service annual report 1987–1993

	Hours
1987–88	5.56 million
1988–89	6.84 million
1989–90	7.75 million
1990–91	[1]Not available
1991–92	7.55 million
1992–93	7.57 million
April to December 1993	[2]Not available

[1] No figure published because the disturbances of that year made returns unreliable and incomplete.
[2] Developing and implementing the contracting-out process prevented figures from being collected for this period.

Payments by the prison service to local education authorities for teaching services in each financial year since 1985–86

Financial year	£000s
1985–86	10,849
1986–87	13,445
1987–88	14,984
1988–89	17,395
1989–90	20,235
1990–91	22,924
1991–92	26,245
1992–93	28,383
1993–94	27,628
1994–95	33,069
1995–96	33,573

Private Employment Agencies

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the private employment agencies used by his Department and its agencies in each of the last three years for which figures are available, indicating (a) the names of the agencies, (b) the numbers employed by the agencies in work for his Department, (c) the total cost to his Department of using employment agencies and the median cost paid to the agency per person recruited and (d) the average length of contract for persons recruited via such agencies. [16177]

Mr. Howard: The information recorded centrally is set out below. Additional information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information given for the agencies has been provided by the Director General of the Prison Service and the chief executives of the Passport Agency, the Forensic Science Agency and the Fire Service College.

Home Office (excluding the Agencies)

(a) The following employment agencies have been used by central personnel units in the last three years:

Alfred Marks
Belle Recruitment
Brook Street
Excel Recruitment
Josephine Sammons
Kelly Services
Manpower
Michael Page Finance
Office Angels
Purcon
Reed Employment

Other agencies may have been used by local managers.

(b) This information is not recorded centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(c) The total cost to central personnel units was approximately £260,000 in 1995 and £592,000 in 1996. Additional costs may have been incurred locally. The median cost paid to the agency per person recruited could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(d) This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The majority of agency staff used are typists and secretaries who are booked on a weekly basis as required to provide cover for staff on sick leave, maternity leave or annual leave.

HM Prison Service

(a) The following employment agencies have been used by the central personnel unit in the last three years:

Account Temps
Adecco Alfred Marks
Badenoch and Clark
Capita
Certes
DBI Associates
Excel
Harrison Willis
Hays Accountancy Personnel
Inline KPG
Insight
Josephine Sammons
Manpower
Reed Employment
R. Page

(b) On 17 February 1997 the following agency staff were working in the Prison Service: 16 personal secretaries, four analysts, two administrative staff, 12 accounts clerks and 19 accountants. The total number of agency staff used in a year is not recorded.

(c) This information is not recorded centrally as costs are met from local budgets.

(d) This information is not recorded centrally as the arrangements in each case are made by local managers.

Passport Agency

(a) The following agencies have been used in the last two years:

Kelly Services
Manpower
Maureen Lynn RA

(b) 1995: two agency staff were used.

1996: four agency staff were used.

(c) The total cost was £2,603.67 in 1995 and £25,865.14 in 1996.

(d) Agency staff have been used for periods between 11 hours and eight months.

Forensic Science Service

(a) The following agencies have been used in the period 1993–94 to 1995–96:

Alfred Marks

Blue Arrow

Brook Street

Ecco

Excel

Harrison Willis

Lab Staff

Purcon

The information available in response to (b), (c) and (d) is as follows:

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96[1]
Average number of agency staff used	6	23	47
Total cost	£66,000	£254,000	£763,000
Average length of stay (in weeks)	31	30	42

[1] The establishment of the National DNA Database required a number of temporary posts at the outset which were subsequently converted to permanent positions.

Fire Service College

(a) The following agencies have been used in the period April 1995 to date:

Apex

Infomatch

Premier (CBR)

(b) This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(c) The total cost in 1995–96 was £33,147 and the total cost to date in 1996–97 has been £60,157. These figures include VAT which is not recoverable as the Fire Service College has exempt status for VAT purposes.

(d) This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Open Prisons (Foreign Prisoners)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if convicted foreign nationals may be held in open prison. [16108]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about whether convicted foreign nationals may be held in open prisons.

Foreign nationals serving a sentence of imprisonment may not be held in open conditions if they are subject to removal from the United Kingdom at the end of the sentence under provisions of the Immigration Act 1971. This may be by reason of a court recommendation for deportation, a notice of intention to deport, a deportation order, a notice of illegal entry or a notice of refusal of leave to enter.

Drug Misuse

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department has initiated to combat drugs misuse in north-west England. [16154]

Mr. Sackville: The Government's strategy for combating drugs misuse is aimed at reducing both the supply of and demand for illegal drugs. In support of this, 105 local drug action teams have been set up across the country; 16 of these are in the north-west. In addition, two Home Office drugs prevention teams, based in Liverpool and Salford, are working with local people and groups to find effective and lasting ways to prevent drugs misuse in the community.

Police and Customs activity in the region has achieved notable successes. A combined operation with Dutch police resulted in the seizure last October of cocaine valued at £75 million as well as considerable quantities of heroin and Ecstasy, and the breaking up of a major international drug trafficking organisation based in the north-west of England.

Prisons (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisons there were in Lancashire in (a) 1996 and (b) 1979; [16152]

(2) how many prisoners there were in Lancashire in (a) 1996 and (b) 1979. [16153]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Nigel Evans, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the number of prisons and prisoners in Lancashire in 1996 compared with 1979.

The Information you requested is as follows:

	1979	1996
Number of prisons	6	8
Number of prisoners	1,786	3,046

Source:
Prison Service Annual Reports 1979 and 1995–96.
The figures for 1979 relate to the calendar year and for 1996 to the financial year 1995–96.
The daily average prison population for these two years was 42,220 and 51,664 respectively.

Crime Prevention (Lancashire)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policies his Department has initiated to help the police combat crime in the north-west of England since 1992. [16151]

Mr. Maclean: Our policies to combat crime, which benefit the north-west of England equally with the rest of the country, are to prevent offences from being committed in the first place, to help the police catch criminals, to ensure that, when caught, suspects are tried fairly and speedily, and to give the courts the powers they need to punish the guilty. This approach has involved major new legislation: substantial changes in the criminal justice system, including the creation of new offences and the revision of penalties; the development of new measures on crime prevention; and the targeting of persistent offenders.

In the north-west, we have increased funding for the police—by £32.29 million in 1996–97 compared with 1995–96; we have provided nearly £2 million under the last two closed circuit television challenge competitions to assist with the installation of 36 schemes; and the single regeneration budget has provided nearly £14.5 million to successful round 1 bids in the area of crime and community safety.

Through partnership initiatives to combat crime and the steadfast work of the police, we have seen recorded crime fall in the north-west by more than 13 per cent. during the past three years for which figures are available.

Prison Medical Service

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the expenditure (a) in cash (b) at current prices and (c) per head of prison population incurred by the prison medical service in each year since 1990 on (a) mental illness research, (b) treatment by prescription medicines for (i) tranquillisers and (ii) anti-depressants and (c) treatment of drug abuses for each year. [15233]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jim Cousins, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about expenditure by the prison medical service each year since 1990 on mental illness research, prescription medicines for tranquillisers and anti-depressants and treatment of drug abuse.

We do not keep full central records on expenditure in the categories you ask, which could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However we estimate that around £400,000 has been spent on research relating to mental disorder in prisoners between 1990 and 1996.

Secure Accommodation (Kirklees)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assist Kirklees metropolitan borough council in meeting the costs of providing secure accommodation for Glenn and John Howells. [16440]

Miss Widdecombe: The cost of accommodating juveniles remanded to local authority accommodation is entirely a matter for the local authority concerned.

Since the conviction and sentence of Glenn and John Howells on 12 February, the cost of their detention in secure local authority accommodation has been met by the Prison Service.

Mr. Oscar Okoye (Death)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the circumstances leading to the death of Mr. Oscar Okoye following his arrest in south London. [16414]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that Mr. Okoye was arrested on Friday 14 June 1996 for failing to give a specimen of breath, being suspected of driving while under the influence of alcohol and suspected assault. Mr. Okoye was seen by the custody officer at Streatham police station and then referred to a forensic medical examiner, who was concerned about the level of alcohol Mr. Okoye had consumed as he was a diabetic. Mr. Okoye was taken to St. George's hospital. He was then transferred to Atkinson Morely hospital, where a scan revealed a frontal haematoma. An operation was carried out on 18 June, which appeared at that stage to be successful. Mr. Okoye remained in hospital and died on 11 November from acute renal failure, diabetes militis and intracerebral haemorrhage.

Stalking

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his proposed timetable for implementing the provisions contained in the Protection from Harassment Bill. [16441]

Mr. Maclean: The exact timetable will depend on the progress of the Bill through Parliament. I expect that there will be a short period between Royal Assent and implementation of the provisions of the Bill in England and Wales to allow for the preparation of the courts, police and other relevant agencies. It is, however, the Government's intention to implement the provisions of this Bill as speedily as possible.

Special Secure Units

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the principal conclusions of the report by Sir Donald Acheson into the effects of the current special secure unit regime on prisoners' health; and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [16350]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the conclusions of the report by Sir Donald Acheson into the effects of the current special secure unit (SSU) regime on prisoners' health.

Sir Donald's report contained the following recommendations:

1. Given the short duration of the present regime it is premature to come to a firm conclusion on its impact on prisoners' health. We therefore advise that the general health of prisoners detained in SSUs be reviewed at regular intervals, taking into account their degree of susceptibility to psychological symptoms.
2. A standard set of procedures applicable to all SSUs should be devised, circulated to all parties and enforced to ensure the most expeditious transfer of prisoners requiring emergency treatment to NHS hospitals.
3. SSUs should be provided with the same level of first aid and emergency aid equipment as other wings in the prison. Personnel trained in using the equipment should be on duty in the SSU at all times.
4. Prisoners should be held in SSUs for as short a period possible.

5. Prisoners should be informed when their cases are coming before the SSU committee and be given the opportunity to submit written representations. When feasible, an indication as to how long prisoners will be required to stay in the SSU system should be given.

6. Sentence planning should be introduced as with other long term prisoners.

7. More opportunities for mental stimulation and physical exercise should be provided, including the provision of meaningful activity.

8. It is the unanimous view of the group that in the interests of health prisoners in the SSUs should have access to open visits with members of their immediate family. We believe that it should be possible for the Prison Service to devise visits which prevent the passage of unauthorised items while at the same time retaining the advantages to the prisoners of physical contact possible only in open visits. Given the logistics involved in conducting secure open visits, it is for the Prison Service to determine their frequency and management.

9. Staff should be encouraged to form relationships with prisoners, yet remain sufficiently detached to maintain objectivity and resist being compromised.

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date a system for three-monthly reviews of the health of individual prisoners in special secure units was introduced; who has been asked to conduct the reviews; how many prisoner shave been examined; and if he will make a statement. [16351]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the health reviews of prisoners in special secure units.

A revised version f the Operating Standards for special secure units was issued on 7 January 1997. The Standards incorporated the amendments made to reflect the recommendations of the Acheson Report, including the requirement for the health of prisoners to be reviewed every three months. The first reviews will take place next month. Reviews will be undertaken by medical officers at each establishment with outside assistance where appropriate.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints about the behaviour of sniffer dogs have been made by visitors to each of the prisons containing special secure units in each of the last four years; how many of these complaints were upheld; and what action was taken as a result. [16352]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of complaints made regarding the behaviour of sniffer dogs, by visitors to prisons containing special secure units.

The Prison Service has received two complaints in the last four years. These complaints were fully investigated and no evidence was found to support them, consequently no further action was taken.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if consultations between prisoners held in special secure units and their legal advisers remain subject to closed visit restrictions. [16353]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the closed visits policy for category A prisoners.

Prison Service policy requires that exceptional risk category A prisoners have closed visits except in exceptional circumstances.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) who made the decision that category A exceptional risk prisoners held in special secure units in 1994 did not have to have movement records in category A books within the discrete area of the special secure unit; and if this decision applied to all prisoners held in the special secure unit; [16545]

(2) what is his Department's definition of the discrete area of a special secure unit; [16546]

(3) if the Whitemoor escape trial prisoners had category A books before their arrival at HM prison Whitemoor; [16547]

(4) where the information, other than movement records, normally held in a category A book, was kept for those involved in the Whitemoor attempted escape; [16548]

(5) if he will place in the Library a sample of a category A book. [16549]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions relating to the decision that category A prisoners held in the special secure unit (SSU) at Whitemoor prison did not need to have their movements within the discrete area of the SSU recorded in category A books.

The governor of Whitemoor prison took the decision not to use category A books in the special secure unit, and this policy was applied to all prisoners in the SSU.

The special secure unit is discrete from the rest of the prison as it is a self-contained building within its own secure perimeter inside the main prison. It contains living and cell accommodation, an exercise area, activity area and a visits facility.

A category A book contains records of a prisoner's movement from one discrete area of the prison to another, signatures of the members of staff responsible for these movements and a photograph of the prisoner to facilitate identification. As these books were not used at Whitemoor this information was not recorded.

Prior to their transfers to Whitemoor prison, three of the Whitemoor escape trial prisoners were subject to category A books. The remaining three were held in special units which did not use such books.

I have arranged for a blank copy of a category A book to be placed in the Library. It is the same book as is used for prisoners on the escape list. I attach for your convenience a photocopy of the cover and of one of the pages (all of which are identical).

Roisin McAliskey (Strip Searches)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times Roisin McAliskey has been strip searched in each week since 20 November 1996. [16355]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of strip searches carried out on Ms Roisin McAliskey in each week since 20 November 1996.

The information you requested is as follows:

Whitemoor Prison (Escape)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how long each of the accused in the Whitemoor escape trial was held in a special secure unit. [16544]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how long each of the accused in the Whitemoor prison escape trial was held in a special secure unit.

The attached table shows how long the six prisoners involved in the attempted escape from the Whitemoor special secure unit have been held in a special secure unit.

Failed Prosecutions (Cleveland)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of Cleveland regarding the role played by his officers in the failure of the cases R v. Charrington and R v. Berriman; and if he will make a statement. [15286]

Mr. Maclean: No. The issues raised by these cases are matters for the relevant chief constables. It would not be appropriate for me to comment or intervene.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what monitoring takes place by his Department of the use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies. [16756]

Mr. Howard: The use of external consultants by non-departmental public bodies is not routinely monitored, since this would be incompatible with the delegated responsibility given to the governing bodies, but their use of consultants will often have been taken into account in the scrutiny of their annual budgets and business plans.

Prisons (Education and Work Opportunities)

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions the Minister responsible for prisons has had with (a) trade unions, (b) boards of visitors and (c) prison managers about education and work opportunities in prisons. [15304]

Miss Widdecombe: I have met trade union representatives and representatives of boards of visitors on a number of occasions. I have also had opportunities to discuss a range of issues including education and work opportunities with them during the 119 visits I have so far made to prison establishments. I meet prison managers frequently. I have made clear my support for the director general's guidance to governors that work and education are important elements of the prison regime.

Anti-terrorist Legislation

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Lord Lloyd of Berwick's recommendations in the report of his inquiry into legislation against terrorism. [17353]

Mr. Howard: Lord Lloyd has produced a thoughtful and comprehensive set of recommendations for new permanent counter-terrorism legislation covering the whole of the United Kingdom in the event of a lasting peace being established in Northern Ireland. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and I are very grateful for this work, but in the continuing absence of a lasting peace we believe that it is too early to reach a firm view on possible fundamental legislative change. We hope that there will soon be a permanent cessation of violence which would enable us to look again at the possibility of providing a new legislative framework for combating terrorism.

The Government do, however, intend to bring forward in due course proposals to strengthen existing controls on terrorist finances, along the lines of Lord Lloyd's very helpful analysis. These proposals will include extending existing controls more widely to international terrorism.

Prison Service Funding

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much extra funding was made available, or expenditure incurred, in respect of implementing the recommendations for the Prison Service of (a) the Woodcock report and (b) the Learmont report, so far as separately identifiable for (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96 and (iii) 1996–97. [15511]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 17 February 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Sir Ivan Lawrence, dated 20 February 1997:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how much extra funding was made available, or expenditure incurred, in respect of implementing the recommendations for the Prison Service of (a) the Woodcock Report and (b) the Learmont Report, so far as separately identifiable, for (i) 1994–95 (ii) 1995–96 and (iii) 1996–97.

The funding for 1996/97, the first year after the publication of the Learmont Report, includes money for both Woodcock and Learmont recommendations. It is not practical to separate spending on Woodcock and Learmont, as many of the measures funded by the 1996/97 provision implemented recommendations made in both reports. The figures are as follows:

£ million	1994–95 Outturn	1995–96 Outturn	1996–97 Provision
Current	0	[1]14.5	40.6
Capital	[2]3.3	[2]36.6	[2]39.2

[1] Estimated outturn: Our accounting system does not separately identify current expenditure on Woodcock.
[2] Does not include fees for design work etc.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 290

SESSION 1996–97

10th February—20th February 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
